THE KING OF CANADA PROCLAIMED AT OTTAWA

The Governor-General Announces to the Canadian People That The Prince Has Come to The Throne of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, and is Emperor of India.

"To all to whom these presents shall come. Greeting: Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to call to His mercy our late Sovereign Lord, the King, Edward VII. of blessed and glorious memory, by whose decease the Imperial Crown of Great Britain and Ireland, and all other his late Majesty's dominions beyond the seas is solely, rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince, George, Prince of Wales, I, the said Albert Henry George, Earl Grey, Baron Howick, etc., Governor-General of Canada, assisted by his Majesty's Privy Council for Canada, and with their hearty and zealous concurrence, do, therefore, hereby publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince George, Prince of Wales, is now by the death of our late Sovereign, of happy and glorious memory, become our only lawful and rightful liege Lord, George, by the grace of God, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the British dominions beyond the seas, defender of the faith, Emperor of India, to whom are due all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, and I do hereby require and command all persons whomsoever to yield obedience and govern themselves accordingly—beseeching God by whom all kings and queens do reign to bless the Royal Prince George V. with long and happy years to reign over us. Given under my hand and seal at Arms at Ottawa this 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and ten, and in the first year of his Majesty's reign."

KING GEORGE THE FIFTH PROCLAIMED AT ST. JAMES'

(Special to the Review)

London, May 7.—At four o'clock this afternoon the new King was formally proclaimed at St. James' Palace as George the Fifth. Just before this the Privy Council met and declared King Edward dead.

The new King and Queen, in deep mourning, passed through the streets while tens of thousands saluted them silently.

All London is transformed, and nearly everyone wears emblems of mourning. All theatres, stores, exchanges and law courts are closed, and sporting events are called off.

No arrangements have been made for the funeral, as the death came so suddenly that bewilderment prevails at the palace.

Queen Alexandra is bearing up well.

VISITED PETERBOROUGH ON HIS CANADIAN TOUR

On Friday, September 12, 1860, the late King Edward, then Prince of Wales, visited Peterborough while on his Canadian tour. He was accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle and several members of the Court. The Prince reached Peterborough over the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway, then running, and crossed Rice Lake on a small steamer, the bridge being considered unsafe for the royal party.

The town was very handsomely decorated, the many arches erected being particularly fine. The committee of reception erected three arches, one on Hunter street, opposite the store of R. D. Rogers; another opposite St. John's church, and one at the corner of Brock and George streets. The "Lumberman's Arch," decorations, made a fourth, on George street, near Charlotte street. It was built of sawn lumber piled so as to form an arch with three openings. All the openings were covered with evergreens and decorated with flags and suitable mottoes.

A pavilion was erected at the court house, handsomely designed and decorated, and in honor of the visit it was suggested that the park be named "Prince of Wales Park." The streets along the line of march were all profusely decorated by private enterprise. The Review, in its issue of September 12th, gives a very full description of the whole affair.

Crowds thronged the streets. It was estimated that almost the entire the most characteristic of all the

DIED A LITTLE BEFORE MIDNIGHT

London, May 7.—King Edward VII., who returned to England from a vacation ten days ago in the best of health, died at 11.45 o'clock last night (Friday), in the presence of his family, after an illness of less than a week, which was serious hardly more than three days.

The Prince of Wales succeeded to the crown immediately, according to the laws of the kingdom, without official ceremony. His first official act was to despatch to the Lord Mayor the announcement of his father's death, in pursuance of custom. His telegram read:

"I am deeply grieved to inform you that my beloved father, the King, passed away peacefully at 11.45 to-night.
GEORGE."

NOTE.—The fact that the news of the King's death reached Canada early in the evening is due to the difference between British time and Canadian time.

KING EDWARD VII.

HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE V.

The new King, George Frederick Ernest Albert, was born at Marlborough House on June 3, 1865. He entered the navy as a cadet with his brother, the Duke of Clarence, who was seventeen months older, on June 5, 1877, and spent two years on the Brittania, the school-ship at Dartmouth. In 1879 the two Princes joined the Bacchante, under the command of the Earl of Clanwilliam, and in their cruise to the West Indies and subsequently they underwent practically the same hardships as those borne by the other cadets, being relieved only from the middle watch. The ship anchored in the Barbodos for Christmas, 1879, and the Prince spent the day ashore, receiving a cordial welcome from the islanders. At Bermuda they laid the foundation stone for a Sailors' Home.

The Bacchante being later attached to the Channel fleet, Prince George was in January, 1880, promoted to be midshipman. He crossed the equator, visited the Canaries, the Falklands, Simon's Bay, Montevideo, and Australia; where he remained several months. Then he went to China, and returning to the Mediterranean by Singapore and the Suez Canal, completed his tour by a trip through Palestine. He spent six months with his brother in Lausanne, Switzerland.

In 1884 Prince George was made a sub-Lieutenant, and joined H.M.S. Canada on the North American station. The following year, in October, he became a full Lieutenant. He was attached successively to various ships, and served with the Dreadnought and the Alexandra, flagship of the Mediterranean squadron, of which his uncle, the Duke of Edinburgh, was commander-in-chief.

In 1889 he received his first command, that of torpedo boat No. 79, during the naval manoeuvres. While in charge of this vessel he rendered valuable assistance to another vessel which was in distress. On May 6, 1890, he was placed in charge of the first-class gunboat Thrush, and in it he spent a year on the North American station, visiting Canada and the West Indies. In 1890 he was designated by Queen Victoria to open the Industrial Exhibition in Jamaica, W. I. In 1891, on his return to England, he was promoted to the post of Commander. His latest command was H. M.S. Crescent, in which during 1898 he visited many of the seaport towns of England and Ireland. He was made Captain in 1893, Rear-Admiral in 1901, Vice-Admiral in 1903, and Admiral in 1907. He was gazetted a General in the army in 1902.

He was created Duke of York, Earl of Inverness and Baron Killarney in 1892. The death of the Duke of Clarence from pneumonia in that year left heir-apparent to the Throne. He had himself barely recovered from an attack of typhoid, which nearly cost him his life. In July, 1895, he presided at the sixth International Geographical Congress, held at the Imperial Institute. In 1899 he succeeded the Duke of Argyll as President of the Royal Humane Society.

His marriage to Princess May of Teck, the fiancee of his deceased brother, the Duke of Clarence, took place on the 6th of July, 1893, in the Chapel Royal, St. James, the brilliant ceremony being attended by all the members of the Royal family, the Emperor of Russia (who was then Czarowitz), and the King and Queen of Denmark.

As a result of that union five sons and one daughter have been born; Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, born June 23rd, 1894, the present heir-presumptive to the throne, known as Prince David; Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George, born December 14th, 1895; Prince Henry William Frederick Albert, born March 31st, 1900; Prince George Edward Alexander Edmund, born December 20th, 1902; and Prince John Charles Francis, born July 12th, 1905; and Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, born April 25th, 1897.

Of many university degrees his Majesty has been made the recipient. The principal ones conferred upon him are those of hon. LL.D. from Cambridge in 1894, from the Welsh University in 1902, from London University in 1903, and from Glasgow in 1907; hon. D. C. L. from Oxford in 1897, and Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, McGill, Laval and Toronto Universities, and Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., in 1901. He was made Hon. Mus. D. by the University of Wales in 1902 and by London University in 1903. He became a Bencher of Lincoln's Inn in 1892, and Treasurer in 1902. In 1901 he was installed Chancellor of the Cape University, and of the Welsh University the next year.

He was a Personal Naval Aide-de-Camp to her Majesty Queen Victoria, and was Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports and Constable of Dover Castle in 1905-07. He was appointed Personal Naval Aide-de-Camp to his Majesty King Edward VII. in 1901.

In 1901 an act of Parliament granted him an annuity of £20,000 in addition to the £60,000 revenue received from the Duchy of Cornwall.

In 1897 the Prince and Princess made a journey to Ireland, where they were very cordially received. Their memorable visit to the British colonies in the four corners of the earth, as Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, was begun in the steamship Ophir in March, 1901. The itinerary was through the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal to India, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, St. Vincent, W. I., thence to Nova Scotia, and through Canada to the Pacific Ocean and back, arriving in England on the 1st of November, 1901. The Royal couple received an enthusiastic reception home. About a month later, on the occasion of his reception at the Guildhall dinner by the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen and the County Council, his speech, which Lord Rosebery referred to as "a statesmanlike address," a term which all the London press accepted as worthily describing it, put him before the astonished and admiring eyes of the world as a statesman, and lifted him to a high place in the respect of the British people.

COAL RESULTS

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact, and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

A KING WHO DID HIS DUTY

King Edward was not a young man when he came to the throne, and his reign has been short, but he had performed many important functions for a number of years before Queen Victoria's death and had obtained a reputation for sagacity, tact and diplomacy that any politician might have been proud of. It was frequently said when he was Prince of Wales that he was the best informed man in Europe. He became King by right of inheritance, but if his succession to the throne had depended upon the popular vote there is no doubt whatever that he would have been elected by an overwhelming majority for the people both loved and admired him. As King, he more than fulfilled the expectations of the people. He is reported to have said shortly before he died: "I think I have done my duty," and history will record that from the moment he became King until the day of his death his whole aim was to rightly perform the duties of his high office.

Although under the British constitution the King has no arbitrary power, King Edward's influence was very great, owing to his wide knowledge, his good judgment and remarkable tact. This influence was especially valuable in preserving good relations with foreign powers. It is well known that he made many wise suggestions to his ministers which facilitated friendly understandings. All the monarchs of Europe are related; King Edward was regarded as the head of the family and his opinions carried great weight. He recognized the importance of establishing cordial relations with France, and in view of the fact that a large proportion of the Canadian people are of French descent this was of the utmost consequence to Canada. With friendly relations ensured between Britain and France there is no reason why the French-Canadians should not join heartily with other Canadians in supporting Canadian participation in the naval and military defence of the Empire.

Perhaps the most remarkable tributes to the greatness of King Edward have come from the American press. Almost without exception the newspapers of the great Republic have recognized the sagacity, tact and breadth of King Edward, and his great influence for good in international matters.

It is noteworthy that King Edward's keen interest in the overseas Dominions was shown by the fact that in spite of his severe illness he gave audience the day before his death to Sir John Dickson-Poynder, just appointed governor of New Zealand, and accepted from the hands of the agent-general for Queensland a gold-mounted cut glass ink-stand, made entirely of Queensland materials.

SAY SOMETHING ABOUT PUGSLEY

The Toronto Globe has given its opinion of the conduct of Hon. Mr. Aylesworth in recommending the pardon of King and Skill, convicted of circulating indecent literature. We now call upon Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of the Globe, to examine into the record of Hon. Mr. Pugsley as carefully and as impartially as he has examined the indecent books endorsed by the Minister of Justice, and say whether the Minister of Public Works should not be forced to retire to private life. The editor of the Globe was not content to accept the statement of the Minister of Justice. He examined the court records and looked through the bad books. He should be equally thorough in looking into the whole political record of Hon. Mr. Pugsley. Let the editor of the Globe first go back to the time when Mr. Pugsley was a member of the New Brunswick Government, and consider all the details of his railway deals. Let him investigate Mr. Pugsley's relations with Mr. McAvity, of St. John, N.B., a Liberal, who got thirty thousand dollars for his influence with the Dominion Government. Then turn the search light of truth and honesty upon his methods of conducting public business since he became Minister of Public Works. Examine closely his dredging contracts. Get at the real facts of his purchase of a seven-hundred-dollar sawdust wharf for five thousand dollars. Ask him to explain why he was so anxious to give American capitalists control of the St. Lawrence water power, and finally tell the people of Canada what the Globe thinks of his electric light contract with the Imperial Realty Company of Ottawa.

THINK THEY OWN THE COUNTRY

Mr. Robert L. Borden has correctly diagnosed the condition of the Government at Ottawa. In a letter to the Toronto News he says:—

"The Government have apparently become possessed with the idea that the revenues and resources of the country belong to them and not to the people of Canada. Such hallucinations frequently impose themselves upon Governments which have been in power for a long time."

Having got the idea in their heads that the revenues and resources of the country belong to the party in power these Ottawa Liberal politicians are very generous in dividing the spoils among those who can be depended upon to make contributions to part funds. If they directly stole the money from the Treasury to give to their friends, they could be sent to Penitentiary, but they have other ways of doing it. One way is to dispose of agricultural lands, timber areas and coal deposits to political favorites, at a mere fraction of their value. Another way is to buy land from political friends paying many times its value for it. The other day it was discovered, as already shown in The Review, that the Government was not only paying an enormous rental for buildings used by the Public Works Department at Ottawa, but that it was also paying considerably more than twice as much for electric light as it was necessary to pay. Instead of getting the light at ordinary rates from the electric light company or from the City of Ottawa, it was got through middlemen at a most exorbitant rate. This is mentioned, not because it is an exceptional case, but simply because it is the latest example of the Laurier Government's method of doing business. In buying supplies for the various Departments extravagant prices are usually paid and the favored one soon gets a hint that a contribution to the party campaign fund would be acceptable.

The Review has clearly explained the method of handing out the people's money to contractors on the Government section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway by allowing contractors to classify ordinary earth as solid rock.

ENFORCING THE LIQUOR LAWS

Turner & Company, wholesale liquor dealers, of 106 Front street, Toronto, were fined forty dollars and costs by Magistrate Denison for selling liquor or delivering liquor for the purpose of having it sold in a district where the sale of liquor is prohibited. The liquor was shipped to T. G. Fitzgerald, Cochrane, but was seized by a Provincial license inspector before it was delivered to the consignee.

Hon. J. W. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, being interviewed regarding the case, said:

"The Government has adopted a decided policy. In seizing liquor in transit the officers of the department and the Provincial police have very special instructions not to be content with seizing the supplies in transit and arresting the men in charge, but to follow back and trace the liquor to the source of supply. Whenever we find a wholesaler, a shop licensee, the holder of a warehouse license, or a brewer playing the game with the blind pigs we intend to make it our very particular business to see that the parties—whoever they may be, wholesalers or retailers—shall not have a license after the first of May following. If the license-holders do not aid the department by strictly observing the spirit of the act, they identify themselves at once with the illicit trade we are trying to wipe out. I have nothing to say as to whether Turner & Co. come within that class, but the facts before the department give rise to very strong suspicion. We propose," said the Minister, in conclusion, "to spare no pains to get back to where the shipments come from. If they come from outside the Province, from houses that have agents inside the Province, we will deal with the licenses held by the agents. All this means that those in the trade must conduct themselves in accord with the act or get out of the business."

If a fine were the only punishment wholesale liquor dealers could afford to take risks in shipping liquor to districts where prohibition is in force, but the determination of the Provincial Secretary to take away the licenses of wholesale liquor sellers who violate the law, will have a great effect in restraining them.

The policy of following the liquor to its source is most commendable. It is evidently the aim of the Whitney Government to enforce the law throughout the Province. In license districts the license law must be enforced; in prohibition districts the prohibitory law must be carried out.

This is a sound policy to which no good citizen can object whether he believes in prohibition law or license law.

KEENE SOCIETY ANNUAL MEETING

Keene, May 6.—The annual meeting of the Keene Village Improvement Society was held in the council chamber, Keene, on Tuesday, May 3rd, at 7.30 p.m. The president, Mr. James McNeil, occupied the chair.

The minutes of the last annual meeting and of the meeting of the Executive Committee, held on September 25th, were read by the secretary, and on motion of Jno. Lang, seconded by Wm. Drummond, the minutes, as read, were adopted. The treasurer presented the financial statement for the year, showing total receipts of $328.21 and total disbursements of $322.35, leaving a balance on hand of $5.86. On motion of Dr. McWilliams, seconded by J. C. Read, the report was received and adopted.

Moved by S. Smithson, seconded by Wm. Drummond, that James McNeil and Andrew Shearer be reappointed president and secretary respectively.—Carried.

On motion of J. J. Moore, seconded by Dr. McWilliams, the Executive Committee were appointed as follows: Wm. Campbell, Dr. W. T. Harrison, James Henderson, Wm. Drummond, J. C. Read, Wm. Moore and John Lang.

Moved by Wm. Drummond, seconded by J. C. Read, that F. A. Eason, Theodore Maycock, J. R. McIntyre and S. A. Smithson be appointed an Entertainment Committee.

On motion of Wm. Drummond, seconded by John Lang, a vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring Entertainment Committee, and to the Arbor Day Committee for their zeal and success on behalf of the association.

The Executive Committee reported, explaining the work of the past year, and asking for suggestions from the meeting with regard to needed improvements for the coming year. The committee was requested by the meeting to drain High street with 12-inch tile, from Wedlock's corners north as far as possible this season.

Moved by John Lang, seconded by J. J. Moore that James Henderson and Wm. Drummond be a committee to superintend the clearing of the streets on Arbor Day, Friday, May 6th, work to commence at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Dodd's Kidney Pill Cured Mr. M. Williams' Rheumatism

He Took the Terrible Disease in Time and a Single Box Made Him a Well Man.

South Ingonish, Cape Breton, May 6.—(Special)—How easily and quickly Dodd's Kidney Pills banish Rheumatism and other symptoms of Kidney Disease is well known in the case of Michael O. Williams, a fisherman living in this place.

"My kidney disease started from a strain," Mr. Williams says, "and I suffered from it for about three months. I had backache, stiffness in the joints and Rheumatism. When I got up in the morning I had a bad taste in my mouth; I perspired freely with the least exertion, and I was always tired and nervous.

"One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me and I believe they will cure others who are suffering from Kidney Disease."

If you have any two of the symptoms mentioned by Mr. Williams you may be sure of two things. One is that your kidneys are sick, and the other that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure you.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved in thousands of cases all over Canada that they never fail to cure Kidney Disease of any kind or stage.

THE truth has been spoken by us regarding the great pianist, Ferruccio Busoni and the world-famous singer, Dr. Wullner. According to the critics, both stand highest in their class and both rely on the celebrated in the attainment of their highest artistic achievements.

AGAIN the truth is told when we claim that among medium-priced pianos, none equals in sweetness of tone, responsiveness of action, or beauty of design.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"He is a very real person, indeed; rather substantial, in fact; what you people call 'well fixed,' you know; has enough to worry through on without working. He's all the things you guessed—a book agent, a hero, a Monte Cristo—with a few more thrown in."

"Oh!" she said, gazing at him with bright eyes.

The next instant the springhouse door was again clear. She was gone. But he stood still and waited. Maybe she would come back a second time. And anyway he was too spellbound with astonishment to move.

But she did not return, and he sat down on the stone steps of the well to think it out.

In spite of her simplicity, how superior she seemed to the rest of the family! None of the rest of them would have cared enough about reading the papers to have risked old Morningstar's anger. There was something even in her speech that arrested his attention. "Of whom the newspapers make frequent mention." Of whom. So very grammatical. No one else in the family would have said "of whom." And her reference to Monte Cristo! Rather surprising. To know about Monte Cristo and never to have heard of Andrew Carnegie—what an anomaly!

Another thing. She had looked scared half to death upon his discovering her with the forbidden newspaper, but when the petty tyrant of the household, before whom his own son and daughter cringed, appeared on the scene she had met his approach with cool indifference. Her evident bashfulness would not explain her extreme agitation with himself.

When, a little later, he rose to go to the house he had come to no conclusion about her at all.

CHAPTER IV.

MOST people considered Georgiana Ellery a very beautiful girl. She was of a tall regal type, her stateliness of bearing and austerity of thought rather at odds with the soft womanliness of her countenance and the mellow sweetness of her voice. In spite of the seriousness with which she took herself and her "views," a seriousness which the light minded found a little wearing, her forceful personality held a charm which, with her beauty, gave her a very marked distinction.

Just now her benevolent glance moved about the table to take stock, as it were, of material. These seemingly commonplace Morningstars, she felt sure, could be reached through contact with the high thinking which it was her unrelaxing aim to express. They already possessed that plain living which she had been taught to recognize, in theory at least, as a necessary concomitant to the former.

There was, first of all, the young man who sat opposite her, the farm hand. He certainly looked capable (in spite of his rough overalls and his name, which was Pete) of higher things. He had rather refined features. And his face was not unintelligent. His brow really suggested the possibility of "thought power"—if haply she might awaken it.

The other men at the table, the insignificant little farmer, with his keen, mouselike face, and his stalwart son Abe, who assisted his father on the farm, were perhaps a bit farther removed from the sphere of her influence. But in the freshness of her enthusiasm she was ready to try even upon them.

As for the women, there were possibilities, no doubt, in Mrs. Morningstar and decidedly so in that really pretty girl, Eunice. The only one of them all who appeared to her rather hopelessly unreceptive was Ollie, the buxom, heavy faced daughter of the house, whose dark, sullen countenance would have dampened an ardor even warmer than that of Miss Ellery.

Seated beside Georgiana was her cousin, Daisy Parks, whose fluffy, puffy prettiness and irresponsible air of frivolity were, to tell the truth, a bit refreshing as over against Miss Ellery's oppressive superiority.

"Now," said Mr. Morningstar as, after a long silent grace, he jerked his chair closer to the table and fell to, "just yous act yourselfs natural and take what yous see."

He reached to the middle of the table and picked up a heavy platter of fried ham to help himself, unmindful of his guests. "We all do our own servin' in the country. To be sure, if there's children we help them. But me, I always say if it's on the table I kin git it all right!"

He laughed, with his mouth full of meat, and proceeded to stretch across the table for everything he wanted.

"Yes," Mrs. Morningstar added in her loud, boisterous tones, as she, too, reached for what she wanted, "out here when folks goes on comp'ny they must used theirselfs to do their own stretchin' and not expec' to be waited on."

"How quaint!" exclaimed Miss Daisy Parks. She promptly reached far across the board for a slice of bread. "'If you want that you must climb!'" she quoted.

"Please, Daisy!" entreated Georgiana, "don't be slangy! You promised me."

Daisy pressed her hand to her heart. "Stung again! How can I be so forgetful when I know how it bumps you, Georgie!" she said with mock remorsefulness.

"I hope," Mrs. Morningstar cried as she saw that, in spite of her urging, the boarders did not help themselves with the businesslike alacrity to be looked for in those who were paying for their food, "that yous'll like my wittles. If I do say it myself, I kin cook when I know folks is comin'. To be sure, sometimes they come unexpected. Yes, just so sure as I say to pop or the girls, 'Now we'll warm up these here stumps that's left and eat 'em up oncet'—then beware! Strangers is sure to come unexpected. Ain't, Ollie?"

Ollie colored with embarrassment at being appealed to and murmured an answer under her breath.

"Our creature comforts are of such minor importance," spoke Georgiana's musical voice as she lifted her handsome dark head and smiled from her high plane upon the Morningstars in a sort of benediction. "Material things absorb most of us too much—don't you think so?—leaving us too little time for the things that are really worth while in life."

Georgiana observed that the farm hand, Pete, looked impressed as she spoke as though a ray of light had penetrated his darkened mind. The rest of the family appeared unresponsive—unless perhaps that girl Eunice manifested some slight signs of receptivity—Georgiana could not be sure.

As for Miss Parks, she always hung upon Georgiana's words as though unwilling to miss one pearl which dropped from the lips of her oracular cousin, her admiration being commensurate with her inability to grasp Georgiana's deep meanings.

Mrs. Morningstar, however, disappointedly betrayed her obtuseness to truth by responding with an apology for her appearance. "I most always put another frock on till the afternoon a'ready, and so does Ollie still (Eunice she ain't got the time to), but we didn't get 'em on yet till yous got here, so you see us lookin' some hard."

"It is yourself we wish to see, not your clothes, Mrs. Morningstar," Georgiana said encouragingly. "Externals are lost sight of when once one gets below the surface to the real person."

Mrs. Morningstar blushed and looked shocked, while her son Abe at her side colored all over his fat, sunburned neck.

"To be sure," the farmer's wife replied dubiously, "I wouldn't think much of that practice—lettin' folks see you undressed."

Georgiana, whose eyes were upon Pete, noticed that he smiled. She sank back in her chair, a shade of disappointment in her face. But she would not despair. The potential good in every human soul must eventually awaken to the right touch.

"Eunice," sharply ordered Mrs. Morningstar, her tone in addressing her foster child noticeably unlike that in which she spoke to any one else, "don't you see the fried smashed potatoes is all? Why don't you mind yourself and fill the dish up oncet?"

The girl, without any response and with no change in the pensiveness of her countenance, rose to do as she was bid. The delicacy and refinement of her face made one expect to see her embarrassed by such rude harshness in the presence of strangers. But she did not appear to be even conscious of it.

"Doc," Mrs. Morningstar addressed Pete as the girl brought back the potato dish from the stove, "don't you want some more smashed potatoes?"

Miss Parks paused in her dainty sipping of her milk (the Morningstar coffee and tea being impossible) and looked interested.

"Are you a doctor?" she inquired wonderingly as Peter without replying to the landlady helped himself to potatoes.

There was an instant's silence, no one offering a reply at once.

"Och," said Mrs. Morningstar abruptly, with a confusion unaccountable to the two young ladies, "that's just a title he goes by around here still."

"Why?" pursued Miss Parks with frank curiosity.

"I don't know fur why," she said hastily. "Won't yous have some coffee? This here coffee cost 14 cents a pound, so I think it might mebbe taste some like that there coffee we got a cup of the time we was to Phil-delph-y and took a piece at Wanamaker's place. But that there coffee was, now, wonderful good tasted! The best I ever seen. And mind to what it cost yet! Ten cents a cup! I thought I'd drop when the colored gent'man sayed to pop we owed a quarter apiece—me and pop—fur just four little buckwheat cakes and a cup of coffee apiece! It spited me so I couldn't take no more enjoyment out of nothin' all the rest of the day. That give me all I wanted of goin' to a big city! That—and a awful scenery we seen in Broad street station—the form of two women comin' towards us—drunk! You mind of it, pop? I'd never witnessed such a scenery before as a woman drunk! That there was my first and my last trip to Phil-delph-y. A trip to Meckville's good enough fur me after that. And such a hurryin' and a crowdin' as there is still in a big city! It seems as the folks there never thinks of the hereafter the way they hurry along the street. Will yous have some coffee?"

The fourteen cent coffee was declined, evidently to the surprise of the rest of the family.

"Our cookin'," continued Mrs. Morningstar boastfully, "ain't done by no hired girl. When we used to be at hotellin', nineteen years back, a travelin' man ast me oncet, 'Where's your cook?' 'Me and Lizzie's her,' I sayed. (Lizzie was my sister, deceased this while back a'ready.) 'Us we do our own cookin', I tole him. Well, I guess, anyhow!"

"Yous ain't like some," spoke up Mr. Morningstar, his tone expressing his gratification at the dainty appetites of his boarders as they both declined more potatoes. "Some wants to eat their money's worth anyhow if they're hungry or if they ain't. Now, there's me," he said jocularly, "I believe I'd eat three meals at oncet (when one would do me) if I could get 'em fur nothin'. When I was a young man I went out west fur awhile. I often had heard so much about this west so I thought now I'd go see it fur myself oncet. Well, I stayed two years, and when I come back the first meal I took was in such a caf-fee in Phil-delph-y with a man where was goin' to buy some cattle off of me, and I sayed now I'd take oysters, oncet I had the chanct, because you couldn't git 'em in the west, so first I ordered fried (him he eat a beefsteak). Well, I eat them six fried, and then I ordered a stew. Them I eat, too, and so I says now I take 'em raw. The hotel waiter he says to me, 'You don't live in Phil-delph-y, do you?' 'No,' I says, 'I lived in the west this while back, and I can't git oysters out there.' 'Yes,' the waiter he says, 'I thought so.' Well, when I was only half through my dozent raw ones I didn't feel fur eatin' no more, but I paid fur 'em, so I hated to let 'em. I coaxed this here man where [who] was with me to eat 'em. 'No, I'm full,' he says. 'If you can't eat 'em, let 'em.' 'I don't want to see 'em wasted,' I says. 'Now, me, I ain't like you,' he says. 'If I ordered a steak and had enough when half was eat I'd let the other half, whether I'd paid fur it or not.' But I just couldn't stand it to let them oysters and go off. 'Git your fork here,' I says to the feller. 'Help me to eat 'em.' 'No,' he says. 'You can't git 'em in the west—eat!' So I eat two more. But still there was a many on the dish. 'Now I quit!' I says and throwed down my fork. 'I can't make it!' So," he concluded with reminiscent regret, "them seven raw ones I had to let."

"I'll make a note of that," said Daisy.

The effect of this recital upon Miss Ellery was to sadden her. Her Cousin Daisy, as her satellite, tried to copy her expression, but with indifferent success.

"Mister he always could eat harty," said Mrs. Morningstar. "Me, I'm different to what he is. Mornings and evenings I can hardly eat ever. Dinner I eat pretty good. But here this winter Mister he had his pest—three carbuncles and near fifty boils. Then he couldn't eat neither."

Georgiana tried to divert the talk to another plane. "Do you know one thing that led me to wish to summer here when I saw your advertisement in the paper was your name—Morningstar—so full of suggestion. I have always thought names so significant. I thought," she said, smiling sweetly, "that I should be happy in a country home with people bearing a name so full of poetic meaning, so suggestive of the spiritual healthfulness of rural life."

Mrs. Morningstar looked bewildered. "So?" she said vaguely. "Well, if only more thought like you we'd make more at keepin' summer boarders. We could accommodate a many more. We kin lay eight and set ten."

Georgiana appeared disconcerted, but she made another brave effort to turn the tide of the talk into a higher channel.

"I was led to come to you because I am unfortunately rather run down from the last crowded months of the college year, and I felt that really to regain my poise I must get near to nature and that the best way to do that would be actually to go and live with the people of the soil and really become one of them."

"And live the simple life," put in Daisy. "I think one could do it here, Georgiana, without the strain that it is in town. Out here," she added hopefully, "it won't require my co-operation. I'll have to live it."

"Not if there is inward rebellion," instructed Georgiana gently. "Remember, dear, the simple life is subjective as well as objective."

Daisy accepted it with a sigh. "I'll make a note of that," she said, gathering up the blank book and pencil she wore suspended from her belt. She met the wondering looks of the Morningstars as she leafed her notebook. "Yes," she nodded, volunteering an explanation, "I write down things which impress me. My uncle thinks keeping a notebook may give me mental pause"—

"Poise," corrected Georgiana, blushing for her cousin.

"Poise," nodded Daisy; she always accepted Georgiana's corrections without question. "To collect facts—facts with no deviation from accuracy."

"It will be excellent mental discipline for you, Daisy," said Georgiana kindly.

"My only doubt is," said Daisy anxiously, "that it isn't consistent with the simple life—keeping a notebook to improve your mind. Because you know it certainly isn't 'reposeful'—keeping a notebook. Now, on the bare face of it, without any philosophy, my motto for a simple life would be, 'Let things slide.' I could live up to that," she said with conviction.

Mrs. Morningstar laughed. "Yous fetch out such big words still! Just like Doc—Pete, I mean," she quickly corrected herself. "Pete, he's always spittin' them big words out too. A body'd think it would go to your brains; ain't?"

"Pete has had some schooling?" she inquired.

At this question Georgiana was puzzled to observe that Eunice, who sat on the opposite side of the table from Pete, gave a slight start, raised her constantly downcast eyes and looked at the farmhand with a faint smile. Though his own gaze had been resting persistently, almost embarrassingly, with a bucolic, stupid stare upon herself, Georgiana saw that he met Eunice's glance with a sudden look of interest which seemed to change his whole countenance.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—

THE FAMOUS FRUIT MEDICINE

Performs Another Miraculous Cure in the City of Toronto.

Mrs. Lizzie Baxter was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism. She suffered tortures for a year in spite of the best medical treatment. Five boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured her.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year, and my right arm was swollen and the pain was fearful. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could hardly move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians but their medicine did me no good, and I tried numerous other remedies but received no benefit. I was simply a helpless cripple and suffered from Rheumatism all during last winter.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in the "Telegram" and decided to try this remedy. After I had taken one box, I was much better and the pain much less, and I continued the treatment with good hopes. When I had taken three boxes, I was so well that I could use my arm again and the pain was practically gone, and after I had taken five boxes, I was entirely well again—no pain—no suffering—and now I am just as well as I ever was.

The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me of my suffering.

For the sake of others who may suffer from this terrible disease, Rheumatism, I voluntarily give you permission to publish this statement."

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER

It may be stated, without hesitation, that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy that will actually cure Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. "Fruit-a-tives" is made from fruit juices, and contains SALICINE obtained from Oranges. Owing to its marvellous action on the bowels, kidneys and skin—"Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism. And with the stomach clean, the liver active, the bowels regular, the kidneys strong and the skin healthy, it is utterly impossible to have Rheumatism. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that acts directly on all these organs and cures them. There is no other remedy "just the same" as "Fruit-a-tives" or "just as good as Fruit-a-tives" Insist on having "Fruit-a-tives" for only by taking "Fruit-a-tives" can you cure yourself of Rheumatism. At all dealers, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa. The original of Mrs. Baxter's letter—as well as the original of all other testimonials published by "Fruit-a-tives" may be seen at the office of Fruit-a-tives Limited, 386-390 Bank St., Ottawa, Ontario.

BABY CRIED CONTINUALLY

Mrs. Eugene Gagnon, L'islet Station, Que., says:—"I believe Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine in the world for little ones. I have given them to my baby for colic, constipation and sometimes for breaking up a fever, and I have never known them to fail in giving prompt relief. Before I began the use of the Tablets my baby was very thin and cried continually. Since then she has grown splendidly and is plump and healthy. I also gave the Tablets to my four years old child who suffered frequently from convulsions, and they made a permanent cure. When I have Baby's Own Tablets in the house I feel safe, and I advise other mothers also to keep them on hand." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Fairplay" Protests

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a few lines in your paper to protest against the unfairness of those opposing Ald. Turner's dog by-law. In reading over the names recorded in last night's paper of those opposed to it, I noticed the names of people living outside the corporation (a father and son) and the nin the city three members from one family, the mother and two sons, husband and wife, and other names which appeared early in the week were recorded again last night.

I claim, Mr. Editor, that last night's majority against the by-law was obtained by unfair means.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

BAILLIE INQUEST WAS ADJOURNED TO NEXT FRIDAY

Mrs. Baillie, the Mother of the Dead Boy, the Only Witness Called at Last Night's Session at the County Council Chamber.

The inquest held Tuesday afternoon in the township of Smith, on the little boy James A. Baillie, was resumed last night in the County Council chamber, Coroner Dr. Grey presiding.

County Crown Attorney Wood was present. Mr. A. P. Poussette appeared for Mr. R. Todd.

The first witness called, or rather re-called, as she gave evidence at the first meeting of the inquest, was Mrs. James Baillie, mother of the deceased. Mrs. Baillie said that on last Monday when the boy got worse she sent for Mr. Todd, the Christian Scientist. Mr. Todd suggested sending for a physician. Coroner Gray asked, "Did you know that if the boy died without a physician in attendance, but under Christian Science treatment you could not get a burial certificate? Answer, I knew before the boy died I could not get a certificate for burial if he died under Christian Science treatment. The witness said she had belonged to the Christian Scientists for about 15 years. Mr. Todd never felt the boy's pulse nor took his temperature. She said that he had treated the boy before and he had got better. She sent for him on Monday last because the boy seemed worse. In reply to questions put by both Crown Attorney Wood and the coroner, "How do you know that Todd was praying when he sat in the chair?" witness hesitated a long time, and would only say, "I know." In reply to Mr. Wood's pointed question she could not say how she knew he was praying.

When the bell on St. John's church began to toll out the sad news that His Majesty the King was dead, County Crown Attorney Wood suggested that the meeting adjourn. —Carried.

Dr. Gray told the jury that the exudate from the throat of the deceased had been sent by Drs. Greer and Eastwood to Dr. Amyott, of the Provincial Government, Toronto, for analysis, and that Dr. Amyott would be present at the next meeting. The inquest was then adjourned until Friday next at 8 p.m.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIVERSARY

The seventy-seventh anniversary of the organization of the Presbyterian church recognized last Sunday in St. Paul's church, will also be celebrated in St. Andrew's by special services to-morrow, when the Rev. T. Crawford Brown, M.A., of New St. Andrew's, Toronto, will preach morning, afternoon and evening. Monday night at 8 o'clock, addresses will be given by Rev. Robert Campbell, D. D., of Montreal, clerk of the General Assembly, the Rev. D. A. McKenzie, B.A., Moderator of Presbytery; Rev. D. A. Thomson, clerk of Presbytery; and representatives of other churches.

Master Wilfrid Morrison, the boy soprano, will assist the choir at all the services on Sunday and will sing several selections at the Monday night public meeting in the church.

Arrangements have been made for a short afternoon service Sunday afternoon at 3.30 for all who, from infirmity or age, may not be able to attend morning or evening. By special request Wilfrid Morison will sing, "The Holy City" at this afternoon service. The Rev. T. Crawford Brown will give a short address "Our Perfection Through Suffering."

On Monday night at the conclusion of the public meeting refreshments will be served in the lecture hall of the church and the very interesting ceremony of unveiling the portraits of the past ministers of the congregation will take place.

THE BOARD OF WORKS HELD SESSION LAST EVENING

The city board of works met in business session last night. There were present Mayor Morrow, chairman Ald. Hicks and Ald. Phelan, Graham, Metheral, Gillespie.

Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the C.P.R. be given permission to cross Simcoe street along the Government reservation, with sidings into the Quaker Oats Company's premises, providing the city is secured a right of way to the water's edge; and that if this concession is not given the city that the city solicitor be instructed to apply to the Railway Commission for permission to cross said tracks.—Carried.

Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the Railway Commission be notified that gates are necessary at the Aylmer street crossing of the C.P.R., and as the danger is caused entirely by the railway company, the city does not think that it should be called upon to contribute in any way towards the maintenance of such protection.—Carried.

Mr. Poquette asked the board to grade Paterson street, and to furnish approaches to two new houses he contemplates building.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that the city engineer investigate these matters and report to the board.

The Grafton Company asked permission to erect an illuminated sign outside their premises on George street. The proposed sign would be larger than the by-law permits. The chairman was authorized to investigate this matter, and also to report on the question of collecting fees for illuminated signs.

The chairman, Aldermen Gillespie and Metheral were appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the school board and the 57th Regiment in the matter of beautifying and maintaining Central Park.

Ald. Phelan and Gillespie were authorized to interview Mr. Larmonth in regard to the city maintaining a foot way over the old London street bridge.

Ald. Metheral moved, seconded by Ald. Graham, that W. G. Dixon's deposit of $10, with his estimate for street watering be forfeited, his tender not having been the lowest.—Carried.

Regarding the Misses Dickson's protest against the closing of Mill street, to facilitate expansion of the Quaker Oats Company's business, the committee were advised that Mill street never was city property. In consequence of this the matter was left in abeyance.

Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, assistant to the city engineer, and Mr. Peter Thompson, plumbing inspector, both asked for an increase of salary.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that Mr. Peter Thompson be given an increase of $100 a year. —Carried.

Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that Mr. Quartermaine be granted an increase of $100 per year.—Carried.

Mr. Patterson's request to remove two trees in front of his premises was referred to the engineer.

The matter of a septic tank in the vicinity of Harvey street, was laid over till another meeting.

JUDGMENT GIVEN IN LAKEFIELD LIQUOR CASE

This morning His Worship County Magistrate Edmison, in giving judgment in the Lakefield liquor case dismissed the charge against E. A. Tanner and Charles Tanner, without costs. To the Review His Worship stated that the evidence was conflicting, and in view of the general character of the testimony, he was in so grave a charge unable to say that the defendants were guilty, but as the inspector had reasonable grounds for laying the charge, he would not give costs to the defendants.

His Worship gave judgment at his own office.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. E. A. Tanner. Mr. Hampden Burnham appeared for the prosecution.

It was alleged that the proprietors of the drug store in Lakefield, Messrs. E. A. and Charles Tanner, sold liquor to a Mrs. Fletcher without having a liquor license.

MR. R. L. JOLLIFFE'S CONCERT HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL EVENT

On the occasion of his first visit here since he has studied under the vocal masters of New York, Mr. Norman Jolliffe made a most favorable impression on a large audience at the Grand last night. While Mr. Jolliffe's voice was always one of splendid quality, it has been developed to a very marked degree under the careful and able instruction of his teachers in the American metropolis. The instructors of Mr. Jolliffe had excellent material to work upon, for his voice was from the first fresh and musical, and they have developed a baritone of dramatic depth and flexibility. In his heavier numbers the soloist sang with a robustness and intensity that was highly expressive, and in his softer and tender selections his shading and fine expression were delightful.

Mr. Owen A. Smily, of Toronto, the other artist of the evening, was probably never given a warmer reception in this city than the one he was given last evening. His refreshing versatility was shown in the wide range of his numbers, all of which were received with evidence of the heartiest approval.

Mr. Jolliffe's opening number "Caesar's Lament," was splendidly sung and evoked an outburst of applause.

Mr. Smiley gave Conan Doyle's humorous poem, "The Groom's Story," which tells of the horse that made the ten mile record in such an acceptable and very original way that an encore was inevitable and he followed with the "Song of the Clock," another thoroughly appreciated contribution.

"Molly's Eyes," "Lorraine, Lorraine, Loree," "The Old Black Mare," formed the next group of Mr. Jolliffe's songs, and every number of the trio was most appreciatively applauded. He sang in encore, "I Love You Truly."

Mr. Smiley is inimitable in his caricatures of amateur "artists," and was supremely funny in his sketch "Some Peculiar Effects in Teaching." He was heartily received and gave a group of three Canadian poems, his character sketching of the representatives of the different nationalities that live in Canada being an admirable bit of work. The audience again insisted on Mr. Smiley's return, and he gave a graphic and very interesting reading of Robert Service's "Christmas Eve." "The Pauper's Drive" and "Love's Dilemma" afforded such a wide contrast between the grotesque and lightly sentimental that Mr. Jolliffe's highly enveloped interpretative powers were shown to convincing advantage. "The Sea Hath its Perils," one of the numbers of Mr. Jolliffe's next group of three was supplanted by "The Bandolero," which he had been especially requested to sing. Mr. Jolliffe's large and sonorous voice was employed with fine dramatic power in this number, which was accorded a most flattering reception. "My Love She's but a Lassie Yet" was sung with delicate expression, and "Rolling Down to Rio," was given with captivating abandon.

Mr. Smiley kept the audience in a constant laughing mood during his decidedly droll reciting of "A Queer Word," and fairly convulsed his auditors with Major McStinger's ridiculous efforts in giving Mark Anthony's oration over the dead body of Caesar.

"Let Miss Lindy Pass," a tender ballad of the negro south, afforded Mr. Jolliffe an excellent opportunity to show his marked aptitude in this phase of vocalism, and the musical setting by Damrosch of Kipling's "Danny Deever" gave Mr. Jolliffe opportunity to show his splendid gifts in dramatic vocalism. An encore was demanded by the audience.

Mr. R. J. Devey made a highly acceptable accompanist, and played in fine sympathy for both Mr. Jolliffe and Mr. Smiley.

The piano for the evening was kindly supplied by Mr. Carroll, Hunter street, the local representative for Gourlay, Winter and Leeming, Toronto.

$90,000 PERMIT WAS TAKEN OUT

This morning Mr W. H Denham took out a permit for the new elevator that the Quaker Oats Company is about to erect. The permit calls for an expenditure of $90,000, and the structure will have a capacity of 600,000 bushels. The elevator, it is expected, will be completed in October.

PUBLIC LOVE LETTERS.

Curious Appeals Appear In Newspapers of Southern Italy.

The printed love letters in the advertising columns of papers in southern Italy fill the tourist with wonder, mingled with deep respect for the sentiment which will pay for their insertion. The following letter, taken from the Palermo Ora, contained 174 words, which at the advertised rate of a cent a word would cost $1.74. If the Italian saying, "A lira is a dollar," is true, this would equal a bill of $8.70, which would require a pretty devoted American lover to pay:

"Dearest Little One—What have I done to thee? Why this silence after thy promise? I experience from it a grief so violent that it renders me helpless.

"Thou art good, my Santuzza, as good as dear; thou knowest how this makes me suffer. Why dost thou do it? Thou knowest how I love thee, that thou art my religion. Have I offended thee?

"I seek intense occupation to keep me calm, but a thousand thoughts gnaw my soul. Perhaps while you amuse yourself you do not know how your silence agitates me. Oh, dear Madonna mine, darling, darling, my blessed joy, do not forget me; thou art my life, all there is for me, my good Santuzza.

"I could not longer live without thee. Forgive me if I have offended thee in any way, blessed little bird. Here all is as if thou wert to arrive at any moment. I seek to create for myself this most beautiful allusion, ever speaking to thee, vainly expecting news from thee with every post, with a violently beating heart.

"Do not believe me bad; I love thee so much; I kiss thy dear lips, thy most entrancing little countenance, all infinite passion and tenderness. I am insane to hear once more thy dear, enchanting voice."

There were eleven letters of this kind in the same issue of the Ora, about an average number for a Palermo paper. Such letters are found in all Italian papers, but they grow shorter and shorter as one travels north until in Milan one line in the "agony column" suffices to express the lover's anguish.

A style which seems theatrical to an American seems perfectly natural to an Italian. He will write exactly this sort of love letter in private. Some of the published letters of Napoleon to Josephine in their early married life are in the same strain.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Same.

Homely—I believe in being good natured. I even quarrel with a laugh.

Not Their Style.

First Chauffeur—War is absurdly sentimental.

Second Chauffeur—Yes; they actually go back and bury the dead.—New York Times.

FELL OFF A BREAD WAGGON

A little boy named Johnston, residing on Bonaccord street, had the misfortune to fall off one of Wm. Stock's delivery wagons yesterday afternoon, about five o'clock, at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets. Save for some slight bruises about the lower limbs and a cut on the ear, he was not badly hurt, and the driver of the cart took him to his home.

Is Leaving for Coast

Mr. Wm. Douglas, who has been a faithful and efficient employee of the C.P.R. freight office here for the past five years, is leaving shortly on a trip to the coast, partly for a change and incidentally to recruit his health, which has not been of the best of late, owing to the close confinement attendant upon his position. Mr. Douglas will be absent about two months, and he will carry with him the best wishes of his many friends, who hope he may have an enjoyable trip and obtain a complete restoration to vigorous health.

NEW CHURCH AT ORILLIA

Mr. James Bogue Awarded Contract of Building Roman Catholic Edifice

Orillia, May 5.—The contract for the new Roman Catholic church has been let to Mr. John Bogue, of Peterborough, at $50,500. The building will be of Longford stone, on the site of the present church, which is now being torn down.

Last evening the Presbyterian congregation sanctioned an expenditure of $35,000 for a forward movement. The proposal is to erect a modern Sunday school building, rebuild the church organ, and improve the church seating, and establish a mission in the recently annexed portion of the town, known as Mount Slaven. A committee was appointed to canvass for subscriptions with the view of having the whole amount pledged and paid in five years, thus obviating any need for a mortgage.

OPERETTE IS POSTPONED

On account of the King's death the operette, "The Isle of Jewels," that was to have been given at the Conservatory next Friday, has been postponed. The date of the performance will be announced later.

SERVICES AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The series of services in connection with the seventy-fifth anniversary of St. Paul's church, which were begun last Sunday, will continue to-morrow and end with the public meeting on Monday night. A communion service will be held to-morrow morning. This promises to be the largest communion service ever held in the church.

The members of the local court of the Canadian Order of Foresters will attend divine service on the first Sunday in June. This is the date set apart by the order. A committee has been appointed to make all arrangements.

Charter to be Draped

At the regular meeting of the local lodge of the Canadian Order of Foresters last evening the following motion was moved by Bro. Frank Adams, seconded by Bro. Jos. Batten, and carried:—

"That this court place on record the sense of the loss which the Empire has sustained through the death of our beloved sovereign King Edward VII., and that the charter of this court be draped for a period of three months in respect of our late King."

The Ladies' Aid of the George street church, will hold a birthday party at Mrs. Jas. Long's, 561 Reid-st., on Friday. May 13th, from 4 to 7 o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

Service at St. John's

After St. John's church bell had tolled out the news of the King's death last evening, a short service was held in the church. The rector, Rev. Canon Davidson gave a short address, in which he spoke feelingly of the bereavement sustained by the royal family and the nation at large. A commendatory prayer was offered for the new King, as well as for the late Sovereign. The service was an impromptu one, and there was an attendance of fifty. The singing of the National Anthem brought it to a close.

SPECIAL SPEAKER

It is expected that Mr. R. McMurdo will arrive from Winnipeg in time for the big open air meeting, corner of George and Brock streets, to-night. Those who would like to hear a leader of marked ability would do well to be present. He will hold meetings every night next week in Gospel Hall, commencing Sunday night at seven o'clock. Having travelled extensively and preached in many lands, he will surely be heard with interest.

CENTRALS WON OPENING GAME IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

St. Peter's Scored in First Innings But Centrals Crossed the Plate Four Times in Fifth and Won Out by One Run—Inspector Mowat Pitched First Ball

A large attendance and some good baseball marked the opening of the city school baseball league at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, and at the finish of the seven innings contest the Central school nine were returned the winners by the close margin of one run. The score was 4—3, and the class of ball played, together with the enthusiasm shown by the players of the two teams, the Rooters' Brigade and the presence of a large number of school teachers, both ladies and gentlemen, points to a successful season.

OPENING CEREMONIES.

The league was inaugurated in a true "big league" style. In the pitcher's box stood Public School Inspector Mowat, and facing him was the Rev. E. A. Pearson, with Mr. Wm. O'Brien, principal of St. Peter's school, wearing the muzzle and big mit.

The recruit from the hall of knowledge showed signs of nervousness, but succeeded in getting two strikes to his credit, and this gave him the necessary confidence to take a chance, which, however, proved fatal, for the ex-Peterborough infielder connected and clouted out a Texas leaguer to centre and the big game was on.

Fred D. Craig called for the batter and St. Peter's school took the field.

The Centrals went out in order, but in their half St. Peter's scored, Trombley crossing the plate on his own hit to centre and May's nice drive. No more scoring was done till the fifth, when the Centrals by hitting, and assisted by their opponents' misplays, sent four men across the counting station, Cavanagh, Long, Pearson and Knapman completing the circuit.

The game at this stage looked good for the Centrals' refrigerator, but one of these departments of a baseball game, the rooters' brigade, for the one run team, got busy, and Smith's stock took a perceptible slump. The west enders took every advantage and succeeded in sending two men home, with two down. Murphy occupied the third bag when Hayes came to bat. The excitement at this time was at high water mark, and with two strikes called on the batter, St. Peter's still looked good to tie. However, Smith delivered the goods and the ball nesstled in Cavanah's mit and the elongated umpire waved him away.

Both teams had several classy performances, both at the bat and in the field. The batters worked well, the twirlers showing nice control, and the receivers handling the shoots very creditably.

Knapman's work at first base for the winners was particularly good, and Lester Pearson handled himself well at short.

The diminuitive George Bain, at third, for St. Peter's, and Trombley at the initial cushion played nice games, and Morrow's pretty catch of a line drive in the seventh off second base took well with the crowd.

The teams were:

Centrals—Cavanagh, c; Dobson, 2b; Moran, cf; Long, 3b; Pearson, s; Heaslip, rf; Goodfellow, lf; Smith, p; Knapman, 1b.

St. Peter's—Murphy, s; Trombley, 1b; May, rf; Hayes, lf; Donahue, cf; Bain, 3b; O'Hearn, c; Heenan, p; Morrow, 2b.

Score by innings:

Centals	0000400—4
St. Peter's	1000002—3

ECZEMA IS CAUSED BY IMPURE BLOOD

It is Banished by Dr. William's Pink Pills Because they Make Good Blood

Ask any doctor and he will tell you that eczema is caused by impurities in the blood; that nothing can cure it that does not reach the blood—that outward applications are worthless. That is the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have always proved so successful—they act on the blood, and in acting on the blood they banish these eruptions and pimples, relieve the irritation and itching and give perfect health. They have cured thousands of cases where poor blood has resulted in disease. Among those they have cured is Mrs. James Wilkins, Aylmer, Ont., who says: "I suffered a good deal with eczema and did not get anything to help me until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These freed my blood of all impurities and gave me speedy relief. I am, therefore, naturally very enthusiastic in praise of these pills."

A medicine that can make rich, red blood will cure anaemia, rheumatism, eczema, neuralgia, indigestion, heart paliptation, the ills of girlhood and of womanhood and a host of other troubles—simply because these troubles are the result of bad blood—that is why they always cure the above rtoubles and bring the glow of health to pale cheeks. Sold by all medicine dealers or direct at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Honor.

"Some men," said Andrew Carnegie at a dinner, "have very queer ideas of honor.

"I was once riding from Pittsburg to Philadelphia in the smoking compartment of a Pullman. There were perhaps six of us in the compartment, smoking and reading. All of a sudden a door banged, and the conductor's voice cried:

"'All tickets, please!'

"Then one of the men in the compartment leaped to his feet, scanned the faces of the rest of us and said slowly and impressively:

"'Gentlemen, I trust to your honor.'

"And he dived under the seat and remained there in a small, silent knot till the conductor was safely gone."—Minneapolis Journal.

TALE OF THE BOER WAR.

How the English Lost the Battle of Spoofersfontein.

"Yes, indeed, old chap," said Captain Cholmondeleigh-Smithers of his majesty's Four Hundred and Eighth cavalry, "your policemen are certainly handling the traffic much better than when I was last here; but, dash it, you haven't got it down to the point we have in London as yet. You've got your policemen educated and drivers trained, but your horses are a bit raw.

"Did you ever hear how the English came to lose the battle of Spoofersfontein during the Boer war? No? Well, we were not particularly proud of the incident, and it was such a baily low trick on the part of the Boers that it is not at all strange that they have not circulated the story.

"You see, the Four Hundred and Eighth cavalry were called out in 1901 during the horse famine in South Africa, so many of 'em having been killed off in battle, d'ye see. We happened to reach the seat of war simultaneously with a consignment of cavalry mounts that had been drafted from London in an emergency—bus and cab horses. Dash me if they didn't put us on those brutes trained in the London streets!

"Well, sir, in the thick of Spoofersfontein my regiment was given the order to charge a Boer battery that held the pivotal position. We swept down on them, ten to one, and for some reason we could not comprehend for the moment they held their fire.

"What do you think the poltroons had done? Dash me if they hadn't dressed out one rank of soldiers in the uniform of a blooming lot of London bobbies! Just as we rose in our stirrups to strike, these bounders, helmets and all, stepped out in front of the battery, with their backs to us, and each held up a big paw in a white cotton glove. Of course the horses in our front rank stopped short, and their riders went over their heads, and in the fraction of a second the Four Hundred and Eighth was rolling over itself on the ground. That's how we came to lose one of the most important engagements of the war."—Success Magazine.

Cross Purposes.

An asylum for the deaf and dumb, being sadly in need of funds, gave a dance. Among the many outsiders present were two good looking men. As they were talking together one of them suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove, there's a pretty girl! I would like to dance with her."

"Why don't you ask her?" responded his companion.

"How?"

"Why, by signs, of course."

So he crossed the hall and, placing himself in front of the girl, pointed with his index finger to her, then to himself and then whirled the finger round and round to indicate dancing. The girl smilingly nodded an assent.

Finding that her dancing was as perfect as her figure, he went through the same operation a little later in the evening. Again she nodded assent. As they were waiting for the music to start another gentleman approached the girl and asked for the next dance.

"I am sorry," she replied in the sweetest tones, nodding toward her silent partner, "but I have this dance with the dummy."—Cosmopolitan Magazine.

At the Door.

One day the front doorbell at our house rang loudly. Aunt Sabriny, colored, who has lived with us for more than three decades and knows all our visitors, hurried off to the door. We heard her in conversation a moment, and then she came back, vouchsafing no explanation.

"Who was it, Aunt Sabriny?" I inquired.

"Aw, jus' some fool pusson lookin' fer the wrong number," she said.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Fall of a Hero.

"Here," solemnly said the Bostonian, "General Warren fell."

"So?" replied the gentleman from Chicago, running a speculative eye up and down the perpendicular of Bunker Hill monument. "Must have been a swell subject for a moving picture act."—Puck.

The Similarity.

"Do you know, Imogen, your hair reminds me of Syracuse?"

"Pray, why?"

"Because it's so near Auburn."—Cornell Widow.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 jus for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K. 1811, Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

President Taft's Message.

Washington, May 7—President Taft, upon learning of the death of King Edward, wrote the following message of condolence to Queen Alexandra, which was cabled to Buckingham Palace last night:

"On the sad occasion of the death of King Edward, I offer to Your Majesty and to your son, his illustrious successor, the most profound sympathy of the people of the Government of the United States, whose hearts go out to their British kinsmen in this, their national bereavement. To this I add the expression to Your Majesty and to the new King of my own personal sympathy and of my appreciation of those high qualities which made the life of the late King so potent and influential towards peace and justice."

Worried by Keir Hardie.

New York, May 7.—A special to The Evening Post from London suggests that King Edward's illness was caused partially by attacks made upon him by Keir Hardie and by the "Socialist Review." The appeal of Balfour and other Tories to rally round the throne also increased his worries. It was to secure a respite from the affairs of state that the King made his week-end trip to Sandringham.

Sir Edward Grey's remarkable speech on Wednesday, when he denied that the Premier had promised to advise King Edward to create new peers, saying that no one knew what advice Asquith intended to give the King, was reprimarily intended to ease the royal mind.

CAUSE OF THE KING'S DEATH SAID TO HAVE BEEN PNEUMONIA

But Many People Believe That Worry Over the Political Situation Aggravated His Illness — His Last Words, "I Think I Have Done My Duty."

London, May 6.—Soon after the King's death the physicians issued the official bulletin which was as follows:

"May 6, 11.50 p.m.—His Majesty the King breathed his last at 11.45 to-night in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Duchess of Fife, Princess Victoria and Princess Louise, the Duchess of Argyll.

(Signed)

"Laking, Reid Powell, Dawson."

Pneumonia, following bronchitis, is believed to have been the cause of death, but the doctors thus far have refused to make a statement. Some of the King's friends are convinced that worry over the critical political situation which confronted him with sleepless nights, aggravated, if it did not cause the fatal illness.

Besides the nearest relatives in

A NEW PORTRAIT OF HIS LATE MAJESTY.

England, the Duke of Fife and the Archbishop of Canterbury were in the death chamber. The King's brother, the Duke of Connaught, with his family, is at Suez, hastening home from Africa. The King's daughter, Queen Maud of Norway, will start for England to-morrow.

The intelligence that the end of King Edward's reign had come was not a surprise at the last, the people had been expecting to hear it any hour since the evening's bulletin was posted at Buckingham Palace and flashed throughout the kingdom.

The capital received it without excitement, but sadly, for the King with his own people was unquestionably one of the most popular rulers in the world.

The fashionable restaurants were just emptying, and a few groups of late theatre-goers were making their way homeward through the rain, while a small crowd still hung about the palace, when the streets were filled suddenly with newsboys crying: "Death of the King!" The papers were quickly seized, and the people discussed the momentous event quietly and soon dispersed. The streets were deserted by one o'clock.

Within a few minutes after the death of the King, the Home Office was telegraphing the intelligence to the heads of other Governments, and the British diplomats and Colonial officials throughout the world.

All who knew the King expected that his death would be sudden, and it would not have occasioned great surprise if it had occurred without warning at some social function, as a result of heart trouble. Almost to the end he refused to take to his bed, and was sitting up yesterday in a large chair, so the palace stories go, corroborating the description of him as an unruly patient, which Dr. Ott gave to a Vienna interviewer last evening.

One of the last utterances attributed to King Edward was: "Well, it's all over, but I think I have done my duty." He seemed then to have reached a full realization that his end was fast approaching.

The Queen and others of the royal family and four doctors had been constantly in the sick room throughout the day. Several hours before his death the King was in a comatose condition, but he rallied slightly between nine and ten o'clock, and appeared to recognize his family.

Then he lapsed into unconsciousness, which ended in his passing.

The body lies in the King's chamber, in the northwest wing of the Buckingham Palace, which is brilliantly lighted, while the rest of the great gloomy building, with the exception of Lord Knollys' office, is entirely darkened.

It was nearly half an hour after the King breathed his last when Lord Knollys walked into the office and said to the waiting reporters: "Gentlemen, His Majesty is dead."

The people outside the palace only learned the news when boys appeared with papers. In the meantime the Prince and Princess of Wales that were had taken leave of the other members of the royal family at the main entrance soon after midnight. They drove directly to Marlborough House. Princess Victoria, who is her mother's constant companion, remained with the Queen. The others of the family followed the Prince and Princess of Wales.

A summons to the Privy Councillors has been issued by Sir Almaric FitzRoy, clerk of the council, convening the council in the throne room of St. James' Palace at two o'clock this afternoon, when the councillors will proclaim Prince George King.

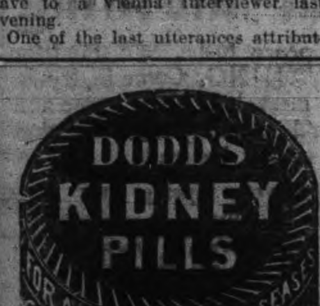
The new King, after this proclamation, will address the council and promise to reign as constitutional sovereign. At the end of the meeting King George will issue his first proclamation, requiring all officials to proceed with their duties. Formerly all offices, including the councillors, were vacated on the death of the sovereign.

The aldermen of the City of London will attend the council and swear allegiance. A proclamation has already been issued by the Home Office, requiring theatres to close today.

The court will go into mourning for six months, and the Lord Mayor has ordered that the great bell of St. Paul's shall be tolled throughout the day.

The new Queen, daughter of the Duke of Teck, was christened Victoria Mary, but was always called the Princess May, and as such was exceedingly popular with the English people. Since her elevation as Princess of Wales her name has not been so familiar, but it is altogether likely that as Queen her first name will be revived, and another, and a great Queen Victoria, will sit on the joint throne of England.

Princess Victoria had the reputation of being the only person in the Empire who was not afraid to stand up to her sovereign, the late Queen Victoria. She is a woman of great ability, and if the suffragettes do not use her presence on the throne as a lever to advance their claims, it will not be for want of a good argument.



MOURNING IN CANADA

Capital's Post Sessional Gaiety Suddenly Ends.

News of Death of His Majesty Results in the Cancellation of Third Night of the Horse Show, and the State Ball, Which Was Set For Next Tuesday—Officials Must Take New Oath—Mourning Stationery.

Ottawa, May 7.—The tolling of the bells, the cries of the newsboys, practically brought the social life of the capital to an abrupt pause last night. The horse show, which was about to commence the third of its four nights, was closed at once. The parade of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, which was in progress, was dismissed. The state ball, which was to have taken place on Tuesday next, will be cancelled. A period of official mourning will at once be inaugurated.

In official circles the principal effect will be that it will be necessary for all persons holding office to swear allegiance to the new monarch. A proclamation continuing them in office is practically the first act of the new reign. In earlier times the demise of the crown had serious political results, as it meant the vacating of office by the Ministry and the dissolution of Parliament, thus necessitating a reappointment of the Cabinet, and a general election; this, however, now is discontinued, and the death of Queen Victoria was the first occasion when these political occurrences did not accompany the death of the sovereign. A day of mourning is proclaimed, which is marked by special services in the churches. A minor incident is the use of mourning stationery by the public offices.

Expressions of sorrow were deep and general, and many of the men prominent in politics who are in town gave expression to their regret.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier preferred not to make public any statement, but other public men said a few words.

Bruchesi Wires Earl Grey.

Montreal, May 7.—All who know the loyalty of all classes in this city can readily understand the deep feeling of sorrow which took possession of the citizens of all races and creeds at the sad news from Buckingham Palace. Crowds gathered in front of the newspaper offices and eagerly scanned the successive bulletins. A service of prayer took place at Christ Church Cathedral at eight o'clock.

All the papers and more especially the French publications refer to the great sorrow that has come to the British people.

When Mgr. Bruchesi learned that His Majesty had passed away, he at once sent the following wire to Earl Grey at Ottawa:

"The sudden death of our beloved sovereign, King Edward, has plunged the British Empire in mourning. In the death of His Majesty, we lose a great and good King. The late King was an admirable peacemaker and we have not forgotten in our grateful hearts that he solemnly constituted himself the protector of our religious liberties. The nine years of his reign were prolific in great and beautiful accomplishments.

"I pray, therefore, Your Excellency to convey to Her Majesty, the Queen, and the royal family my most sincere and respectful sympathy with that of my clergy and all the Roman Catholics of my diocese."

Hamilton Hears News.

Hamilton, May 7.—The news of the death of King Edward was received here last evening with deep sorrow. Special editions of the newspapers rapidly spread the news and bells in the City Hall and central fire station towers were tolled, as well as every church bell. Many public and private meetings were cancelled and the weekly parade of the 13th Regiment was called off.

Toronto Hears News.

Toronto, May 7.—The first news yesterday morning that King Edward's illness was giving rise to anxiety was followed in such quick succession by bulletins describing his condition first as serious, then as critical, and later as one of grave danger, that the minds of the citizens of Toronto had not adjusted themselves to this alarming situation before a bulletin coming like a bolt from the blue bore the news to them that the King was dead.

As a widening radius of people heard the report, the telephones in the newspaper offices were kept ringing till very late at night by people who hoped to hear the report denied.

At the theatres and nearly every gathering held last night the King's death was referred to in terms of the keenest regret and sorrow, and in many cases meetings were broken up as a mark of respect.

Before dispersing, many passed resolutions of regret at the King's death and sympathy with Queen Alexandra and the royal family in their trouble.

There are some in Toronto who have a personal remembrance of King Edward when he visited Toronto in 1860. His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor, was one.

Pirates Being Rounded Up.

Manila, May 7.—Moro pirates have attacked a settlement in the Celebes and killed a number of traders and natives. The pirates are now surrounded at Manuk on the Island of Manka. A Dutch cruiser is assisting in the attack upon them, and reinforcements have been despatched from Jolo.

Missing Since January.

Arkona, May 7.—James F. Langan, son of Thomas Langan, who was connected with the Revillion Bros.' general store at Cochrane, New Ontario, has been missing since Jan. 25, and his relatives here have practically given up hope that he is now alive.

Death of a Miller.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 7.—Edward W. Douglas, mayor of Ogdensburg, died suddenly Thursday night of Bright's disease. He was 49 years old and a member of the firm of Bell & Co., millers. A wife and two daughters survive him.

Montreal Sailor Stabbed.

Montreal, May 7.—John Robinson lies in the forecastle of the Allan line steamship Ionian, now in port, in a dangerous condition as a result of a stabbing affair that took place on the docks Thursday night. The seaman has two knife wounds in his back and one half an inch below the heart. His assailants, McKearney, Rose and Crawford, are at large in Montreal. It is thought they will try to escape to the upper lakes. McKearney and Robinson had quarreled Thursday morning, and, when McKearney threatened to throw a bucket full of boiling water over the able seaman, Robinson turned the hose on him.

Dead Men Lashed to Rigging.

St. John, N.B., May 7.—A two-masted schooner, believed to be the John A. Gray, of Tignish, P.E.I., went ashore at Tabusintac Bully, near the mouth of the Miramichi, in a snowstorm on Wednesday night. Two men who rowed out from shore Thursday could not get within fifty feet of the wreck owing to the high sea, but saw three dead men lashed to the rigging.

Earl of Orkney Cannot Come.

London, May 7.—The Earl of Orkney, speaking to the Canadian Associated Press, said he was very sorry and much disappointed that he was unable to arrange his plans so as to accept an invitation to judge the horses at the National Exhibition, Toronto.

An Appeal for Trinity.

London, May 7.—Rev. J. P. Derwent Llwy, vice-provost of Trinity College, Toronto, who is now here, has issued an appeal on behalf of his college.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Rev. Alex McLaren, D.D., of Manchester, is dead.

The militia camp at Niagara will begin June 7 instead of June 14, as originally announced.

Only seventeen bodies of the hundred or more miners killed in the mine explosion at Palos, Ala., have been recovered.

The coroner's jury at Smith's Falls returned a verdict of willful murder against Rufus Weedmark, who choked his wife to death.

Constable Fortin of Montreal was shot and killed and Constable O'Connell wounded by a man they had arrested for theft. The prisoner got away.

Inquest at Cornwall.

Cornwall, May 7.—At the coroner's inquest in connection with the recent Rossmore Hotel fire, which carried away a dozen lives, several hundred citizens were present last night in the Court House. Dr. C. J. Hamilton, coroner, presided, and James Dingwall, Counties Crown Attorney, looked after the interests of the Department of Justice, and R. A. Pringle, K.C., was present on behalf of Mrs. Ross, proprietress of the hotel.

The first witness was James Sinclair, night clerk, who also performed the duties of night watchman. He discovered the fire in the office in front of the building within fifteen minutes after visiting the same place. He denied smoking cigarettes after one a.m., and in the two weeks he had been in the hotel he had not had more than a dozen drinks. He was not certain that the fire did not come from the basement, but was of the opinion that the fire started on the ground floor. The lights went out within ten minutes of the discovery of the fire.

Boot Black Trust.

New York, May 7.—According to The World yesterday, George H. Munro, formerly of Toronto, is endeavoring to form a giant trust of all bootblack stands in the city. With this idea, the U. S. Shoe Shining Co., was organized under the laws of Maine, with 1,500,000 shares at a dollar each. They are now offered to the public at 35 cents.

The suite of five rooms, with a gated entrance, stands in the name of Neill, Ward & Co., but there are other concerns in these offices; for instance, there are the Metropolitan Syndicate and the United States Shoe Shining Co.

Secretary Fergusson and other persons seen at these offices want it clearly understood that Geo. H. Munro is merely an employe, and not a director or an officer of the company.

Detective's Great Coup.

Paris, May 7.—M. Hamand, chief of detectives in Paris, has accomplished one of the cleverest pieces of detective work in recent criminal annals, in the arrest of the murderer of a poor street girl, Elisa Vandamme, whose atrocious murder had baffled the police for six weeks. The girl's head was found in a sewer and subsequently her hands, feet and other portions of her body were discovered in different places.

Hamand, with only the vaguest clue, doggedly searched 800 houses and finally found the key to the girl's room in the bureau of an ex-convict named Ferdinand, who had recently escaped from the penal colony in French Guiana. Ferdinand broke down and confessed to cutting up and disposing of the body, but asserted that the girl had died from natural causes in his arms.

Woman Is Killed.

Wingham, May 7.—A shooting accident occurred here yesterday, resulting in the death of Mrs. J. H. Finley, aged about 33 years. Mrs. Finley was assisting in house-cleaning at the home of her sister-in-law nearby when a delivery boy for one of the stores came along, and in taking down a shot-gun from the wall, its contents were discharged into Mrs. Finley's head, killing her instantly.

The affair was purely accidental as none of the parties knew the weapon was loaded.

Coroner was notified and a jury empanelled which viewed the remains, and an inquest will be held. Mrs. Finley moved here some months ago from Fremont, Ohio.

Hundred of Bodies Found.

San Juan, Del Sur, Nicaragua, May 7.—Reports received from San Jose, Costa Rica, yesterday state that no habitable houses remain in Cartago which was visited by a series of earth shocks on Wednesday night. Three hundred and fifty bodies have been recovered from the ruins.

Martial law has been declared in the stricken town to prevent disorders and looting. The authorities are making every effort toward the relief of the injured and destitute. The victims who survived their injuries are being removed to San Jose, 14 miles distant.

Sensational Suicide at Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 7.—Thomas Ryan, a horse trader, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the Suspension bridge, just below the Chaudierre Falls. No cause is known for the suicide. Shortly before noon he requested a friend to hitch up his horse and drive him to Hull, and as they were crossing the bridge jumped out, and bidding his friend good-bye and shouting "Here goes nothing," leaped over the railing to his death.

Suicided In Rain Barrel.

London, May 7.—Worrying for fear she would not have money enough to pay her house rent caused Mrs. Sarah Clarkson to commit suicide by drowning herself in a rain barrel at her home yesterday morning. She was 45 years old and came to London from Manchester, England, last July.

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Hanged.

De Land, Fla., May 7.—Irving Hanchett, the 15-year-old Connecticut boy, who was convicted of the brutal murder of Glevie Tedder, a 13-year-old girl, near this place on the evening of Feb. 12 last, was hanged here yesterday.

Cheese Factory Burned.

Brockville, May 7.—The Barlow cheese factory at Addison was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Loss $3,000.

No Yellow Labor.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is not going to insist upon yellow labor on completing the mountain section of the line. It will be recalled that, after going over the line last summer, the opinion was expressed by certain high officials, that labor from the Orient will be necessary on that section.

President Hays, who is here, intimated, however, that this course will not be followed. "The people," he said, "do not want yellow labor and we do not propose to force it upon them. Without it, of course, it will take longer to complete the line, but I believe that the western people will be prepared to wait. I should say it would be 1913 before the Grand Trunk Pacific is fully completed."

Granted Leave to Appeal.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Supreme Court grants Morang & Co. leave to appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal of Ontario, which ordered the publishers to return to W. D. Lesueur the manuscript of the Life of William Lyon Mackenzie. Sir Louis Davies alone dissented on the ground that nothing was involved but the question of construction of a contract, that no controversy of public interest was brought in question and that special leave should not be granted in such a case.

Emigration Restrictions.

London, May 7.—The central unemployed body will fully discuss emigration restriction to-day, and will ask the Colonial Office or Local Government Board to request the Canadian Government to remove the new regulations. Mr. Hazell, chairman of the Emigration Committee, says 150 emigrants stopped, have sold their homes.

Poisoned Farmer Is Dead.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 7.—Ben Thompson, the Stamford farmer who, it is said, had drank cider alleged to have been drugged by Baldwin, who committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid on Wednesday last, died at one o'clock yesterday.

Roosevelt's Honor.

Christiana, Norway, May 7.—King Frederick's University conferred upon Theodore Roosevelt yesterday the degree of doctor of philosophy. It was the third time in the history of a century that the degree had been given a foreigner.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection WICK BLUE FLAME Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

THE NEW KING'S IDEAS OF EMPIRE PROBLEMS

Great Spaech at Guild Hall in 1901 After His Visit to the Dominions Beyond the Seas—How to Maintain the Integrity of the British Empire.

On his return from the tour of the Empire the Prince of Wales, in an address at the Guild Hall, December 5, 1901, said:—

"To the distinguished representatives of the commercial interests of the Empire, whom I have the pleasure of seeing here to-day, I venture to allude to the impression which seemed generally to prevail among their brethren across the seas, that the old country must wake up if she intends to maintain her old position of pre-eminence in her colonial trade against foreign competitors. (Hear, hear.) No one who had the privilege of enjoying the experiences which we have had during our tour could fail to be struck with one all-prevailing and pressing demand—the want of population. Even in the oldest of our colonies there were abundant signs of this need. Boundless tracts of country yet unexplored, hidden mineral wealth calling for development, vast expanses of virgin soil ready to yield profitable crops to the settlers; and these can be enjoyed under conditions of healthy living, liberal laws, free institutions, in exchange for the overcrowded cities and the almost hopeless struggle for existence which, alas, too often is the lot of many in the old country. (Hear, hear.) But one condition, and one only, is made by our colonial brethren, and that is: 'Send us suitable emigrants.' (Hear, hear.) I would go further, and appeal to my fellow-countrymen at home to prove the strength of the attachment of the motherland to her children by sending them only of her best. (Cheers.) By this means we may still further strengthen, or at all events pass on unimpaired, that pride of race, that unity of sentiment and purpose, that feeling of common loyalty and obligation which knit together and alone can maintain the integrity of out Empire." (Prolonged cheers.)

CANADIAN TRIBUTES

Toronto, May 7.—The Globe gives the opinions of Mr. Robert L. Borden, Sir James Whitney, Premier Gouin and Hon. Mr. Fielding. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not yet expressed any opinion;

Mr. R. L. Borden said:—"The tidings of sorrow which have just been flashed across the ocean come to the people of Canada with startling suddenness. Words of foreboding had hardly reached us before the last message came. God's finger touched him and he slept. To the people of the oversea dominions the Crown personifies the dignity and majesty of the whole Empire; and through the Throne each great dominion is linked to the others and to the Motherland. Thus the Sovereign's death must always thrill the Empire. But to-day's untimely tidings bring to the people of Canada the sense of a still deeper and more personal bereavement. They gloried in their King's title of Peacemaker, and they believed him the greatest living force for the right within the Empire. In him died the greatest statesman and diplomat of Europe. There never was a time when his wise and careful guidance seemed of more vital importance to all who own allegiance to the flag, and especially those of the Motherland. The words uttered in his latest moments of consciousness came to us with a peculiar pathos, but also as in inspiration of the daily life of the humblest; 'It is all over. But I think I have done my duty.' He who can solemnly and truthfully say this in his last moments need not and will not fear death, be he King or peasant."

PREMIER WHITNEY.

Sir James Whitney:—"The sudden and unexpected death of his Majesty King Edward VII. comes as a tremendous shock to the people of the whole world. It goes without saying that wherever the British flag floats there will be mourning, as there will be also in alien nationalities.

"Under any circumstances it would be difficult to express the feeling of love, respect and admiration entertained by British peoples for their late Sovereign, who in his comparatively short reign has so borne himself and has so done his part that the whole human race has participated in the benefits resulting from the wisdom shown by him.

"Probably no wiser Monarch ever reigned over a nation. Probably no Monarch ever reigned who was so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of constitutional rule, and who was so careful to keep ever before his mind the responsibility of the Sovereign under the well-understood principles on which his monarchy rested.

"The sorrow and regret of his people will be intense and lasting. One feels acutely how utterly impossible it is to fitly express our sense of this great national bereavement. However, the great work which has been apparently set apart by Providence to be accomplished by the British nation has not yet been completed, and the people who to-day mourn the lost of King Edward the Peacemaker will rally round and stand by his successor in order that that work may go on as before."

PREMIER GOUIN, OF QUEBEC.

In announcing the news to the Quebec Legislature, Premier Gouin said: "The entire world has just learned of the death of our Sovereign. In great feasts and banquets we always proposed the health of our King. At the most solemn festivals we never failed to manifest, by our silence, the respect which we held for his Majesty. Those who love in a chief of State the greatest qualities, peace, goodness, nobility and entente cordiale, all feel his loss. It is for that reason that we cannot do otherwise than suspend our sittings, and I am convinced that all the members of this House will endorse this proposal for adjournment. Therefore, I propose, seconded by Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, the adjournment of this House to 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, and during this time I will endeavor to express the regrets of the Province, which I will call upon the leader of the Opposition to endorse."

LAURIER MAY GO TO ENGLAND

Ottawa, May 6.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was closeted with Earl Grey this evening and it is understood that a message was sent to Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. Speaker Marcil, now on their way to Europe to act as special representatives of the Dominion Government at the funeral of his late Majesty. It is understood that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will attend King George's coronation. The Imperial Conference will be held at the time of the coronation. It is already rumored that Sir Wilfrid's western trip may be called off on this account.

THE CHANCEL IS DRAPED

The chancel of St. Luke's church is draped with black and purple on account of the King's death, and special sermons will be preached in keeping with the event.

The church bell was tolled last night and this morning to announce the sad news of the King's death.

population of the town and country were on hand.

Formal addresses were presented from the County Council and Town Council. One thousand children, in chorus sang the National Anthem. Over fifteen thousand people were massed about the court house square.

To the addresses His Royal Highness made this brief reply:—

"Gentlemen, I thank you sincerely for the addresses which you have presented to me. In the Queen's name I acknowledge your expressions of loyalty to her crown and her son, and for myself I am grateful for this welcome to your neighborhood."

In little more than an hour from the time the Prince arrived he took the train for Port Hope.

A Little Tragedy of Love.

She had told him that her father utterly disapproved of him and had issued peremptory orders that he should not come to the house. She trembled as she told him and there were tears in her eyes, for she feared that even then papa might be within hearing, possibly reach, of her loved one.

But he was brave.

When love was in the van
What cared he for any man?

He was, indeed, no fair weather lover, and the storm and stress made him very much stancher in his devotion to the one girl in all the world for him.

"What boots it, dearest?" he whispered to her, soft and low, taking her to his manly bosom, breathing into her shell-like ear. "What boots it"—

"I do!" thundered papa, appearing upon the scene, rear entrance, and there was a dull, sickening thud which indicated that he did.

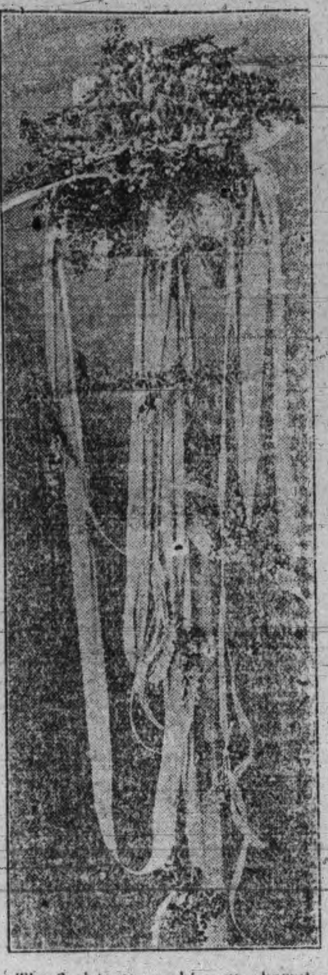
BOUQUET FOR SPRING BRIDE

An Old Fashion Revived In Lace Paper Frill.



The florists are making up charming bouquets for spring brides. And they are embodying an old fashioned idea of the Victorian times by way of decoration for the posies, the quaint holder of lace paper which forms a dainty frill about the edge of the bouquet. The flowers used in making the smart bouquet seen in the illustration are Bride roses and valley lilies, with a fringe of maidenhair fern. A shower of white satin ribbon and loops of silver gauze hang from the bouquet. On the ends of the streamers are attached bunches of valley lilies.

Laying Out a Garden.

In the new garden the making of a walk is as much a matter of study and care as the sidewalk in front of the house. There is nothing so good for this purpose as concrete, but where the expense of that ideal material is too great there can be substituted brick, flagstone, cobbles, pebbles or limestone screenings, says the Delineator for March. The walk should be the only formal stiff feature about the well-planned home-garden, and time, with the growth of the foliage along its sides, will cure that to a great extent.

The walk should "lead from somewhere to something." It should have a purpose, which is primarily to give access to the garden, but if there are any landscape features in the garden, as there should be, it should become a portion of their motif. If there is a pergola, arch, arbor, garden house or garden seat the access thereto should be by the main walk and not by a lateral path. This presupposes a garden of considerable extent, as these features would have no place in a tiny one; but, lacking these, there must still be something to which the walk leads. It should not end against a wall, fence or the side of a building, but if it approach them should be continued along them to end definitely somewhere, as a door to a building or a gate in a wall, fence or hedge. This marks the real difference between the walk and the path. The latter may lead anywhere and end nowhere. It may lead into and stop at a clump of bushes and may wind and turn at convenience.

Housemaids' Caps.

Nothing makes for neatness of appearance in the housemaid's attire like a fresh, immaculate cap. With her black gown and frilly apron the little headpiece harmonizes beautifully. There is to be found in the shops a new cap that is very attractive. It is not unlike the net and lace jabots that three seasons ago were so popular. Then for morning wear or less dressy effects there is an Alsatian bow composed of lawn with buttonholed edges. This is a very practical model and launders perfectly. A tiny black ribbon rosette in the center of the bow is an addition from a modish standpoint.

At Melville, Sask., all the Protestant denominations are under one pastor.

PUNCTUALITY.

It Gets a Jolt From One Who Never Can Be on Time.

So much is said about the virtue of punctuality that people who go in for it to any great extent are exceedingly uppish and disagreeable. Punctuality has its bad side, just as everything else has. People should remember this. If they are on time they only serve to throw into embarrassing relief the poor souls who come hurrying in ten minutes late. It is smug to be precisely punctual. It is raising yourself above the rest of mankind, refusing to partake in its frailties. The ideal thing from the point of view of courtesy to others and recent humility about your own attainments is to be always ten minutes late or at least to appear so.

If you are to meet at the package office in the Grand Central station at 4 o'clock sit quietly in the middle of the hall until twelve minutes after four; then when you have seen the other person dash up, followed by panting porters and fairly dripping with explanations, wait until the arrival has had a second in which to recover self-respect and stroll up with a remark on Timbuktu or the best way to cultivate carrots. This will insure your popularity and show you to be a person of kindness and forethought. At any rate, it is better than a pitiless standing at the place where you said you would be, your superiority increasing every minute, and confronting, upbraiding silently, the person who promised to meet you because you appeared a rather likeable sort, but who finds you in your panoply of punctuality the very reverse of likeable.

For be it remembered that just as some people cannot be on time others cannot to save their skins be late. So that they deserve not a whit of credit for it and should, in fact, be reprimanded when they do it ostentatiously and in public.

SPEED OF WILD DUCKS.

In Dead Calm They Average Fifty-Eight Miles an Hour.

My observations were made with mallard and widgeon just off the sea and coming in at the evening flight, such birds not having got fully under way, having traveled only about two miles or a mile and a half, according to the state of the tide. The times varied from 10 1-2 miles an hour in the teeth of a hurricane to 190 miles an hour with half a gale driving them forward, their speed with a full gale being below this.

In a dead calm they averaged fifty-eight miles an hour; but, as I have mentioned, they were not traveling at top speed. Other species of duck fly much faster than this, the speed of a merganser going down wind being something terrific, and if I mentioned my rough calculations made as to its speed with a stiff breeze behind it no one would believe me, so I will refrain from doing so.

One day in March, when a fresh breeze was blowing down the Holy Sound, in Orkney, mergansers were lost sight of in five seconds after passing the point upon which I was sitting. They are without doubt the fastest of our webfooted birds, although other of the diving ducks, such as the goldeneye, fly at an enormous velocity.

The speed at which birds are traveling is very deceptive. For instance, swallows appear to be going very fast, but rarely attain a speed of thirty miles an hour, whereas wild geese appear to be traveling very slowly when seen at a distance, but see them passing over you at dawn about fifty yards overhead and their wings look like flywheels, giving the birds the appearance of huge bees in the half light, so fast are their wings vibrating.

During a performace at one of the London theatres a man and his wife had a quarrel on the stage, the woman in a rage of jealousy, the man trying to persuade her that she was too suspicious and too passionate. Both were acting with great spirit when the wife moved her arm too near the candle, and her muslin dress was in flames in an instant. Both actors kept their heads, however. The husband extinguished the fire and, proceeding with his part, interpolated:

"You see, my dear, I was right. You flare up at the least thing."

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, billiousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cure Constipation

THE LAST RESORT

When all else failed, the Doctors said, "try Fruit-a-tives"

PLANTAGENET, ONT., JANUARY 31ST, 1910.

"About March 1st 1909, I was taken deathly sick with Stomach Trouble, Backache and General Breakdown. I failed from 125 pounds down to 80 pounds, was confined to bed for eight weeks, and was unable to eat or keep anything on my stomach, vomiting nearly all the time. I expected to die, and took many remedies as well as employing different physicians. The doctors said they could do nothing for me and, as a last resort, one of the doctors told me "to try Fruit-a-tives—if they would not cure me, nothing would".

MDE LAURENT CADIEUX

My husband bought "Fruit-a-tives" from Mr. Arthur Koleau, merchant of Plantagenet, and I started taking them at once, and inside of ten days, I was able to leave my bed. My stomach got strong and I could eat and retain my food. I gained rapidly and soon had my usual good health back again, and today I weigh as much as ever, 125 pounds."

MDE. LAURENT CADIEUX.

Even the doctors are recommending "Fruit-a-tives". They realize now that these wonderful fruit juice tablets will positively cure all Stomach Troubles, Indigestion and Dyspepsia—and they are using "Fruit-a-tives" in their practice.

Few people realize the vital importance of keeping their blood pure. Impure blood is the chief cause of Stomach Trouble, because it is from the blood that the stomach obtains the fluid which digests food. When the blood is laden with impurities, the disolving fluid (or Gastric Juice) will be impure. These impurities may come from a congested liver, from Constipation, from weak kidneys, from an inactive skin, or from all four. Naturally, the ordinary "digestive powders" and "pepsin tablets" will not cure the trouble, because they only help to dissolve the food—they do not go to the seat of the trouble. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest remedy ever discovered for all forms of Indigestion, Dyspepsia and other Stomach Disorders, because "Fruit-a-tives" is unequalled as a blood-purifying medicine. "Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver, regulates the bowels, strengthens the kidneys, stimulates the skin, and thus rids the whole system of all impurities. "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure you of any kind of Indigestion. "Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. If you are unable to obtain "Fruit-a-tives" conveniently, do not accept substitutes but send to "Fruit-a-tives" Limited, Ottawa and the regular size packages will be mailed you, postpaid, on receipt of price.

BRITAIN IS MOURNING FOR KING EDWARD VII.

His Body Will Lie in State Until May 20—People Weep in the Streets of South African Cities When They Hear the Sad News—Australia and New Zealand Abandon Sports and Amusements.

London, May 9.—Saturday is usually the gayest night of the week in London, but last Saturday night a Sabbath-like quiet pervaded the city.

It was a capital in mourning. All the theatres and music halls were closed; the band concerts in the parks are abandoned. The people wandered idly about the street looking at the portraits of Edward VII. wreathed in crepe, in the shop windows. Multitudes drifted into St. James' Park, staring at the darkened windows of Buckingham Palace, where the body of the dead King lies, and at Marlborough House nearby, through the gates of which officials and messengers come and go constantly. Here the new King has had to set aside his personal grief to busy himself with the affairs of crown and family.

Many wear badges of mourning. The whole kingdom, indeed, is a nation in mourning. Ireland has forgotten her political grievances and the Irish papers speak kindly, appreciatively of Edward VII. The mayors of such Nationalist strongholds as Dublin and Limerick have sent messages of sympathy to the widow.

Municipalities, churches and societies of all sorts have met to pass eulogies on the late monarch, and offer good wishes to his successor. The courts and business houses have been closed, sports and entertainments of every type have been dropped; society has cancelled its engagements. The managers of most of the metropolitan theatres have decided to suspend the season until after the funeral.

While King George was signing the proclamation of his succession in the presence of his privy councillors in St. James' Palace yesterday afternoon, a battery in the adjourning park was firing 68 guns, denoting the age of his predecessor. The first official utterance of the new King was marked by feeling and eloquence and made a deep impression.

The plans for the funeral have not yet been determined, but the royal ceremonial and public mourning, will follow the same procedure as when Victoria died. The court will move to Windsor Castle on Tuesday, and it is supposed that the obsequies will take place there, the body of the late King to rest in Albert Memorial Chapel. The funeral will be held about Friday, May 20th, as nearly as can be ascertained. The body will lie in state in Buckingham Palace and Westminster Hall.

More royal personages are expected to come to England for the funeral than followed Victoria's hearse. The German Emperor and the Kings of Belgium, Spain and Portugal, and possibly King Victor Emmanuel of Italy will be present. All the crowned heads of the world, as well as the Pope and the President of the United States, France and other republics, have telegraphel condolences to the Dowager Queen and King George. These, however, are considered personal messages and have not been published here.

Both Houses of Parliament held a brief meeting Saturday afternoon. The Lord Chancellor administered the oath of allegiance in the House of Lords to about forty peers. The Speaker of the House of Commons and the Deputy Speaker being out of the country, there was no one empowered to preside over the House, and immediately upon Home Secretary Churchill's motion, the House adjourned.

A great representative congregation attended services in St. Paul's, the bishop of London officiating. Many Catholics gathered in Westminster Cathedral, while special services were held in various churches throughout the country.

This morning the proclamation of George V.'s succession was read in all the principal towns in the kingdom. Trumpeters, clad in scarlet and gold, escorted by Life Guards, entered the City of London, and the Lord Mayor and aldermen in robes of office met them at Temple Bar. This ceremony was expected to take place in London on Saturday, and great crowds assembled at Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange, waiting there for hours, only to be disappointed.

With the members of the Cabinet scattered in England, and about the continent, it has been impossible for the party in power to discuss its policy, but it is assumed that Parliament will adjourn after the budget is settled.

The ceremonies in connection with the opening of the Anglo-Japanese exposition, for which Prince Fushima, cousin of the Emperor of Japan, arrived yesterday, have been given up, as well as hundreds of other enterprises and entertainments, great and small.

According to a circular issued from Marlborough House last night, the designation of the new Queen will be Queen Mary.

The roll she will play at the new court has been the subject of considerable speculation. As Prince and Princess of Wales the new King and Queen led such comparatively retired lives that it is difficult to form an opinion, but it is almost safe to assert that the court will be far less brilliant than it was under King Edward.

The latter attached the fullest weight and dignity to the ceremonial of the kingly office. Queen Mary is credited with great strength of character, and is likely to exert far more influence on the court surroundings than did Queen Alexandra.

She is deeply religious, and has a love for charitable work connected with the church, while King George, so far as is known, is more fond of country life and pursuits than of courtly pomp.

Universal Lament.

London, May 9.—A Sydney despatch states that the Australians were entirely shocked by the news of the King's death, previous messages not having prepared them for the worst so soon. Universal mourning is observed with special services in the churches on Sunday. Sports were abandoned and places of amusement closed.

New Zealand was similarly plunged into deepest mourning.

A message from Johannesburg says that Saturday was the saddest day in the whole history of the Transvaal. When the King's death was announced people were observed weeping in the streets. Gen. Botha sent a touching message to the press. The grief of the natives is noticeable. All are sad because the "Great Chief" is dead. They attribute his death to the comet, pointing out that there was also a comet shortly before Queen Victoria's passing.

In India there were all the signs of sorrowing, while the Empire's press strike but one note of esteem and loyalty, bearing witness to the loss the Empire the world over has sustained.

It has been announced that the formal messages from the Governments of the overseas states will not be published until King George has seen them.

JAPANESE ARE ENLARGING NAVY

Tokio, May 9.—Newspapers received by the steamer Aymeric stated that conferences are being held by naval and Government officials to draft plans for enlarging the Japanese navy, and a big expansion program will be submitted at the next session of the Diet. Vernacular newspapers state that naval increment will be the big burning question. Some point out that Japan has now but six modern battleships and two are on the stocks. Other battleships are more or less obsolete and action is imperative.

Many newspapers [illegible] ter in an earnest strain. The Kokumin Shimbun says a large destroyer with 33 knots' speed of at least 1,150 tons, is to be laid down at Negasaki, Japanese naval authorities having decided on these bigger destroyers as a result of the lessons of Kushima

NO RECIPROCITY WITH UNCLE SAM

Montreal, May 9.—Sir Edward Clouston, vice-president of the Bank of Montreal, who returned from London yesterday, being asked what he thought of the rumored reciprocity negotiations with the country to the south, replying that he was of the opinion that no treaty would be acceptable to the neighboring republic that did not give them the big end of the stick.

Dr. Hodgetts to Move Up.

Ottawa, May 9.—It is currently reported here that Dr. C. A. Hodgetts, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, will shortly leave the provincial service and enter a larger sphere, offered by the Dominion conservation commission as special health officer, at an initial salary of $4,000 per year.

KICKED THE POLICEMAN

Toronto, May 9.—Edward Hanley, a laborer living at 16 Strickland place, came in contact with the police twice on Saturday night. The first time it was the police that suffered, but on the second occasion Hanley was taken into custody charged with aggravated assault upon Policeman Percy Turner.

The policeman encountered Hanley shortly after midnight, he was convoying a drunken man along Armory street from Centre avenue and Turner turned into help him. The drunk fell and Turner stooped to help him to his feet when he received a terrific kick in the face which closed one eye and loosened several teeth. Hanley fled.

Turner gather reinforcements in the shape of Patrol Sergeant Griffiths and Policeman Peacock, and later they came upon Hanley and several others in a lane. He was arrested and taken to the police station.

MILLIONAIRE'S BEQUESTS TO CHURCH

Philadelphia, May 9.—The will of John Converse, head of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, who died last Monday, was admitted to probate yesterday and under its terms the various boards in the Presbyterian Church are given an aggregate of $200,000. The remainder of the estate estimated at between $7,000,000 and $10,000,000, is given to relatives of Mr. Converse, with the exception of a bequest of $25,000 to the Presbyterian Hospital of Philadelphia and a like amount to the Eliza-Cathcart Home for Incurables at Devon, Pa.

KING GEORGE THE FIFTH IS FORMALLY PROCLAIMED

Special to the Review.

London, May 5.—George V. was formally proclaimed King of the United Kingdom, of Great Britain and Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the seas, and Emperor of India this morning. All the pomp and display that have marked this ceremony since mediaeval days were observed. No evidence of mourning were permitted, in accordance with the ancient customs, all flags being raised from half mast to the top for the occasion. The heralds with the pursuivants, Kings at arms, etc., entered the city and read the proclamation at Charing Cross, Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange. The reading was received with the royal salute, the playing of the National Anthem, and the dipping of the colors. This ceremony concluded, the Lord-Mayor entertained the heralds at the Mansion House, the first toast being to the new King.

Fully half a million people lined the streets to witness the quaint procession.

KINGSTON PUBLISHER PASSES AWAY

E. J. B. Pense, Kingston, Widely Known Liberal Journalist, Victim of Apoplexy.

Kingston, May 9.—With terrible suddenness death came to Edward J. B. Pense, proprietor and publisher of The Daily British Whig, late Saturday afternoon.

Saturday, Mr. Pense appeared to be in his usual good health, and was at his office carrying on his duties. Early in the afternoon he returned to his home on King street, and engaged in some work in his garden. A few minutes before three o'clock, he was seized with an attack of apoplexy and became unconscious after he was removed to the house. Drs. Third and Garrett were immediately summoned, but all medical aid was unavailing, and Mr. Pense breathed his last a few minutes before five o'clock.

As Mr. Pense was one of Kingston's leading citizens, his death came as a great shock to the community. The deceased was born in Kingston and was 62 years of age. In his death, the city lost a man whose place will be hard to fill. He was beloved by citizens in all walks of life; a man who was ever ready to further the city's interests.

It was in 1902 that Mr. Pense was elected a member of the Ontario Legislature, representing the City of Kingston. In 1905, he was re-elected, and was returned a year later in a bye-election. He was defeated by W. F. Nickle in the contest of 1908. It was through efforts put forth by Mr. Pense, that a monument was erected here eight years ago to the late Sir George A. Kirkpatrick, a native of Kingston, and one of his political foes.

The deceased is survived by his second wife, one son, E. H. Pense of the survey department, Toronto, recently removed to Ottawa, and four daughters, all unmarried. The funeral has been arranged for Tuesday afternoon, with service in St. George's Cathedral.

A Famous Detective Dead.

New York, May 9.—T. F. Byrnes, formerly superintendent of police of the City of New York, but more famous for his work in the detective bureau, died at his home here Saturday night from chronic indigestion, after an illness of more than two years. He was 66 years old.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The marine underwriters have offered a reward for information as to the whereabouts of the wrecked ferry Bessemer No. 2.

Earl Grey cabled to Lord Crewe a message from Canada conveying to King George and the royal family an expression of sorrow over the death of King Edward.

The Aylesworth Club met at King City and passed a resolution approving Mr. Aylesworth's course in Parliament, and deprecating the attacks made upon him.

The insurance on the life of King Edward will probably run into millions of pounds. Almost every insurance company in the kingdom is effected more or less.

It is now estimated that the number of persons killed in the earthquake at Cartago will reach at least 1,500.

The Governor-General, the Premier, and the Ministers at present in Ottawa took the oath to the new King, and orders were issued to the militia regarding the forms of mourning to be observed.

FOUR HOUSES DESTROYED

Toronto, May 9.—A scene of merriment was quickly turned to one of consternation and panic at 10.15 Saturday night, when a lamp was overturned and exploded in the home of Jacob Bindey in Auburn avenue, Earlscourt, where a Jewish wedding was being celebrated. Four houses were destroyed and a loss of nearly $5,000 entailed.

Guilty of Perjury.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 9.—U. G. Walker, president of the defunct South Cleveland Banking Co., which failed a few months ago for more than $1,000,000 was found guilty yesterday on the charge of perjury. The charge grew out of the alleged false statements regarding the bank's financial condition to the state bank examiner.

Found Asphyxiated.

Toronto, May 9.—Patrick Graham, 28 years old, employed by Wagner & Son, truck makers, was found dead in his bed at 51 Simcoe street yesterday noon by Tony Johnson, who worked with Graham and roomed in the same house. The gas was turned on and the room was filled with the fumes.

RAN OVER TWO PEOPLE

New York, May 9.—F. W. Sparks, a Brooklyn lawyer, was twice arrested Saturday on charges of homicide and felonious assault, as the result of automobile accidents in which he figured.

He first struck a boy, took him home in the automobile, and while on the way to a police station in charge of a policeman, ran over six-year-old Lillie Rosenberg, injuring her so badly that she died a few hours later.

FASTING FOR 49 DAYS

Chicago Fat Man is Training Down—May Last Out 100 Days, He Says.

Chicago, May 9.—Richard Fausel of this city has not eaten for 49 days, and while he admits that he could relish a square meal like any healthy man, his appetite by no means annoys him. When Fausel began fasting, he weighed 296 pounds, but he is down to 243 now. He expects to go without food, except water, until he has reached 200.

"I may have to make it a hundred days of fasting," said Mr. Fausel, "but I'm sure it won't be troublesome. The trouble with most people who start out to go without food, is that along about the third or fourth day, they think they are going to die. I did, I know, but when I surveyed my great bulk and concluded that I was not going to fade away like that."

FRAUDULENT CANVASSER

Galt, May 9.—Archibald Powell, 28, began canvassing here for The Philadelphia Ladies' Home Journal and had taken scores of orders, offering an encyclopaedia as premium, and collecting $1 in advance, when he was arrested on suspicion of fraudulent operations. He admitted his guilt and was held to await enquiries as to his doings in Stratford, St. Thomas and other points. The prisoner gave London as his home, but the police believe both name and address are fictitious.

A big fire was narrowly averted at the Goldie-McCulloch Co.'s stables Saturday morning by the fire brigade of Shurley & Dietrich's factory, adjoining, whose first aid compensated for the loss of time in the municipal brigade's arrival.

FRANK N. HOFFSTOT

Frank N. Hoffstot, president of the Pressed Steel Car Company, of Pittsburg, who was arrested in New York lately on an indictment charging him with conspiracy in connection with the bribery scandals in the Smoky City, immediately obtained a writ of habeas corpus from the federal courts. He maintains that his extradition should not have been granted by the State of New York, because he was in Pennsylvania at the date mentioned in the accusing papers.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 9.—Coroner McGarry yesterday opened an inquest into the death of Benjamin Thompson, the Stamford Township, farmer, who died from paris green poisoning. The jury viewed the body and adjourned till to-day. Dr. Kellam performed the post-mortem. The stomach will be sent to Toronto for analysis.

HULL BOYS IGNITE POWDER CAUSING AN EXPLOSION

Ten Meet Violent Death and 180 Are Hurt—Windows all Over Ottawa Broken by the Shock and Stones Are Hurled Two Miles.

Ottawa, May 9.—Boys playing in the fields started a brush fire which caused the explosion yesterday afternoon of the magazine of the General Explosives Co. in Hull, Que.

Fourteen deaths and at least twenty cases of serious injury constitute the tale of casualties, while the damage to Hull and to the neighboring city of Ottawa may reach $100,000. The list of dead may be added to.

The factory comprised a number of small buildings on the outskirts of Hull. It was devoted to the manufacture of a specially powerful explosive used in railway construction and similar work. It is under ordinary conditions of handling extremely safe.

Uneasiness has been felt in Hull at the situation of the factory. While on the outskirts of the town, it was situated within two or three hundred yards of a number of shacks inhabited by poor people. The City Council had taken steps to oblige the company to remove its establishment, but the litigation resulted in a defeat for the municipality, the latest judgment in the case having been rendered a short time ago.

The fire started by the small boys, extended about five p.m., to a building used as a workshop. This burned quietly for about three-quarters of an hour, when the building in which the detonators were stored, exploded with a sharp report, which was heard all over the city of Ottawa.

About two minutes afterwards the main magazine, which contained about five tons of the explosive, detonated with a tremendous shock. The noise was peculiarly sharp and enormous clouds of smoke rose to a great height in the air, while stones, many of which were of great size, were showered upon the adjoining area, many of them wrecking buildings hundreds of yards away. Thousand of windows were shattered in both Hull and Ottawa.

The fire had attracted a great number of spectators, and it was due to their presence that the terribly heavy casualty list is to be ascribed. The hail of falling stones beat them down in numbers. In particular, a bridge over Brewery Creek was thronged with onlookers, and it is feared that some of those struck down are submerged beneath the waters of the stream.

All the hospitals of Ottawa are filled with the injured, and including slight injuries by falling stone, it is believed that from 100 to 150 casualties have occurred.

The dead are:

Theodore Gagne, laborer, Wright street.

Antoine Cervantes, a boy of 12 years of age, St. Henri street.

Two daughters of Patrick Carriere, Chaudiere street, aged 12 and 14 years, both deaf and dumb, and both killed by a boulder which came crashing through the roof of their home.

Louis McCann, 16 years of age, living near Brewery Creek.

Robert Ash, 63 years of age.

Ferdinand Laurin, 33 years of age, married, Chaudiere street.

John Lancefield, Chelsea road, aged 35.

Young son of Ald. Labelle, who fell out of one of the broken windows of his home on to the street beneath when explosion occurred.

The seriously wounded are:

Miss Brisson, leg broken.

P. Dupois, arm broken.

Patrick Blaishfield, internal injuries.

George Coleman, leg broken.

M. Seguin, skull fractured.

Hector Fiset, skull fractured.

Walter Scott.

Robert Hastey.

Allan Hartley.

Henry Longley.

The effect of the explosion was extremely capricous. Windows were broken in the most distant parts of Ottawa, and yet the damage suffered in Hull, apart from the buildings adjacent to the factory, on the whole was less than the destruction in Ottawa.

Government House, which is nearly three miles away from the scene of the explosion, was a peculiarly heavy sufferer, a great number of its windows being smashed.

All over Ottawa plate glass windows fell in fragments, and it was particularly remarked that nearly every bank in the city suffered.

Practically every bank last night had a policeman stationed in front of its vacant window frame.

Many curious effects of the explosion are noticable. For instance, in many cases windows on the front of the building turned towards the scene of the explosion escaped. Again, stone buildings seemed to fare better than those of brick, and it was noticeable in Hull that the numerous small wooden dwelling houses suffered very little, the damage being for the most part confined to large windows in the business section.

The Parliament buildings, which occupy the highest point in Ottawa, and are built of stone, suffered very little. One of the chimneys at Government House was bent so badly that it had to be taken down at once. Stones and boulders were hurled an immense distance, and in some cases crashed through the roofs of houses two miles away. Several deaths were caused in this way.

The explosion occurred at a quarter to six o'clock and caused great consternation in Ottawa. Hull is overlooked from the Ottawa bank of the river, and especially from Parliament Hill, and in an incredibly short time the hill and all the portions of the bank of the river which afforded a view of Hull were black with spectators, while there was a rush by motor, cab and street car to the scene of the disaster. The direct money loss will probably not exceed $100,000.

The buildings of the factory were not expensive, and the number of hands employed was only four or five. The quantity of explosives in store was only five tons. By far the heaviest item of damage is the breaking of glass.

The catastrophe afforded a remarkable example of the perversity of human nature. The danger of an explosion was perfectly well understood, the Hull fire brigade would not fight the fire and the buildings burned undisturbed, and meanwhile, with the danger threatening, thousands of spectators gathered within striking distance of the stones which were hurled in the air. Most of the casualties were caused by this fact.

NATIONALISTS SYMPATHIZE

London, May 9.—William O'Brien, M.P. for Cork, addressing an "All for Ireland" meeting at Bandon, paid a tribute to King Edward as being no more truly a peacemaker anywhere than in Ireland.

"For the first time possibly in an unhappy history of eight centuries," said Mr. O'Brien, "a meeting of Irishmen, who are Nationalists to the marrow in their bones, may begin proceedings by laying a tribute of respect and genuine sorrow upon the coffin of an English King."

BERNIER TO CHECK COOK'S FIGURES

Callicoon, N.Y., May 9.—Four sledges built for work in the Arctic were shipped here to Capt. Joseph Bernier of the Canadian marine, yesterday by Theodore A. Cook, a brother of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the explorer, who lives here. Capt. Bernier leaves next month on a trip of exploration through the territory that Dr. Cook christened Bradley Land, and will try to determine the accuracy of Cook's assertions and observations.

WARLIKE ENTHUSIASM IN ECUADOR

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 8.—The Government has addressed the following note to the press: "Notify the public that nothing has been arranged as yet with Peru. The international situation is stationary. Ecuador sustains her rights, based upon the justice of her cause."

MILLIONS OF FRENCH MONEY FOR CANADA

Montreal, May 9.—O. B. D'Aouot of the banking house of Rodolph E. Forget, M.P., who had been preaching the gospel of Canada as a place of investment in Paris and other financial centres in the republic, returned Saturday with the announcement that a group of bankers and capitalists are ready to place $50,000,000 in the Dominion, and that French moneyed men now considered that Canada is the last bargain counter of the world.

Suicide at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, May 9.—Otto Pearson, a Norwegian, suicided by shooting himself in the mouth in his boarding-house on Banning street. He was aged 35 and single. No reason is known for his act.

J. A. Antonison, city engineer, recently appointed manager of public utilities, has resigned and it is expected he will accept a position as city engineer of London, Ont.

GAVE BARONESS VAUGHAN BONDS

Brussels, May 9.—M. Vandervelde, the Socialist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, charges in an open letter published Saturday that on the day before he was operated upon, the late King Leopold turned over to Baroness Vaughan $6,000,000 worth of Congo bonds, which could not be found when the Congo was annexed to Belgium.

Goes Down on Maiden Trip.

St. John's, Nfld., May 8—The steamship Normandy, bound from London to Toronto with pig iron on her maiden voyage to become a lake grain carrier, sank 20 miles south of here yesterday after running ashore in a fog. The crew and 50 passengers, including 31 women, were rescued.

THE KING OF CANADA

Canada at one time was regarded as a mere dependency of the United Kingdom, but it is now recognized as having equal status with the mother country as one of the Kingdoms of the Empire. King George is King of Canada as truly as he is king of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India. Australia and New Zealand are also kingdoms, and the new confederation in South Africa will no doubt have the same rank. For sake of convenience the King is represented in Canada by the Governor-General, but in all the official business of the country as well as in the courts of law the reign of the King is recognized. Yet the British form of government is so admirably balanced that we have here the most democratic system in the world. More truly even than in the United States, the people have absolute control wherever they choose to exercise it and Canada may be described as a republic with a King.

THE GOOD KING GEORGE

King George comes to the throne at the age of forty-five. In political life a man of forty-five is called young and even if the King should live to no greater age than King Edward did, his reign would last for twenty-four years. Babes, as yet unborn, may grow up, be married and have children of their own in twenty-four years, and many wonderful things will happen in the British Empire in that time. But the King has good health, a good constitution and has always lived temperately, so that there is reason to hope that he may live as long as his grandmother, Queen Victoria, did. What a great country Canada will be long before the end of his reign!

King Edward will be known in history as the Peacemaker. What will be the distinguishing characteristic of King George? Whatever other titles he may earn during his reign, we believe there is no doubt that he will be known as the good King George. His Grandfather, the Prince Consort, was known as Albert the Good, and King George in many ways resembles him. His life has always been exemplary, and the example he will set to the people of the Empire may be of incalculable value in elevating the moral tone of the many communities under the British flag.

The Montreal Star gives an estimate of King George which very aptly sets forth his present qualifications for the high office he now holds. The Star says:—

"He has not had the long training for the duties of kingship that his father had. He has not that extensive and intimate knowledge of the secret politics of Europe that King Edward possessed when he came to the throne. He has not enjoyed the intimacy of the great British statesmen of the Victorian era, as did the dead King. He has not had opportunity to develop that remarkable tact which characterized Edward VII. But he is a young man of sound intelligence and pleasing manner, who is on terms of friendly relationship with the chief European Sovereigns, who clearly understands the principles of constitutional government, who is in sympathy with the progressive spirit of the times, who has performed the functions which fell to his lot as Heir Apparent, conscientiously and acceptably, if not with brilliancy, and who gives promise of bearing with dignity and devotion the high honor and heavy responsibility which now devolve upon him as head of the world's greatest Empire."

King George visited Canada a number of times while Prince, and he has seen almost every part of the British Empire. He is an observant man and learned much during his travels. He will begin his reign with a more intimate personal knowledge and appreciation of the British Dominions beyond the seas than any previous Sovereign. This may prove of more value in this age of imperial progress than King Edward's extensive knowledge of European politics.

A PRECEDENT FOR MR. FIELDING

The latest excuse given for Hon. Mr. Fielding's acceptance of the gift of $120,000, collected for him, is that William Lyon Mackenzie, the famous rebel, accepted a gift in his old age. The following letter written by Mackenzie to the late Alexander Nasmyth of Goderich, has been published to show that Mr. Fielding has a precedent.

"Losing all as I did — struggling along as I have done—I feel grateful to those who desire to aid the homestead. I have labored almost forty years for the country; why should I object to their doing a little for me, pecuniarily, at my advanced stage of life. No man can feel more pleased than I am at the course taken by my friends and I fear to take any step that meets not their approval."

The only resemblance between the case of William Lyon Mackenzie, Revolutionist, and that of William Stevens Fielding, Finance Minister of Canada, is that just as William Lyon Mackenzie tried to take Canada out of the British Empire, so William Stevens Fielding tried to take Nova Scotia out of the Canadian Confederation. Neither succeeded. It must be said for Hon. William Stevens Fielding that he is probably now ashamed of his record as a secessionist. He certainly is not proud of it, for he never mentions it. William Lyon Mackenzie, on the other hand was apparently, until the day of his death, proud of his rebellious record and imagined that the people of Canada owed him a debt of gratitude.

In one respect there was a great difference between the position of the two men. William Lyon Mackenzie was not an office holder. He was receiving no salary from the Canadian people. He was not in a position to grant favors to anyone. William Stevens Fielding has been in office at Halifax and at Ottawa for over 27 years, drawing a big salary all the time. At the time he accepted his huge tip he had been Finance Minister of Canada for nearly fourteen years. No doubt many of the men who contributed to the fund had received great favors from him and, if he continues to hold the position of Finance Minister he has power to grant them great favors in the future.

The Heckler Won.

At the Canadian Club in Toronto the other day Rev. Dr. J. A. Macdonald told a story which he heard from Hamar Greenwood at the banquet to Premier Asquith in England last summer. Greenwood had been heckled beyond endurance at a meeting by a professional who had been fortified in the accustomed way. A sympathizer in the audience finally called out to Greenwood:

"Don't mind 'im. 'E's no good, 'E let 'is wife go the work 'us tod'y."

The drunken heckler was equal to the occasion.

"Don't you blime me, guv'nor, till you see the missus."

Dr. Macdonald declared that the land question was at the root of all Britain's economic troubles. With the land so limited and the people so many it would require the utmost wisdom in economics to divide it fairly, instead of wisdom there had been folly colossal for centuries past.

An Engineer In a Studio.

Of Sir Edward Poynter, to whom the King is giving another sitting for his Academy portrait, a good story is told. While painting his first success, "Israel in Egypt," which represents a crowd of Israelites dragging a huge statue of a sphinx across a desert, Sir John Hawkshaw, the famous engineer, looked in and, after puzzling Sir Edward considerably by dotting down figures on a scrap of paper, exclaimed, "My dear fellow, this will never do; the weight of the sphinx is so much, but your Israelites are not developing nearly enough horse-power to drag it! You must double the number of your Jews." And so he did.

TRY THE MONEY-BACK CURE FOR INDIGESTION

Nine times in ten stomach derangements are responsible for sallow complexion, dull eyes and thin body.

It is the stomach that supplies nourishing blood to the muscles, the nerves, and skin. If the stomach is healthy, plenty of nutritious matter will be absorbed by the blood. If it is not healthy, the food will ferment, and undigested, will pass along through the bowels, furnishing so little nutritious matter that the blood becomes impoverished, and the glow of health vanishes.

If you suffer from nervousness, sick headache, belching of gas, sour taste in the mouth, heaviness after eating, or any other miserable stomach disturbance, you need Mi-o-na, and the sooner you get it the quicker you will be healthier and happier.

It will relieve any distressed stomach condition almost immediately. It will cure if used according to directions. Wm. Madill sells it for 50 cents a large box, and he thinks enough of it to guarantee it to cure indigestion.

WRECK OF "COLBORNE"

FAMOUS DISASTER OF 1838 COST FORTY-THREE LIVES.

Only Twelve of Vessel's Company Ever Touched Land Again—Two Hundred Thousand Dollars In Specie Went Down and an Immensely Valuable Cargo of General Merchandise.

Throughout the two old provinces of Canada there was in the year 1838 no name better known or more frequently mentioned than that of Sir John Colborne.

The uprising against the Government that had broken out in 1837 flared up again in the following year, and Sir John, as commander-in-chief of the forces in Canada, was the man of the hour.

Before his military operations the flame of insurrection was soon stamped out, although it has been charged that on some occasions he was unnecessarily severe.

However, that is not under consideration here.

In order that he might have a table service in keeping with his high position, and style of living, he caused to be sent out from England a valuable collection of silver plate, and by a rather remarkable coincidence the plate was shipped on a vessel that bore Sir John's name, the Colborne, of Hull, England.

The Colborne was a barque of 350 tons, commanded by Captain Kent, an experienced seaman. During August, 1838, she took on her cargo at London, and considering the smallness of the vessel, it was one of the most valuable cargoes ever shipped out of the Thames., consisting of general merchandise, wines, spirits, sperm oil and spices.

Besides this Sir John Colborne's valuable plate, a large collection of costly ornaments for churches in Lower Canada and £40,000 in specie in boxes, each box containing one thousand sovereigns. A large portion of this money belonged to the Government, and much of it was intended to be used in paying the troops in Canada. Some of the gold was for the Canadian banks.

The crew of the Colborne consisted of seventeen men, and besides the crew there were thirty-eight passengers. Among the passengers were a number of British officers going out to join the forces in Canada, and their wives and children—Capt. Jas. Elliott Hudson, his wife, five daughters and four sons; Mr. Wm. Walker, of the Royal Navy, brother-in-law to Capt. Hudson; Capt. Bucket and wife, and others of like rank. A number of Canadians were also on board—Mr. W. Scobell, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mrs. Wilson, of the same place; Mrs. Keast, of Toronto; Mr. George Manly, deputy sheriff of Quebec, and others.

The passengers were, with few exceptions, persons of means such as to-day are to be found in the first-class cabin of an ocean liner.

On August 30th the Colborne sailed from London.

The wind was favorable, the Colborne quickly passed down the Thames, and was soon at sea buffeting with the waves of the Atlantic with her bows turned towards the distant shores of Canada.

The Colborne never again entered port.

She reached Canada, but only to be stranded on the rock-bound coast of the Gaspesian peninsula.

Of the fifty-five souls who sailed on the Colborne out of London harbor, only twelve ever set foot on land again, and the greater part of her cargo of gold and silver plate and valuable merchandise went with the forty-three victims of the wreck to the bottom of the Bay of Chaleur.

On the night of October 15th, forty-five days after sailing from London, the Colborne was well in the Bay of Chaleur and close to the Gaspe coast.

Her destination was Quebec, and, therefore, instead of being in the Bay of Chaleur, she should have been passing up the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

That she was so far out of her course shows that a fatal and inexcusable error had been made in the reckonings.

As night came on the Captain sighted a light which he said was on Anticosti Island in the Gulf.

"I strongly maintained to him," said one of the survivors in relating the tragic story of that awful night, "that at that time no such light was kept up.

"Therein lay our trouble."

This survivor was Joseph Jones Acteson, who for many years after the wreck resided at l'Anse-aux-Gascons, a small Gaspe coast village not far from Port Daniel, and near the scene of the loss of the Colborne. Thirty-three years after the wreck Mr. Acteson was visited by Sir James LeMoine, and to that well-known litterateur he gave an account of the disaster.

There was some attempt to collect the wreckage on behalf of those interested either as owners or insurers, and some of it was sold at auction on the spot, articles worth many pounds being knocked down for a few shillings.

Scattered along the shore much of the wreckage was never accounted for, although it was put to good use by those who found it.

The tragic story of the Colborne may be closed with the outlines of a chapter of romance. The long-boat in which Acteson, three other sailors and a few of the passengers drifted about throughout the night, was brought to shore in the early morning by a party of natives of Anse-aux-Gascons, who gallantly put out to their rescue as soon as daylight dawned. Among the rescuers was a man named Chedor.

He had a daughter named Isabella, and not long after the wreck she became the wife of Acteson, the man whom her father had rescued. At Anse-aux-Gascons and in the adjoining parish the descendants of this pair are living to this day.

Moro pirates attacked a settlement in the Celebes and killed a number of traders and natives.

THE FIRE RANGER.

Time Is Coming For Him to Resume His Woodland Shack.

The early departure of winter and the premature coming of the warm winds and sunshine mean early work for the Government fire-ranger in those vast forest reserves of northern Ontario. The green color which is now beginning to creep over the woods and plains of old Ontario as a result of the rejuvenating forces of the springtime is absent in the new land to the north. There the mosses and fibrous undergrowth, from which spring wide stretches of virgin pine, will soon be brown and sear under the drying influence of these early spring days, and the demon fire will be ready to find his prey amongst such inflammable material. Larger than ever will be the force of rangers this season to go as fire-fighters, and as protectors of the country's valuable heritage in New Ontario. These worthy officials will begin to seek their lodgings in the wilderness of lake and forest this month, and will remain there until the frost and snow come again in the late autumn. The pair of youths on the job patrol the particular route which is their chief care during their months of office. They carry all personal and household effects with them in their canoe, and, being lightly burdened, they travel quickly, preserving the peace of the forest land. Amongst the American tourists who infest the Ontario reserves, the representative of the Government is known as "that ubiquitous fire-ranger." The life of the ranger is one of mingled pleasure and pain, and, on the whole, is very agreeable. Hardship and dangers which are incident to a lonely existence in the wilds are more than counteracted by the joys derived from a perfectly natural life amidst surroundings that have none of the touches of "the strenuous life" of towns and cities.

WHEAT

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,

Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

But Mrs. Morningstar's reply to her question diverted her attention and arrested her sense of astonishment at this puzzling transformation.

"If he had schoolin'? Well, I don't know if he was to college like yous. But this I kin say—he kin read wonderful good off the noospaper. Why, you wouldn't know it was readin'—you'd think he was just talkin'."

"Now I'd put it the other way round," said Mr. Morningstar critically. "I'd say his talkin' sounds as if he was readin'. Pete," he asked, "was you to such a college ever?"

"Well," said Pete tentatively, "I seen a college oncet when I was in town."

Daisy gave forth a little squeal of amusement, but instantly pulled her countenance straight again, with an apprehensive glance toward Georgiana.

"Most young men," remarked Georgiana, glancing from Pete to Abe, "are discontented in the country these days and are ambitious to get to town. I think it a pity often. Country life is so much more healthful—spiritually, I mean."

Abe did not even look up, but Pete, his mouth full of potato, replied, "My job out here suits me all right."

"Discontented?" questioned Mr. Morningstar. "We've got enough to eat and a little over. What more can a person want?"

But the usually tongue tied daughter Ollie here spoke up. "I guess a body wants a little pleasure, too, still," she said sulkily, scowling at her father; then suddenly, overwhelmed with shyness at the sound of her own voice, she colored violently and bent her eyes to her plate.

Mr. Morningstar's small eyes and mouth seemed to contract as he looked at her. "I ain't leavin' you run," he obstinately affirmed. "Eunice she never asts me has she the dare to go any."

"Yes, well, but"—Mrs. Morningstar came to the defense of her own in loud tones—"it's some different, too, with your own flesh and blood and a adopted child. It wouldn't become Eunice to be astin' to go. She's to work and pay fur bein' kep' ever since she was too little to work yet. Your own child, that's different again. You might leave Ollie go oncet, pop, to this here ice cream festible in town. She's wonderful set on it. And you don't never leave her travel in society."

"I ain't leavin' her," he replied, with quiet stubbornness. "She'd want to spend some at the festible, and she'd stay late, and then when she'd have to git up early tomorrow she'd git sick fur me, and I'd have to have a doctor fur her."

"Well, leave her oversleep her breakfast oncet. Eunice she kin do some of Ollie's work tomorrow mornin' till Ollie feels fur gittin' up."

Eunice did not again raise her eyes or manifest any sign of her feelings in hearing herself thus disposed of.

"I said Ollie wasn't to go now!" Mr. Morningstar returned sharply. But Ollie scowled during all the rest of the meal.

"Well," Mr. Morningstar presently said, rising and pushing his chair away from him as he drew the back of his hand across his mouth, "I must go out back now and separate. Would yous mebbe like to see me separate?" he inquired of the young ladies.

"Separate?" questioned Daisy, her head a bit on one side to catch a new fact on the wing, as it were.

"To see the milk and cream separated apart by our new milk separator where I bought off of such a agent from New York over," Mr. Morningstar explained.

"How perfectly dear!" cried Daisy, rising at once, her notebook ready in her hand. "Will you come, Georgiana?"

"Yous kin see what runs the machinery all," the farmer said as they followed him out of the kitchen.

"Isn't it perfectly dear and quaint, Georgiana!" exclaimed Daisy volubly as they went across the room to the door. "Everything is so rural!"

While Mrs. Morningstar and the two girls were clearing away the dinner the former pronounced it as her opinion that "that Doc" was "a black eyed sharper" who had committed some crime which made him afraid to be recognized by "towners."

CHAPTER V.

"SO that," mused Peter Kinross as, dressed in overalls and with his hair grotesquely plastered down with Abe Morningstar's pomatum, he strolled about at dusk that evening under the trees of the orchard, smoking his after supper cigar, "is the renowned Miss Georgiana Ellery, the beautiful, the accomplished! Sentimental," he pronounced, "from the crown of her head to the soles of her shoes! And intellectual! It would take a pretty brave man to go in for her! Well," he concluded, bending back his head and blowing out puffs of smoke, "she's a fair type of what the woman's college turns out nowadays. But, by Jupiter, a more stunningly beautiful girl I never saw!"

In spite, however, of this conclusion, he patted himself on the head for his cleverness in having devised so excellent a scheme for the preservation of his liberty. What a boredom it spared him!

There was one phase of his escapade which was not so pleasant to contemplate—the discovery of his deception when he should be obliged to meet these two young ladies in his true character upon his return to college in the fall.

His stroll had brought him to the fence which separated the orchard from the lane, and suddenly he stopped short and took his cigar from his mouth. There, a few feet away, leaning against the fence, stood Eunice. In the deepening twilight he had not seen her until nearly at her side.

Her relaxed attitude betrayed the weariness of her young body at the end of the day's toil, and the droop of her head against her hand suggested the pensiveness of her mind.

He felt glad that he had come upon her; he was so curious to know how his disguise affected her. She had actually been surprised into a faint smile of amusement at the dinner table. It had fairly startled him.

In the lane outside the fence four little boys were playing, children from neighboring farm laborers' cottages, and Eunice was watching them idly.

The dialogue of the little cubs was diverting, so he, too, rested against the fence and listened to them. He thought she must surely have heard his approach, but she did not stir.

"I used to be a towner—I lived at Lebanon," one boy was boasting.

"Aw," scorned the other, "I lived furder'n that—I used to live out west yet!"

"Aw, why, you couldn't!" The first gave him the lie without ceremony. "The Indians would kill you if you lived out west!"

"I did too! Say, Reddy, didn't I used to live out west?"

"Yes, you did," Reddy championed him.

"But there's 550 Indians out west!" exclaimed the first boy statistically. "A body couldn't live out there!"

"Aw!" sneered Reddy, "come off! You're thick! A body can't hardly learn you nothin'! The Indians ain't wild no more—they're tamed now!"

The dispute ended in a fist fight which led the combatants further down the road and out of earshot.

"Boys are queer animals, aren't they?"

She did not turn to look at him. For an instant she did not answer. Then, low and soft, her voice fell upon the still evening.

"'Queer animals?' But they are embryo men!"

But the words were not uttered before he realized that the space where she had stood was empty. She had turned and fled like a frightened bird. He stared after her retreating figure, his sense of the mystery which hung about her affecting him strangely.

"Was that the girl Eunice to whom I spoke and who answered me in such wise? 'They are embryo men!' Embryo. A girl who asks me who this Andrew Carnegie is anyway!"

He turned back to lean upon the fence again, put his cigar to his lips, and meditatively blew a long cloud of smoke into the air.

"By gosh!"

It expressed, as no other comment could have done, the state of his mind.

CHAPTER VI.

A FEW days later Dr. Kinross, dressed in his overalls and lying on his back in the woods behind a pile of logs, found himself in the enforced position of an eavesdropper and felt it exceedingly awkward. A few feet away, beneath his own favorite shade tree, sat Miss Georgiana Ellery and Miss Daisy Parks. He had not counted upon their penetrating to this resort to which he came daily with his books. His telltale volume and compromising leisure, in the middle of the afternoon, from the farm work in which he was supposed to be engaged made it imperative at the warning signal of their voices that he should scramble out of sight behind a nearby pile of logs. He had barely had time to conceal himself when they had come into view and presumptuously proceeded to settle themselves for the afternoon in the comfortable spot which their coming forced him to abandon, thus making it impossible for him to move an inch without discovery and placing him in the descreditable position of being obliged to hear everything that was said.

Georgiana with her serious views.

"Have you noticed, Daisy," he heard Georgiana's atractive voice asking, almost as soon as they were seated, "anything about that farm hand, Peter, which has impressed you as singular?"

"He isn't as woozy looking as 'pop' and Abe," Daisy promptly answered.

"Daisy! How can you, in the very heart of the country, use that detestable city slang?"

"Well, Georgie," Daisy returned plaintively, "I'm sure I never wanted to go to college. You and uncle made me!"

"Did college do nothing for you but give you a vocabulary of slang?"

"But, Georgie, Pete isn't as woozy looking—I mean," she hastily corrected herself, "he's rather good looking and—as there's nothing else doing out here I'm thinking of flirting with Pete, if you won't kick—object, I should say."

"Why Pete? Why not Abe?" Georgiana inquired tolerantly.

"Abe's too woozy—oh! I don't want to jar you, Georgiana—forgive me. Of course I feel, too, how perfectly dear and sweet it is out here with so much nature around and—everything—but I just thought I'd mention, since there's nothing doing, just to keep up my courage a little, you know, I'd encourage Pete to fall in love with me. Do you know," she said thoughtfully, "I shouldn't wonder if Pete would be quite good looking if he were sported up."

"He has impressed you," affirmed Georgiana, "because there is something singular about him. I feel it, too—the way the family treats him, with an air of uncertainty—I can't explain just what it is—but they don't behave toward him as one would expect to see a hired farmhand treated. And his face—have you noticed? It is usually so remarkably heavy and unintelligent, but now and then when I unexpectedly catch his eye I find him gazing at me with an expression so keen and penetrating that I am startled, and then the moment he finds me looking at him he has a relapse—falls back into that hopeless imbecility! It is very extraordinary."

"Dear me!" said Daisy, surprised. "I had not supposed you would think him worth while, Georgiana."

"Every one is worth while, Daisy, when you get at his real self. As for Peter, he certainly does have intervals when his mind seems to awaken. He isn't quite so crude as the rest of the family either. I dropped a hatpin this morning, and he fairly sprang across the room to pick it up for me. I was so surprised."

He wondered, with consternation, whether even his disguise were going to fail him.

"While he does speak in the provincial dialect," continued Georgiana, with careful discrimination, "his accent and his voice are not so harsh as those of the other people here. And he doesn't have that queer Pennsylvania Dutch inflection. When the others speak I never can tell whether they are asking something or telling something. But you can distinguish when Pete speaks."

"As a success," mused Kinross, "I'm a failure! Next thing they'll surmise who I am."

"By the way,"—Georgiana changed the subject with a disregard for the sequence of ideas that Kinross would have thought not possible to one so philosophical—"how about your letter this morning from Belle Dasher? Aren't you going to read it to me?"

"I'm afraid," Daisy answered doubtfully, "it will jar you, Georgiana, it's so sporty."

"Read it," Georgiana urged.

"Then don't blame me," Daisy warned. "You know what a corker Belle is!"

A rustle of stiff paper suggested to Kinross the opening of the letter referred to.

"'I foresee the fate of Georgiana,'" Daisy glibly read, "'when she comes home in the fall and meets our swell new prof., Dr. Peter Kinross. That chaste Diana cannot fail to lose her heart to this Endymion if for no other reason than that the man won't notice her. He won't take girls seriously. (Georgiana will see that he takes her seriously, won't she?) He seems to think that girls belong only to the holiday side of life, and he hasn't time for holidays. I'm crazy to have him meet Georgiana with her serious views. He'll learn then that some girls can't be taken lightly, I might say mockingly (for he is the most sarcastic pig I ever saw; I can't abide him). I am sure Georgiana will surprise and impress him'— Oh," Daisy broke off gleefully, "jilt him, Georgiana, won't you?"

"Do you know, Daisy," Georgiana returned earnestly, "a man like that, who is repelled by the lack of earnestness in the average girl whom one meets socially"—

("Am I that kind of chump?" Kinross wondered.)

—"such a man," Georgiana continued thoughtfully, "I might be able to welcome on my own line of march, to clasp hands with him, to find a oneness"—

("Thank God I thought of these overalls," Kinross told himself fervently.)

"One can't trust Belle Dasher's opinion of a man, though," Daisy inserted. "She's such a man hater. She hates men so I wonder she even has a man for a brother-in-law! She says she thinks men, as a sex, are very much overrated."

Georgiana had no reply to make to these inane comments, and for awhile there was silence between them, the only sound coming to Kinross' ears being the rattle of paper indicating the turning of the pages of books. This continued so long that he began to grow restive. If he moved hand or foot they would hear and discover him. Were they going to sit there and read for the rest of the afternoon? Already he was becoming cramped from being in one position so long. But how get out of his predicament? To make his presence known and reveal the fact that he had heard their discussion of himself—that is, of Pete, the farmhand—would be embarrassing—to them, of course. He himself could bear up under it complacently enough.

"Something's got to be done!" he thought, feeling an intolerable necessity for stretching his legs.

The two young ladies, engrossed in their reading, were suddenly startled by the sound of a long drawn yawn, coming apparently out of space.

"What was that?" cried Daisy.

"A tramp?" Georgiana whispered [illegible] calm. She never allowed externals to disturb her inward serenity, for it was possible for the soul to live on a plane above all outward things.

"Where?" demanded Daisy in a tragic voice.

"I don't know," said Georgiana.

Another prolonged yawn and the sound of rustling leaves very near.

"Behind those logs?" suggested Daisy fearfully.

"Let us go away," said Georgiana, speaking, it must be admitted, nervously.

"But in what direction shall we go? I'm not sure he's behind those logs."

"Look and see," begged Georgiana.

"It's up to you," declared Daisy with unexpected rebellion. "I'm afraid. I admit it!"

Georgiana cautiously rose and took a few steps to the logs. Dr. Kinross stretched his arms above his head and yawned ostentatiously.

"Oh!" exclaimed Georgiana. "It's Peter!"

"My gracious!" exclaimed Daisy's astonished voice. She sprang to Georgiana's side as Peter sat up.

"I was a-sleepin'—still," he said blinking and yawning.

"Did you hear what we were saying?" demanded Daisy. "And why are you out here, Peter? Why aren't you working with Mr. Morningstar and Abe?"

"I got it so bad in my head, I ast the boss to leave me have off this after. I had the headache, now, something wonderful. But," he added, rising, "I slep' it off. I'm some better."

He noticed that Georgiana's eyes were upon the book he held.

"I'm goin' home now," he announced, taking a step away and checking himself in the act of lifting his hand to his old straw farm hat.

"It is getting a little late, we will go, too," said Georgiana, and Daisy followed her as she moved around the logs to the path where Peter stood.

"I got to hurry," said Peter, edging off. "Yous couldn't walk so fast."

"It won't be good for your headache to hurry, Peter," admonished Daisy, keeping at his side. "What is the book you have?"

Peter gave himself up to the inevitable and walked with them down the hill.

"This here?" he said, holding up a volume labeled "Vedanta Philosophy—Raja Yoga—and Other Lectures by Swami Vivekananda."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Daisy, "wouldn't that rattle your slats? What is it?"

"I'll never tell yous. Want to read it?"

"I don't wonder you want to get rid of it. But don't offer it to me! Gracious, what do you take me for, Peter? Miss Ellery might like it."

"Where did you get it, Peter?" Georgiana asked, looking astonished.

"Och," he answered disparagingly, "I borrowed the loan of it off of teacher, but there's too many big words in it."

He found that his disguise was giving him an assurance which he had never before felt in the presence of a girl. To be walking and talking with two young ladies without his customary sense of constraint was indeed a novel experience—and withal a highly agreeable one.

"Teacher?" questioned Georgiana. "The district school teacher? But it is vacation now."

"She boarded at our place and let 'em there over the summer," said Peter, developing a talent for fiction which, if properly utilized, he felt might make his fame.

"How much of it have you read?" asked Georgiana, looking at him kindly.

"Och, I went to sleep the first couple pages a'ready."

"That may be because of your headache," she said encouragingly. She longed to discover a diamond in the rough in Peter.

"I will lend you this," said Daisy patronizingly, holding up the book she carried. "My uncle thought it would be good mental discipline for me to read it, but—well, I haven't finished it, but no matter. Keep it as long as you like, Peter, I won't be selfish."

Peter received the book and read the title laboriously, like a small boy spelling out his words, "Some Facts About the Great Back-Boned Family." "What fur a family's that?" he asked.

"Don't ask me. Read it yourself."

He handed it back to her. "Gimme an interestin' story and I'll read it."

"Peter," Daisy gravely admonished him, "have you no ambition to improve your mind?"

"I know enough to get along. What's the use of botherin' your mind with more'n that?"

Daisy sighed with undisguised sympathy.

"I can understand, Peter," said Georgiana thoughtfully, "your preference for fiction rather than for a statistical, scientific work like that. No doubt you feel without fully comprehending it the more inward significance of fancies that embody spiritual truths than of isolated hard facts about the Back Boned family which lead nowhere."

"Now," mused Kinross, "that wouldn't be so bad if she weren't talking to a farmhand. If only she didn't give herself over so entirely to her little pose of being superior," he thought ruefully, "she might be very attractive—she's so tremendously good looking. I wonder what she would be like if she dropped it."

"Pete," said Daisy, "one of these days I want you to hire Abe's horse and buggy from him and take me for a drive and show me the country, will you? Of course I'll pay the price. Abe's so tight across the chest he'd never give it to us for nothing."

"Oh, Daisy," gently protested Georgiana, "what an expression! Instead of trying to give these people higher standards you would debase their taste with your low—yes, low—slang."

"Economical," Daisy corrected herself. "Abe's so economical, I mean. Will you take me driving, Pete?" she asked ingratiatingly.

Instead of looking gratified, as she expected him to do, Peter appeared rather daunted at the prospect.

"Oh, Pete," Daisy reassured him, "you needn't mind me. Now, if it were Miss Ellery that asked you you might be scared white!"

"You see," Pete explained apologetically, "us we're so common out here towards what yous are—no wonder if a body felt funny takin' one of yous buggy ridin'. Us we don't know nothin' but to sleep and feed our faces."

"If you will make yourself worthy of better things, Peter, they will come to you," said Georgiana earnestly. "All the good things of the universe come to him who is ready for them."

"Good things? What, now, would you call good things?" he asked curiously.

"Love, for instance," said Georgiana, with uplifted countenance.

"Umph!" he grunted. "I never thought so much of this here love like some thinks. I always held that Adam would of been better off if he'd kep' his rib."

"Why, Peter," cried Daisy, "I never would have suspected you of having such views!"

They had reached the farm, and at this moment they encountered the girl Eunice carrying two heavy pails of milk from the barn toward the spring house. Abe, the farmer's son, walked at her side, apparently pursuing her with some request which she refused him, for her face was troubled and she hurried a step ahead of him.

Almost before he knew what he was doing Kinross was at the girl's side, relieving her of both her pails. She colored with confusion before a gallantry to which she was unaccustomed, while Abe scowled resentfully and skulked off in another direction.

"Did you see that?" asked Georgiana as she and Daisy went into the kitchen. "It would never occur to Abe to carry those heavy pails for that slender looking girl. I believe there is a latent fineness in this Peter"—

"It's awfully latent, dear," said Daisy, with unaccustomed disagreement. "Don't you think so?"

"I believe that he has fine, though undeveloped perceptions or intuitions," affirmed Georgiana, "which, with a little encouragement, may reveal him to himself."

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. A. Brace, of Cobourg a Former Pastor, Conducted the Services – An Occasion of Much Interest and Helpfulness

The first anniversary of Park St. Baptist church was observed yesterday, and the services in the beautiful edifice were most interesting, and the attendance was large.

The Rev. A. H. Brace, of Cobourg, a former pastor of the church, was the speaker for the day, and, he, besides taking the pulpit both morning and evening, spoke at the session of the Sunday school.

Rev. Mr. Brace was given an attentive hearing as he gave his messages, and the day was one of deep interest and helpfulness to all.

The choir, under the leadership of Mr. J. C. Millen, contributed special music, which added much to the enjoyment of the services. The church was profusely decorated with flowers and everything was in harmony with the spirit of the occasion.

The subject of the morning discourse was, "A Doctor of Divinity in a Fix and the Higher Critics Put to the Test." Rev. Mr. Brace took his text from the last part of the ninth verse of John 3, "How can these things be?" These words, said the preacher, fell from the lips of Nicodemus. Jesus had been talking to him about regeneration. Nicodemus was in a great fix. He did not understand the meaning of "You must be born again." God's word distinctly says, without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin; but the higher critics would say, we cannot accept the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ; we cannot accept the personality of the Holy Spirit.

Jesus says, "a new heart will I give you." Regeneration is a vital question and the right understanding of which is of the greatest importance to everyone. There are the unregenerated and regenerated. Unregenerated is the form in which the spirit finds us, and regeneration is the purity into which the spirit leads us. Men are born degenerate, but we are not responsible for being born regenerate. We have no say in it. We are born in vice, shame and iniquity, but God has made provision for eternal salvation by virtue of the atoning blood of the Lord Jesus Christ.

To-day the case is altered. There is no heaven for us without the new birth—the surrendering of our hearts to God. To-day we are responsible for the stage on which we are. "The flush on your face or the trembling that came over you when you told the first lie, showed that you are responsible," said Rev. Mr. Brace.

Those who are subjects for regeneration must have the spirit of the poor republican who cried, "Lord be merciful to me, a sinner." Regeneration signifies the renewal of the Holy Spirit. The Father is the source of this regenerative life. It comes by the mercy of Christ and the immediate cause is the Divine Spirit.

Regeneration takes place the moment the heart obeys the Lord Jesus Christ. If we believe in His name, regeneration takes place in our hearts because it is God's work. God does His own work in His own way, and He does it well, but we must first submit to the conditions.

77TH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. ANDREW'S OBSERVED

Rev. T. Campbell Brown M. A. of Toronto Preached at the Services—Special Soloist—Celebration of Trifold Significance

Yesterday at St. Andrew's church was a memorable day in a threefold sense, as it was the occasion of three distinct anniversaries. First in importance, it was the seventy-seventh anniversary of the organization of the First Presbyterian church; next, it was the seventy-fifth anniversary of the erection of the old stone church, and lastly, the twenty-fourth anniversary of the opening of the present church edifice.

In the morning the Rev. Crawford Brown, M.A., pastor of the new St. Andrew's church, Toronto, preached an instructive and thoughtful sermon, his subject being "Individuality of Service.", and he emphasized the fact that no man is at his best without God dwells within him.

Master Wilfrid Morison, the talented youthful singer, who consented to assist at the anniversary services, sang "Face to Face" with the purity of tone and depth of feeling that makes his singing always so effective.

In his morning sermon Mr. Brown referred to life as an opportunity for doing the work of the Master. No nation could ever have been what it was to-day had it not been on account of what the nations before it had done, the speaker said, by way of illustration of what is accomplished by good works and force of example. In the proportion that we followed God's teachings, exactly in that proportion would we be like Him. Everyone was endowed by God with special attributes, and qualities, and we could all do God's work in various callings.

In the afternoon a special half-hour service for the "old folks" was held at 3.30, the centre pews being reserved for them. An address on "Our Perfection Through Suffering," was given by Rev. Mr. Brown, and Master Wilfrid Morison rendered "The Holy City," adding greatly to the pleasure of the service.

In the evening sitting room at the church was at a premium, and many were turned away, being unable to obtain seats. Rev. Mr. Brown's sermon was entitled "Dying to Live," and Master Morison sang with beautiful expression the Twenty-third Psalm of David. At both services splendid anthems were given by the choir, the solo in the morning being taken by Mr. James Browne. Previous to the morning sermon Rev. J. G. Potter referred to the late national calamity caused by King Edward's death, and spoke in glowing terms of the ability and statesmanship of the late Monarch.

The choir of St. Andrew's, under the direction of Mr. Gordon Wright, sang very effectively at the services. In the morning the anthem was "Seek Ye the Lord," and in the evening, "The King of Love, My Shepherd Is."

It is seventy-seven years since the Church of Scotland sent the Rev. John M. Roger to begin Christian work among the settlers of this district, and it is this event that both St. Andrew's and St. Paul's churches are these days celebrating. The Rev. Mr. Roger was inducted in 1883, the first elders elected in 1834 and the erection of the old stone church, familarily known as the Old Kirk, was begun in 1835.

As has already been stated, the great zeal of Mr. Roger led to the formation and growth of many of the surrounding congregations, and his strong and loveable character caused him to be admired, and everywhere highly esteemed.

The first elders were ordained Nov, 2nd, 1834. Their names were as follows:—Andrew Tully, John Hutchinson, John Edmison, and David Hamilton, to represent Peterborough, then a village. Wm. Robson and Robert Thompson to represent the country district at the boundary line of Cavan.

On May 30th, 1835, the congregation received a grant of the lot on which the church, manse and school now stand and the church was built of stone and known as the "Stone Church."

In 1843-4, owing to the great difficulties attendant upon the connection of the Established Church of Scotland with the state, men like Chalmers, Guthrie and Candlish sought relief from the restrictions occasioned thereby, and their leaving the Church of Scotland with their congregations is popularily known as the Disruption.

In Canada general sympathy was expressed in favor of the movement, but the leaders in the Church of Scotland made a strong effort to avert a similar schism in the young church, but in 1844 the action of a large part of the Synod in withdrawing was approved by a large majority of the Peterborough congregation. Notwithstanding their sympathies both parties continued in peaceable occupancy of the property till 1857, when the Free Church Synod sought incorporation, so that it could claim and possess the properties thus peaceably occupied by them. This act disclosed the fact that the property was all vested in the Church of Scotland, and so in the same year the Rev. Mr. Roger, and a very large part of the congregation stepped out and formed a second congregation, and in 1859 their church, known as the "Brick Church," was built, and have enjoyed continued prosperity and usefulness through all these years—a period of seventy-seven years under the pastorate of three men. By the withdrawal of the Rev. Mr. Roger the pulpit of St. Andrew's was left vacant, and in 1858 the Rev. James Struthers Douglas, M.D., was duly inducted to the pastorate of the congregation. The new roll of communicants after the division of the congregation was as follows: William Arnott, May Arnott, Geroge Brownlee, Anne Brownlee, Andrew Cathcart (elder), George Cornwith, Mrs. Cornwith, Mrs. Craigie, Mrs. Cummings, George Cunningham, Mrs. Cunningham, Robert Dennistoun (elder), Mrs. Maxwell Dennistoun, James Dickson, Mrs. Mary Dickson, John Douglas, Mrs. Harriet Douglas, Margaret Drysdale, John Edmison (Elder) Alexander Edmison, sr.; Mrs. C. Edmison, George Edmison, Geo. Fair, Thomas Fortye, Mrs. Thomas Fortye, John Gibbon, Mrs. Sarah Gibbon, Lewis Glover, Mrs. Margaret Glover, Dr. James Holywell, Robert Hood, James Ingles, Mrs. James Ingles, Jas. Jaffray, Mrs. Jaffray, James Johnston, Mrs. James Johnston, Jas. Johnston, jr.; Mrs. Alison Johnston, Wm. Lundy, Mrs. Wm. Lundy, Malcolm MacKellar, Mrs. Margaret MacKellar, Daniel McDonald, Mrs. D. McDonald, John Reid, John Richardson, Mrs. Harriet Richardson, Wm. Richardson, Mrs. Wm. Richardson, John Robertson, Archibald Shearer, Mrs. Arch. Shearer, Mrs. Simpson, Agnes Smith, Wm. Smith, Robert Stenson, James Stewart, Wm. Swanston, Mrs. Wm. Swantson, John Turner, Mrs Janet Turner, Mrs. Wilson, William Adams, Francis P. Blair (Elder), Mrs. Clark, John Craigie, R. Drummond, Henry Edmison, Thomas Gordon, John Harvey, Mrs. May Harvey, A. W. Kempt, Mrs. A. W. Kempt, Mrs. Laverty, Mrs. J. R. Ormond, Mrs. John R. Reid, Richard Smith, Mrs. E. Robinson, Mr. Jaffray, Mrs. Jaffray, Mrs. Denoon, Mrs. John Ross.

During the pastorate of Mr. Doullas, 1858 to 1864, he baptised 247 children, all recorded in the Session Record of that date.

In 1866 the Rev. D. J. Macdonald was ordained and became the minister of the congregation. He was a brilliant man, and it was not a surprise to find him called to the pastorate of New St. Andrew's church, Toronto, in 1870, where he labored with such zeal for the welfare of the entire Canadian church.

Early in the year 1871 the Rev. Kenneth McLennan was inducted, and remained until near the close of 1876, when he removed to an important charge in Charlottetown, P.E.I.

During Mr. McLennan's incumbency the congregation by a unanimous vote went into the union of 1875, and thus became a congregation of the "Presbyterian Church in Canada."

On June 29th, 1877, the Rev. Alexander Bell was inducted, and for thirteen years enjoyed rather a strenuous and interesting pastorate. During these years the handsome new church was built, the corner-stone being laid by Mrs. Nicholls, a devoted member of the church, 29th June, 1885, and was opened May 2nd, 1886. The Rev. Dr. Cochrane, of Brantford, and Rev. D. J. Macdonald, B.D., of Toronto, were the preachers on that occasion.

In 1891 the Rev. Andrew MacWilliams became pastor, and for the next five years the growth of the congregation was most marked. Mr. MacWilliams was an enthusiastic worker, as well as an earnest and faithful preacher, and soon won the affection and loyalty of the people. His response to a very pressing call from St. Andrew's church, Hamilton, left the pulpit vacant, and in August of 1896, the Rev. James G. Potter, of Toronto, was inducted into the pastorate, and continues to occupy that position till the present.

The Elders at present are:—James Petrie, John Mathieson, Thos. Borland, James Given, George Cockburn, William Stevens, J. S. Ferguson, John Hill, J. I. Allen, G. A. Cornish, Thomas Petrie, Wm. Smithson, Richard Lees, M.A., clerk of Session.

The choir is led by Mr. G. Wright, and Mrs. C. S. McClelland, organist; Miss Olive Howell is soprano leader, and Mrs. George W. Wegg is the church officer.

EXPRESS HORSE TOOK TUMBLE

There was considerable excitement on George street about five o'clock Saturday afternoon, when a collision occurred between Ed. File's express waggon and a buggy. The wheels of the two vehicles got caught and the horse attached to the express cart ran on the pavement and fell to the sidewalk. Mr. C. C. Nixon, who was passing, and a couple of other citizens, soon had the animal on its feet and no harm resulted worth mentioning.

SPARKS SET ROOF ABLAZE

The fire brigade had a run to 194 Lake street, Saturday afternoon to extinguish a blaze on the roof of Mr. Thomas Gleason's residence, which had become ignited by sparks from the chimney. The damage was not of much consequence, the blaze being soon put under control by the aid of chemicals.

Mrs. Wm. Guy, a veteran resident of Maxwell, is dead, aged 80.

APPEAL ALLOWED

Case of Havelock Electric Light and Power Co. and Its Shareholders

This was an action brought by Thomas Bennett and Richard Nolan, of Havelock, against Dr. Holdcroft, Alex. Rose, James W. Bryans and Wm. Mathieson, the directors of the Havelock Electric Light and Power Company.

At the trial in January last Daniel O'Connell and G. N. Gordon appeared for Messrs. Bennett and Nolan, and E. Gus Porter, K.C., R. Ruddy, K.C.; S. T. Medd, W. S. Davidson and W. F. Kerr, of Cobourg, appeared for the defendants. The plaintiffs' action was dismissed at the trial, but Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon appealed against the judgment to the Divisional Court, and upon the appeal Mr. Daniel O'Connell appeared for the appellant, E. Gus Porter, K.C., appeared for Dr. Holdcroft, S. T. Medd appeared for the Havelock Electric Light and Power Co., W. S. Davidson appeared for Alex. Rose, W. F. Kerr, of Cobourg, appeared for James W. Bryans and Thomas Curts and R. Ruddy, K.C., appeared for Wm. Mathieson, the only defendant against whom an order was not made to pay $1,000 into court with solicitor and client costs of Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon.

Saturday's Toronto Globe has the following:—

Bennett v. Havelock Electric Light & Power Company.—An appeal by plaintiff from judgment of Britton, J., of January 7, 1910. An action by two shareholders of the Havelock Electric Light & Power Company for judgment concelling and annulling the issue of 200 shares of stock or in alternative that defendants be ordered to pay $4,700 or to be set aside agreement for sale from Mathieson to the company and for an injunction to restrain transfer of these shares. At trial the action was dismissed without costs. Judgment: The appeal should be allowed with costs as against the defendant directors other than Mathieson, and judgment should be entered against them severally for $1,000 and costs subsequent to the date of the amendment. As to Mathieson the action and appeal should be dismissed without costs. The judgment should direct that the money be paid into court and the plaintiffs should be given a lien upon it for the amount of their costs as between solicitor and client properly incurred in this action over and above party and party costs and for so much of the party and party costs as may not be recovered under the personal order and subject to this the money when recovered should be paid out to the company. No order as to the costs of the company. In taxing costs for which a lien is given above the officer will bear in mind that the principle applicable is one "salvage" and will not allow the costs of any proceedings which did not go to create this fund for the company.

THEATRICAL

"The Girl From Rector's"

"The Girl From Rector's" paid her first visit to Peterborough on Saturday and brought with her a pretty capable company of assisting funmakers. Like "The Blue Mouse" and many other European farces, the offering is rather risque in some places but considerable of this broadness is lost sight of in the jollity that arises from the highly amusing farcical situations.

While the action takes place in America the piece was adapted from the French of Pierre Veber and enjoyed prosperous runs in its metropolitan career.

A LARGE FIELD TO BE CORNERED

Shipments of flour in 1909 from Canada increased over 585,000 sacks and over 42,000 barrels over the figures of the previous year, the totals in 1909 being 1,700,000 sacks of flour and 210,000 barrels. Prominent milling men state that there is a large field to be covered in various European centres. While Great Britain is the great flour consuming centre, there is also a demand for Canadian flour from practically every country in Europe, with the exception of Russia. In recent years successful efforts have been made to introduce flour into the Orient. It is generally believed that in a few years a very extensive trade will be worked up especially for the cheaper grades of flour. This extension of the field for Canadian flour is most gratifying to the big Canadian milling companies.

MOTHERS' DAY AT MARK ST.

Services Dedicated to Mothers and Motherhood — Warm Eulogy of King Edward

Yesterday was observed as "Mothers' Day" at Mark Street Methodist church. All the men came wearing a white flower in their button-hole, and both sermon and music were tributes to mothers and motherhood. In the first part of the service Rev. Mr. Coon gave the following tribute to the late King Edward, after which the National Anthem was sung and special prayer offered:

The announcement of the somewhat sudden death of our noble King, Edward VII., on Friday evening last, sent a peculiar thrill through every loyal heart. His reign has been a comparatively short one, continuing for nine years and four months, but sufficiently long to endear him and his noble consort, Alexandra, to all classes of their subjects. Upon his accession to the throne we knew we would love him for his sainted mother's sake, but very soon did we learn to love him for his own. Faithfully has he performed his part in the regal office to which he was called. To the preservation of the country and peace of the nation he has stood out among the rulers of the world, singularly, strong and tactful. True to the policy of peace to which he pledged himself. But for him, it may be safely assumed that ere this Europe might have been baptized with blood. Let us thank God that his own conscience of heaven's approbation was such that with his dying breath he could say: "I think I have done my duty." We bow in quiet submission to the Providence which has removed our King from earth's purest throne, to a court that is heavenly. And while we pray for Divine consolation to fall upon the bereaved royal family and nation, let us turn in loving fealty to him already proclaimed King, through the mist of an empire's tears, George V., who, with his beloved wife, merits a nation's best devotion.

The sermon was one of the most effective talks Mr. Coon has given in Mark St. church, and brought memories of absent and departed mothers to many of those present.

At its close the pastor sang a touching song entitled, "Memories of Mother," the choir joining in the chorus.

MILLS LOCATED IN ONTARIO

The past year has been remarkable for the number of mergers which have been completed and offered to the public. Almost without exception Montreal has been the centre from which these flotations were made. It is only recently that Toronto has come to the front in connection with the flotation of new issues of stock, the most successful Toronto flotation being the Maple Leaf Milling Company. The head office of this concern is in Toronto, the directors are Ontario men, and to a large extent the mills of the company are located in Ontario. There is every reason why Toronto and Ontario should be the centre of financial undertakings. Probably no part of Canada is so prosperous as Ontario and no people more ready to respond to an attractive investment than the well-to-do citizens of this province. The success which has attended the Maple Leaf Milling Company's offer of stock will doubtless influence others to offer their securities to the public from the Toronto centre.

TWO OLD PEOPLE BITTEN BY MAD DOG AT NIAGARA

Sixty Dogs Undoubtedly Mad, Say Doctors at the Toronto General Hospital — Provincial Authorities Say Regulations Should Be Strictly Enforced.

The Toronto Mail and Empire says; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Christie, of Niagara-on-the Lake, are now in the General Hospital suffering from rabies, and owing to their advanced age it is doubtful whether they will recover. Each is more than sixty years old. The animal which bit them was killed after a long chase, and the head sent to Dr. Amyot, provincial analyst, who found positive signs of advanced rabies in the animal. As the dog bit several other dogs at Niagara-on-the-Lake, it would not surprise the officials if other rabies patients came to Toronto from there.

A few days ago Mrs. Christie went to the kitchen of her home, and was attacked by the dog, which had run into the house and was lying on the floor. The animal took a piece of flesh from one of Mrs. Christie's legs. She screamed, and her husband rushed into the kitchen, only to be attacked and bitten in almost the same place. He drove the dog out of the house into the woodshed, from where it escaped, and ran about biting and snapping at other animals in the village. Neighbors were notified and a general alarm was sounded through the place, with the result that the animal was cornered and shot.

Since the first of February there have been 115 heads of dogs examined at the General Hospital, 60 or whom showed absolute signs of rabies.

As the cattle in the country are not benig put out to pasture, the provincial authorities state that there is more need than ever of enforcing the rabies regulations to the letter, and notices will be sent out to that effect.

REVIEW'S VOTE SHOWS BIG MAJORITY AGAINST BY-LAW

A very large number of votes on the dog by-law were received by the Review to-day, so many in fact that it is impossible to print the list. The phone has been ringing continuously by those desirous of voting for or against the enforcement of the measure.

The Review's vote on Friday showed a majority of 51 against the by-law. Over five hundred names were submitted by the critics since then and while a large number of votes were cast favorable to the by-law the expression of opinion against it shows a very substantial majority in favor of the opposition.

WATER WAS TURNED ONTO NEW PUMPS AT THE DAM

Yesterday afternoon the water was turned on to the new pumps at the waterworks dam. The main pipe from the pumphouse had to be attached to the city main, and the water pumped through it into the city pipe. The operation was most successful and was done without the slightest reduction of pressure or without the sacrifice of a pint of water.

The water commissioners, Mr. Bishop, of the Bishop Construction Company, and the commissioners' consulting engineer, Mr. Kennedy, of Montreal, were present.

The reason Sunday was chosen for the work was because serious inconvenience and loss would have resulted on a week day had anything gone wrong that would have had the effect of checking the water supply for the city.

DANNY SIMONS EQUIPPED WITH WINNING ACT THIS YEAR

Armed to the teeth with a great line of irresistible sure-fire ammunition, Danny Simons in "The Military Hobo," is hitting the bull's eye of public approval this year with surer aim than he ever did before in the course of his successful stage career. Danny, who is in the city owing to the illness of his mother, who is on the road to recovery now, however, is playing in vaudeville in the New England States, in the sketch referred to. He is booked on the Independent circuit, through the exclusive agency of Johnny Quigley, and is registered solid on lucrative time for many weeks to come.

"The Military Hobo" is a single musical character turn, and was originated by Mr. Simons himself. The act concludes with a caricature of Teddy Roosevelt leaving the jungle, and this timely phase of the offering is the storm signal for applause.

Mr. Simons came here from Boston. Before being booked by Mr. Quigley he was offered good time on the coast, but preferred New England, where the jumps were shorter and the accommodation superior.

VANDALISM AT THE CEMETERY

Children Steal Flowers - Will No Longer be Admitted to The Cemetery Unaccompanied

Even the resting place of the departed inspires no awe in juveniles. But the theft of flowers from the Little Lake cemetery, which has been such a common offence of late, will not be countenanced any longer and the clause of the cemetery regulations, as follows, regarding children will be strictly enforced;

"Children will not be admitted unless in charge of parents, guardians or other grown persons, who will be responsible for their conduct."

To the Review to-day Mr. Wise, the superintendent, said that in the future children under fourteen or fifteen would not be allowed in the cemetery unless accompanied by older persons. He stated as an example of the vandalism going on that flowers had been stolen from the large floral cross of pink tulips to the front of the cemetery and the effect of the cross marred. A lady recently saw a couple of little girls coming from the cemetery with generous bouquets of these tulips.

FLAGS HOISTED AT NOON TO-DAY

SILENT TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY

Show Windows of R. Fair and Co, Changed From Regular Gay Appearance

The show windows of Robert Fair & Co. were on Saturday changed from their gay appearance to one of deep mourning, and one in passing could not fail to be impressed with the plain, but eloquent tribute to the late King. Both windows were draped in purple and black, a picture of the bereaved Queen being shown in the north window and one of the late King in the south window. A striking effect was obtained in the latter by the use of three muskets.

HOMAGE TO THE KING'S MEMORY

Solemn Services at St. John's Church Yesterday—Impressive Music

The services at St. John's church yesterday were of a memorial nature, expressive of the loyal congregation's heartfelt sorrow at the loss of their beloved sovereign, King Edward the VII., by whose death at 11.45 Friday night, May 6th, the Anglican Church lost its late supreme temporal head.

The altar was draped in black and the pulpit with royal purple over the national flag.

In the morning the solemn service opened up with the sentence for the burial of the dead: "I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die."

Sympathetic prayers were offered for the bereaved Queen Alexandra, King George V., his consort Queen Victoria Mary, Edward, Prince of Wales and all the royal family.

For the first time in St. John's church a Dowager Queen was prayed for. The Empire has had no Dowager Queen since the death, in 1837, of William IV.

The hymn preceding the sermon was one for the burial of the dead. After the offertory the National Anthem was played, but not sung, the congregation standing in respectful silence. In place of the usual recessional hymn Chopin's funeral march was appropriately rendered by Mr. Devey, and while the organ's mournful strains filled the sacred edifice the congregation remained standing, the choir in procession slowly leaving the chancel to the final strain. The anthem was the musical setting of Kipling's poem, "The Recessional," the solo being expressively sung by Mr. H. W. Morphet.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour, of All Saints, officiated, Rev. Canon Davidson taking the service at All Saints' church. While no memorial sermon was preached, Rev. Mr. Trumpour prefaced his address with a passing reference to the late Edward the Peace Maker, whose death had come with such suddenness as to render it difficult for the mourning nation at this moment in their hearts and minds to fully understand the extent of their bereavement. He thought it would be premature on this occasion to make extended reference to the late King's life and work. While he had all the benefits of this life, he did not escape the world's heavy discipline of trials, tribulations, pain, sorrow and perplexity. But he served his day and generation well, better than is universally known, and it has been a harder task than any of his subjects can fully realize. The reverend gentleman eulogized the dead monarch's science of statesmanship and his phenomenal success in the exercise of his royal diplomacy for the peace of the world. And in the face of the constitutional crisis in England to-day we would feel like calling him back to again lead upon him the burdens of state that had unquestionably affected his health. The pictures of His Lake Majesty, Mr. Trumpour asserted, gave no conception of his aged features and whitened hair. Let us pray that in assuming his father's mantle of responsibility King George V. may be blessed with a double measure of wisdom and worth. Let us pray for the weeping Dowager Queen and all members of the Royal family.

The memorial portions of the morning service were repeated in the evening.

At the evening service a quartette Barnby's "Requiem," and as in the morning the congregation stood while the National Anthem and Handel's "Dead March in Saul" was played on the organ by Mr. R. J. Devey.

"TIGE" TELLS OF THE EXPENSE

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I might ask if the ratepayers of Peterborough have any idea as to what the expense will be in connection with the enforcement of Ald. Turner's now famous dog by-law, that is if it proves to be law in the event of it being passed, which I very much doubt.

It will be impossible to employ a dog catcher for less than $500 or $600 a year, and it would require $300 or $400 more for the annual remuneration of his assistant. The dog catching apparatus of a horse waggon and catching net and the keeping of these would be economically estimated at $500 a year.

The maintenance of the dog pound would be a matter of $400 or $500 a year. Then the dogs would have to be kept in seperate pens at the pound to prevent fights. They would have to be properly cared for and fed and the unclaimed ones put out of existence in a humane way. For if the by-law is enforced it is the intention of the dog owners to have the Humane Society appoint an inspector to see that the dogs are properly looked after.

A conservative estimate of the cost is from $500 to $2,000 a year. Could this money not have been spent to better advantage in making much needed improvements to the city?

Yours truly,
"TIGE."

Reply to "Fairplay"

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In response to "Fair Play's" letter, which appeared in Friday's Review, I might say that there were names of some voters from outside the city who were in favor of the by-law, for instance, S. D. Carver and Mr. Bestard.

In such a wide canvass and where there are so many volunteer votes it is impossible to conduct a campaign like this on fine drawn lines.

Yours truly,
ANTI BY-LAW.

Special Meeting at Gospel Hall

Mr. R. McMurdo, sr., opened a series of meetings with a powerful address last night on "Joseph in Egypt," a type of Jesus Christ in the world. He is a forceful, pleasing speaker, with a wonderful grasp of the scriptures. The subjects for the week are:

Monday night—"The Holy Spirit in the Scriptures."

Tuesday night—"The Holy Spirit in the Believer."

Wednesday night—"The Holy Spirit Given at Penticost."

Thursday night—"The Holy Spirit in the Church."

Friday night—"The Holy Spirit in the World."

Thursday afternoon at three o'clock Mr. McMurdo will address a meeting for women in the hall. All are invited to all of these meetings.

Rev. Alex. McLaren, D. D., of Manchester, is dead.

British subjects in New York heard with grief the news of the King's death, and Consul-General Bennett sent a cablegram of sympathy.

BRINTON'S WON FROM HAVELOCK CHAMPIONS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, May 7.—Havelock, intermediate football champions for 1909, of the Province of Ontario, the Midland league and Peterborough County, went down to defeat here on Saturday afternoon by the score of 1—0, when they met the Brintons of Peterborough, in their first game of the season.

The Brintons came down on the noon train and the game started at two o'clock, with T. P. Lancaster, of town, as referee. Havelock from the first did not show their old-time speed, for although most of the players showed good individual work, they did not work well together. The Brintons are a speedy bunch and it is evident that they have been practicing well.

It was in the first half of a series of shots on goal that the carpet makers succeeded in placing the ball between the stakes. Havelock made vigorous attempts to return the compliment, but a nasty west wind made perfect combination work impossible.

During the second half both teams showed bursts of speed and both goals were in danger several times, but the game ended without furtherscoring.

Havelock had on only five of last year's champion team, namely; Rose, Andrews, McKay, Hitchins and McMullen.

There is good material for a fast and winning team in town again this year and it is likely that Havelock will show up much better in the remaining games.

INTERNATIONAL INTEREST IN APPROACHING BATTLE

The Utica Globe says, editorially—It is not given out that President Taft and the members of his cabinet are going to San Francisco to witness, on the nation's holiday, Jeffries and Johnson punch each other for the championship of the prize ring and for the division of several hundred thousand dollars gate receipts and the proceeds of the moving picture shows which will reproduce the lightning-like movements in this punching exhibition. It is believed, however, that the President and his official family would like to see the greatest mill ever pulled off, only that the religious element of our populace would be scandalized and the Republican party weakened by such a spectacle.

Emperor William of Germany would like to be at the ringside but the policy of the Empire will detain him at home.

In England the desire to see the fight by the nobility passes all bounds. One ocean going vessel is chartered by the lords and other members of the peerage, while the steamers leaving English ports during the month of June will be crowded coming this way with sports anxious to be in California before the 4th of July.

The inrush from Canada promises to take on proportions worthy of its partiality for sports and its expanding riches and growth in population. The Dominion will have its thousands to see Jeff and Johnson don the mitts for the battle.

In our country this remarkable interest tallies with that of our Anglo-Saxon friends. From New York city it is expected that 200 Pullmans will be required to haul the rich and well-to-do across the continent. Wall street is planning its vacation this summer for California with the prize fight as the stellar attraction. The New York Stock Exchange will send more than half of its 1,600 members on this faraway errand. The rulers of New York's 400 and a large number of their followers will be on hand to show that society approves of pugilism. Tammany Hall and the Republican organizations will have thousands in San Francisco that day. At least 2,000 kid glove and out and out gamblers will give a breezy aspect to the thrilling scenes. These diverse elements go on special trains so as to maintain the isolation which obtains ordinarily. What New York is going to do in this way is going to be done in lesser places with the result that the managers of the transcontinental railroads are on their wits' end to provide drawing room cars for those wanting to go. It may be that 1,000 Pullmans will be parked outside of San Francisco the day before the fight. If this is so it will be the greatest collection of the most luxurious vehicles ever seen in one place.

The prize ring is the national American sport when it comes to strenuousness. Base and football are good in their way; when it comes to real worship, however, we fall on our knees the more readily when fellows like Jim Jeffries or Jack Johnson heave into view.

CITY LEAGUE SITUATION

Another meeting of the City Baseball League was held at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday evening and the president, secretary and a representative of the P.A.C. and Strathconas was present. This meeting, as well as several other previous ones, had been called to clear up several matters which arose as a result of Riverside Park being secured by the T.A.S. club for May 24th. On the night the proposed schedule was presented to the clubs for adoption, the T.A.S. club representatives did not make known the fact that they held the option on the grounds for the holiday and did not have anything to say against the league opening taking place on May 24th. The proposed schedule called for the opener on Saturday, May 21st, but it was suggested that the league take advantage of the holiday and open on that date. The schedule was adopted, but later the secretary of the league, received a letter from the T. A. S. club, stating that the club had first option on the grounds for the holiday and intended to play a morning and afternoon game. The reason, the latter stated, that nothing was said about this matter at the meeting was because no definite arrangements had been made.

At a meeting of the league held last Friday night the representatives of the T.A.S. Club were asked why they had not even mentioned the fact that they were negotiating for a holiday game at Riverside Park. The other representatives contended that had this been done the opening date would have read, May 21, and there would have been no mixup. The T.A.S. representatives held that it was none of the league's business, while the other clubs were of the opinion that the T.A.S. club was not working in harmony with the league. The representatives of the West End Club gave notice of that club's withdrawal from the league, but he was advised to withold such action, until the Grounds Co. be interviewed, and another meeting was called Saturday evening at seven o'clock. All clubs promised to have a representative on hand at seven o'clock, but the T.A.S. Club and West End Club representative did not show up. However a quorum was present and the secretary explained the proposition of the Riverside Grounds Co. It was suggested that each club deposit $10 with the secretary of the league, the same to be forfeited in the event of any club arranging for a game that would interfere with the league schedule. This was adopted as well as a motion that the league open on Saturday, May 21st.

Since the meeting the secretary has learned that the West End Club intends to remain in the league and if they agree with the T.A.S. to abide with the rule in regard to the $10 forfeit, everything will be lovely.

The first ticket for the fight between Jeffries and Johnson at San Francisco will be presented to Theodore Roosevelt on his arrival in New York. This statement was made by Jack Gleason, while in Denver on his way to the coast. The ticket will be made of solid gold and appropriately engraved.

BASEBALL

Baseball journalism has nurtured and fostered a wonderful language, which some philologist of the future may class as "Fanish." Soon our dear old ladies will be horrified to read such news as: "Mike took a bite out of a pill, then blew up at second." And the public will be duly appraised of the fact that some bright, particular star "captured the pulsating pellet with a dab of his lunch hooks," or "allowed the globule to ooze through his dinner tongs;" that others were "wedded to bags," that "Mike tied his hoodoo snake on Bill," or that "Jim took his turn beside the glad gum." And again it will be related that so and so "biffed the bulb," "paddled the pellet," or "copped the primordial sack."

The ball tossers of the city were out in great number at Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon, and the ball was handled in a mid season manner. All four city league clubs were represented and the T.A.S. and West Ends worked out on the diamond.

A practice of the West Ends is called for this evening at Riverside Park at 6.30.

Return of "Hack"

The Russian lion gives a roar; he's coming over to this shore to vindicate his former fame and elevate the wrestling game. His last appearance was a botch; when next he mixes things with Gotch, the sports will learn then, well enough, that Russian lions are the stuff. The Lion gives the reasons that caused him to quit when on the mat with Gotch a year or two ago; his health had run extremely low; she should have had a doctor's care instead of straining like a bear. A cold had settled on his lung and he had fur upon his tongue, and ringing noises in his ears, and he had jaundice, it appears. And he had lost the leather charm he always wore upon his arm. And late upon the fatal day he met a black cat on his way. A dog had howled (the night before, discordantly, before his door. A one-eyed woman cast a spell upon him; that was why he fell. But now that the hoodooes all are gone he is the same old boy of brawn; if Goth will have another try he'll make Gotch crumple up and die. And so the Russian lion comes, with toots of horns and beats of drums; but dead game sports the lion (will draw on fierce old lions stuffed with straw.—Walt Mason.

ONLY GOAL OF GAME KICKED BY ELECTRICS

The C.G.E. Midland Football League team won its second game of the season Saturday afternoon at Brinton's Meadows, when they defeated Bethany by a 1—0 score. The game was fast and exciting at all stages, but the Electric team was in the better condition. Their team work was always in evidence, the combination plays being particularly effective.

No scoring was done in the first half, and what proved to be the winning goal was kicked by Hampton after the second period had become well advanced. It was the first game for Bethany, but the players worked stubbbornly for a score, even up to the last few minutes of play.

The attendance was about two hundred, and Referee Pierce handled the game well.

Hints to Players

Never strike out.

Never bat either a grounder or a fly ball to a fielder. Such hitting is dangerous.

Never make the slightest show of temper when the umpire gives a decision that robs your team of the game.

Simply smile when a batter strikes out with two of your side gone and the bases full.

Never take exception to the action of a baseman who sikes a few inches of skin off your hand. He might put your eye out.—The advice giver.

A JOYOUS CARTOONIST.

Mr. Tom Browne, the well-known artist in black and white, died in London recently, at the early age of thirty-eight.

Mr. Browne will always be remembered as the creator of the two tramps, Weary Willie and Tired Tim, and as the originator of the boom in Dutch pictures.

No teacher taught Tom Browne how to draw. The instinct was there, and he found his models in the men and women of everyday life. He was only eleven when he started work in Nottingham lace market, and it was about that time he sold his first picture.

The drawing represented an old Nottingham public-house and its very stout landlord, with a bibulous-looking policeman saying, "Time, gentlemen, please." The delighted proprietor gave the young artist five shillings for it, and hung it in his tap-room.

When he was seventeen the young artist turned his footsteps towards London, where hard work soon took him into a foremost place.

Joyousness was the keynote of all Mr. Browne's work, and, indeed, of his whole life. He had a fund of merry anecdotes, and whether the points were against himself or anybody else, he loved to relate them.

Mr. Browne once took a tour from Paris to Gibraltar on a bicycle. He was accompanied by a friend, but as neither of them spoke Spanish the popular artist was obliged to make use of his pencil on all occasions. Only once did he utterly fail. Wanting to take some soup, he drew an elaborate large sketch of a soup tureen. The mistress of the hotel looked at it long and gravely, spread out her arms as if to convey the idea of size, and hurried away, leaving the two Englishmen considerably puzzled. Presently she returned with beaming smiles, holding the sketch in one hand and the biggest pail in the village in the other.

Once Mr. Browne was introduced to a city magnate, who said: "Glad to make your acquaintance, Mr. Tom Browne. You are a public benefactor, sir. Many a merry Christmas my family have had with your crackers." Tom Browne regarded this as his best story. He never tired of telling it.

Mr. Browne once told an interviewer, "I remember in my early days an adventure we had with a negro as a model. I say 'we,' because there were several of us, and we had our studio in a room over a stable. We could not afford a servant to attend to our wants, so we each took it in turns to play 'general.'

"One day we met a negro, and almost fought with each other for the possession of the prize, for here was a model indeed. He earned his living as a public performer inside public-houses—that is to say he was a glass-chewer. When we told him we wanted to paint him his face was a study. He was first amazed, then frightened. Again and again we humored him by telling him of our desire to paint him, till eventually he surprised us by asking, 'Will it come off?'"

HE DINING CAR CLEW

ollowed by a Detective, It Led to a Capture.

By HEADON HILL.

"The chief wants to see you, Inector Grantham," said a messenger ming into the room at Scotland rd.

I went at once to the chief superindent's office and was received by y superior officer with a friendly d.

The letter was undated and unsign. It was in these words:

Brady, the banknote forger, intends to eak cover this afternoon and make a it for the States. He will leave Euston r Liverpool by the 5:30 corridor express, companied by his female accomplice, med Daisy Gilbart. Brady is certain be disguised. The writer, however, inoses a photograph of Daisy Gilbart, ho, not being as yet known to the poe, may possibly travel in propria perna.

The photograph was that of a bold, ucy eyed young woman with a prosion of light hair and very showily tired in evening dress. A mark on e neck attracted my attention.

"One would have thought that a wo an of that type would have got the otographer to retouch the mark out the picture," I said. "What do you ake of it all, sir—a split in the mp?"

I could not gainsay the chief's view. nine cases out of ten the anonyous letters that lead to the capture important criminals are due to femine spite. And yet there was the hance that the friendly letter might a "plant."

The warrant for Joe Brady had been my hands for six weeks. The only edit I could so far take was that my ursuit had been so keen that he had ot dared to come out into the open nd make a bolt for it.

I glanced at the clock. It was near 3 o'clock, and I had two hours and half to make arrangements for the apture. I mentioned the name of the ain clothes men whom I desired to upport me and took my departure.

So it was that at 5 o'clock I drove up a hansom to the terminus, carefully ressed in the garments of a bishop nd with my face altered from all emblance to the original. To be in eeping with my assumed character the probable event of Brady having onfederates on the watch I went into he booking office and took a first lass ticket for Liverpool, after which strolled out on to the platform just s the train of vestibule cars was acking into position.

Early as it was, my two subordinates ad by my direction preceded me to he station, though they were not to penly communicate with me till the upreme moment. One of them, a mart young sergeant named Parker, who was got up as a bluejacket, contrived to whisper in my ear as I stood t the bookstall:

"The girl is here, apparently alone. Came ten minutes ago. Took two first o Liverpool. Now in the ladies' waitng room."

Parker and his colleague had of ourse had a sight of the photograph. His information was welcome as provng that at any rate the letter received at the yard had some foundation and was not, as I had half feared, a practical joke designed to lead us on a wild goose chase.

I sat down on a bench opposite the dining car to await developments. A bishop is a common object nowadays, and my laced hat and gaiters attracted but little attention. I was able to look over the top of the Church Times, which I had purchased, and so watch the arrival of passengers. A score of people had taken their seats in the dining car, but not one of them, allowing for the most elaborate disguise, could I identify as Joe Brady. They were mostly unmistakable Americans returning to their native land in parties of threes and fours.

Suddenly an incident occurred which at the time caused me some uneasiness. Sergeant Parker's voice reached me, raised in tones of expostulation.

"No, I don't want a drink, mate, and by the same token you seem to have had a full dose already," he was saying.

A little way along the platform my assistant had been accosted by a half tipsy bluejacket, who was trying to pull him into the buffet. The sailor's cap proclaimed that he belonged to the same ship as that which Parker's disguise denoted, the Majestic. To my relief the man seemed to be too muddled to perceive that the sergeant was no shipmate of his, but staggered off, dropping his bundle once or twice, to the front of the train.

The sailor had hardly disappeared when the original of the photograph came out of the waiting room and crossed the platform to the dining car. She was wearing a well cut serge costume and had made no attempt at disguise, even the mark on her neck being distinctly visible above the collar of her dress.

But where was the redoubtable Brady? It was 5:25 now, and there were no signs of Miss or Mrs. Daisy Gilbart's intended traveling companion. The same question was plainly beginning to agitate the lady. She quitted the seat which she had secured and stood on the platform of the car gazing anxiously toward the entrance from the booking office.

The warning bell rang. I decided on no account to lose sight of the fair Daisy. If the person she was expecting did not come and she went on in the train I would go too. If she got out and abandoned her journey I and my assistants would shadow her wherever she went.

Contriving a word with Parker, I hastily sketched my intentions and bade him go forward to the third class carriages, into one of which he was to jump at the last minute if he saw me board the dining car.

A moment later I had taken my seat in the car, for Gilbart, after one last distracted gaze at the station entrance, had decided to pursue her journey. As the train gathered speed I settled down to the task of watching for signs of her fraternizing with one of the other passengers, but nothing of the sort occurred. She sat looking out of the window, and presently a tear stole down her cheek—only one, but a genuine tear.

Moved by a sudden impulse, I changed my seat and took the place opposite to her at the white draped table. My espiscopal garb warranted, I thought, the proffer of consolation, in the course of which the pumping process might be administered.

Imagine, then, my astonishment when my overtures were received with:

"What's the use of talking like that? You're the 'tec that's after Joe Brady, ain't you?"

A denial would certainly not have been believed, so I nodded admission.

"You've had your trouble for nothing, I'm afraid. He must have got wind of that letter and kept out of the way."

"The letter!" I exclaimed in bewilderment.

"I wrote it myself," replied the girl. "I wanted him caught, you see. Don't ask why. It's a woman's reason. But he's too cunning for me, and now I suppose he'll kill me some time."

The ice being broken, she poured forth a flood of recriminations against her late associate, affirming that she had no idea of his true character and giving me the address of his hiding place in Battersea.

"We don't stop till Crewe, but you'd better wire to your people from there to arrest him or, at any rate, shadow him till you get back," she advised.

I had already decided to do so, but I was still not quite satisfied. Why had she gone on in the train after finding that her communication to the police had been abortive?

Her home was in New York, she said, and, having her passage ticket taken, she wished to use it and cut herself adrift from evil associates. So the train rushed northward, the other passengers in the car soon ceasing to be amused by the friendship struck up between the elderly bishop and the solitary traveler.

At last the train ran into Crewe station, and as I rose she put out her well gloved hand. "Goodby, Mr. Grantham. I do hope you'll catch him," she said. "My life won't be safe till he's under lock and key."

"But this is not goodby. I am only going to send off the wire," I said. "I am going on with you to Liverpool to see you safe on board the steamer."

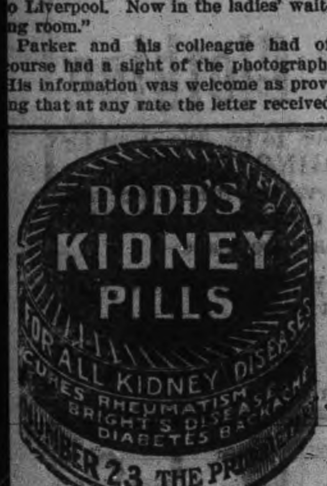
It was a chance shot, but it went home. She turned ashy pale, and I knew that she had been working with the object of getting rid of me at Crewe. But where was Brady?

The question was answered by Daisy Gilbart herself in the anguished cry of "My father! Oh, my father!" Following her gaze to the platform, I saw outside the car window two sailors of the Majestic with linked arms. One of them was handcuffed.

"I've got him, sir," said Parker. "By luck I traveled down in the same compartment and laid a few conversational traps for him. He had neglected to sufficiently post himself in detail about our fine old craft. I smelled a rat before we'd gone twenty miles."

* * * * * * *

"Daisy Gilbart" was indeed Brady's daughter, and I could not help being sorry for her. She had made a bold bid to hoodwink us by concentrating the attention of our combined forces on the dining car while her father traveled in another part of the train, but she hardly allowed for the caution of an experienced officer.



The Manufacture of Pins.

In 1775 a prize was given to the colonist of Carolina who produced the first native pins and needles. During the war of 1812, when, owing to restrictions upon commerce, the price of pins rose to the enormous sum of $1 per paper, the manufacture was actually started in the United States, but does not seem to have met with success, as the enterprise was soon abandoned. The industry was not fairly started in this country until the year 1836. The early pins in this country, as in England, were made with globular heads of fine twisted wire, made separately, and secured to the shank by compression from a falling block and die. These old pins had the misfortune of often parting with their heads. It was to overcome this difficulty that the attention of early inventors was directed. The solid headed pin, in common use today, took the place of the old form about 1840.

How Victor Hugo Worked.

Victor Hugo always wrote standing at a high desk especially constructed for him, throwing off sheet after sheet as fast as he filled it till he would be quite snowed up in leaves of foolscap. He often rose in the middle of the night to note down an idea or a verse. He got up for the day usually at six o'clock and would devote from six to eight hours per diem to his work. He made but few corrections, his poems being thought out complete in his brain before he put pen to paper. It is a well-known fact that he indulged in the arduous task of composition while traversing the streets of Paris on the top of an omnibus. When working out some great conception he would spend hours in this way.

THE DAUGHTERS OF SPAIN.

Frivolity and Gaiety Are Their Chief Characteristics.

"There are no mannish women in Spain," says Senorita Carolina Marcial, instructor in Spanish at Wellesley College. "The charm of the Spanish women lies in their extreme womanliness. They are petite and vivid, and nothing besides home duties and womanlike pleasure, such as housekeeping and sewing, appeals to them.

They do not indulge in athletics or in games of any kind, for this would be considered most improper and unwomanly. The Spanish women go to bullfights less frequently than in olden days, but they still attend these events from a desire to be loyal to the Spanish festivity; also, perhaps, because they like to improve every opportunity to be seen in the national head attire, the white lace mantilla.

"Women of Madrid and other great cities are frivolous and gay. They thoroughly enjoy all kinds of amusements; they attend regularly the opera and theatre, for there is nothing they enjoy more than good music and fine acting.

During the winter society in Madrid takes a daily drive in the afternoon through the Retiro and Paceo de la Castellana, while receptions and balls at court, dinners, small dances and fancy dress parties at the foreign embassies or at the homes of the aristocrats are the great events in the life of the society belle.

"When the winter season is over the Spanish aristocracy re-appears in London, Paris or Biarritz, while the well-to-do people go to Valencia or to San Sebastian and other summer resorts, and there they continue the same frivolous life.

"In the small towns the life of the women is very dreary and dull. In no country of Europe do women lead more monotonous and uneventful lives than in the lesser places of Spain.

Early in the morning the Spanish women, with black lace mantillas covering their glossy hair and piercing black eyes, make their way to mass—this is the only place where they may go alone—and as they offer their prayers inattentively in the shadowy nave of some old church, they indeed resemble the type of Spanish beauty that dwells in the imagination of most people.

After they have gone to church and have attended to their household duties, there is nothing left for them to do. They seldom make calls, and take no pleasure in visiting. They sit by the gratings and pretty balconies full of bright flowers and spend their hours embroidering, singing as they sew, sweet and sentimental Spanish songs.

"So they dawdle away the weary hours and become old long before their time," says Senorita Marcial. "Their lives are often unhappy, for their husbands, often suspicious and jealous, keep a sharp lookout on all their actions and never recognize that they have any rights or acknowledge any duties toward them. They enter life the most beautiful, charming, joyful creatures in the world, and they leave it worn-out, weary, disappointed women."

The Camel of South America.

The llama is the camel of South America, its most useful beast of burden, fitted to live in the mountains, however, instead of in the desert. It is handsomer than a camel, although it has the same shaped neck and calloused places on its breast and foreknees. It is about as big as a donkey and looks something like a long legged and long necked sheep.

The llama has been the beast of burden in Peru and Chile for hundreds and hundreds of years. It was in Peru when the Spanish conquerors first got there. It is exceedingly useful. Its meat is good to eat, its wool is good to wear, and it is so strong and tame that it can be made to carry a weight of from 150 to 250 pounds and can march thirty miles a day for five days in succession. Its gait is so steady that its load need be only lightly fastened.

About 300,000 llamas are in constant use for carrying silver bars from the Peruvian mines to the smelting works and taking back provisions. A train of these animals marching one behind the other in the greatest order, following a leader adorned with a decorated halter, a bell and a little flag on his head, is a pretty sight. In this way the llamas, led by a couple of Indians, will march along the snowy summits of mountains or along the edge of precipices where not even a mule could go.

What an Animal Taught.

The editor once heard a civil engineer say that his profession is indebted to animal instinct for two important principles. First, he cited the beaver's method of building its dam. It does not build straight across the stream, but with an arch against the current, its instinct telling it that the dam will thus better resist floods and the impact of floating ice. It is true that engineers generally build a dam straight, perhaps to save material, but the arched dam is gradually coming into use. A case in point is the Great Bear valley dam, in California, which is built on the beaver's plan, and the engineer said that dams of that kind would be sure to prove more economical in the long run.—Chicago News.

A Brave Turkey Mother.

While a turkey in a Michigan farmyard was leading around her little flock in search of food the air above was darkened by a hungry hawk about to swoop down on the young turkeys. The mother turkey was up in arms instantly and tried to drive off the hawk; but, finding herself weakening, she drove the little ones under a sloping board, where the hawk could not reach them readily. Then she sped away and in a few minutes returned with a flock of ablebodied adult turkeys, and the whole party made a combined attack on the barnyard pirate and beat him off. Then the little ones came forth from their hiding place, and there was a chorus of gobbles and whistles of triumph.

Bird's Fly—A Game.

This is a very simple game. Each player places a finger on the table, which he must raise whenever the conductor of the game says "Birds fly," "Pigeons fly" or any other winged creatures "fly."

If he names any creature without wings, such as "Pigs fly," and any player thoughtlessly raised his finger, that player must pay a forfeit, as he must also do if he omits to raise his finger when a winged creature is named.

AN ATHLETE BARRISTER.

"Pat" Manning of Winnipeg Is Veteran of Three Lines of Sport.

Mr. R. A. C. Manning, a well-known Winnipeg barrister, has been selected chairman of the Manitoba Beef Commission which has been appointed to investigate the whole problem of the establishment of a municipal abbatoir and public market for the west. Mr. Manning, who has been solicitor for the Western Live Stock Association for several years, has been a prominent figure in western sports and politics.

"Pat" Manning, as he is better known in Winnipeg, is a "rara avis" in the Manitoba capital—a native-born. During his younger days—he is now barely thirty—he was one of the best known athletes in the west. He has an enviable record, for there are few men who have figured in three championship teams. As a hockey player, he was one of the best the west ever produced, and figured in the line-up of the famous Victorias, holders of the Stanley cup in the days before the arrival of professionalism. He was also an enthusiastic and brilliant oarsman, one of the best Winnipeg has ever had. He was a member for years of the Winnipeg Rowing Club's championship crews, and time and again figured in the eastern trips of the western crews. Not content with these two sports, he also took up with vigor Rugby and had much to do with the founding of the game in the west. He was captain for several years of the Winnipeg Rowing Club's Rugby team. Mr. Manning has always been an ardent supporter of amateur sport in every form.

A few years ago "Pat" entered municipal politics and was elected alderman for his ward, serving two years. A year ago he ran against W. Sanford Evans for mayor and met his first defeat. He has been a prominent worker for the Conservatives in elections and has been even spoken of as a possible candidate.

I DREAMT THAT I DWELT IN OVERALLS.

I dreamt that I dwelt in overalls,
With nature all around me,
And the smiling countryside in thralls
Of deep affection bound me.
I loved to milk and do the chores
Around that simple dwelling,
And I didn't give a whoop outdoors
How groceries were selling.

I dreamt that I dwelt in overalls,
With hired men to serve me
And something when misfortune falls
To happily preserve me.
I heard the lowing of the kine
As deep toned as an organ,
And the thrill of ownership was mine,
The same as Mr. Morgan.

I dreamt that I dwelt in overalls,
As all the railroads want me,
And the city and its gloomy walls
Were nevermore to haunt me.
I lived on something more than crusts,
With nothing much to fret me,
And I hopped around and dared the trusts
To come out there and get me.

The Triplets.

An old soldier who had served his term of twenty-one years, having obtained his discharge at Portsmouth, went to the railway station with his wife and three children. He asked for two full tickets and three halves, the latter, of course, for the children. "How old are they?" inquired the booking clerk somewhat suspiciously. "Elivin years, all av them," replied the man. "They are triplets." "Fine children, too," pursued the clerk—"very fine children, indeed, for their age. Where were they born, now?" The Irishman straightened himself as he glanced at his offspring with pride and answered, "Well, Pathrick, there, was born in Cairo, Bridget was born in Bombay, and Micky was born over in Madras."—Dundee Advertiser.

Saving One Storm.

When a certain Atchison man visits another town his wife complains, and so does his mother. Therefore, in order to avoid it, he says he is going out to get shaved and doesn't return until his visit is over. When he returns there is a storm, but under the old plan there were two storms, one before he went and another after his return.

FLAGS AT THE MASTHEAD IN HONOR OF THE NEW KING

Order Issued for This Afteruoon But To-morrow Flags are to be Placed at Half-Mast Until After the Funeral of King Edward—How a Mistake Was Made at Peterborough Postoffice

The Dominion Secretary of State last evening notified the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario that His Excellency the Governor-General, had received the following cable from the British War Office, under date of May 7;—

"Notify all general officers, except India, on Monday, May 9th, at noon, to hoist all flags to masthead and fire royal salute in honor of His Majesty's accession. On the following day the flags are to be again hoisted at half-mast until the funeral of the date of which notification will be given.

"Officers are to wear crepe on left arm of uniform and greatcoat. Drums should be covered in black and crepe hung from top of color staff in infantry regiments. In cavalry regiments crepe to be hung from standard staff and trumpets until after funeral."

On receit of the despatch last night General Cotton at once notified all officers under his command to act in accordance with its instructions.

A copy of the cable from the War Office was received by the Provincial Secretary on Sunday, and immediately telegrams were sent out to the mayors and reeves of the various municipalities in Ontario, asking them to be governed accordingly.

Many people wondered why the flag was at half-must on the post-office this afternoon, while on the city hall and most of the other buildings in the city the flag was at the masthead. At 3.30 in the afternoon Mr. G. Stenton, caretaker of the post-office, called at the Review office and showed the following telegram which he received on Saturday from D. Ewart, chief architect of the Domin on Government buildings:

Receiving no message countermanding this order, Mr. Stenson allowed the flag to remain at half-mast this afternoon, and came to the Review for an explanation of the fact that the flag was at the masthead on the city hall. He was shown the above cable from the War Office.

A few minutes later the flag on the post office was run up to the masthead.

General Meeting

The members of the four Epworth Leagues of the city are asked to be present at the 21st anniversary meeting of the Charlotte street Epworth League, to be held in Charlotte street Sunday school room at eight o'clock sharp to-night. A good programme has been arranged and an interesting evening is looked forward to. All strangers are cordially welcomed. No admission fee.

More Immigrants

A special train bearing a large number of immigrants passed through Peterborough this morning on the Grand Trunk. About twelve stopped off at Peterborough, and are being placed in suitable positions on farms. About thirty more are expected here to-morrow, some of whom will be sent to work in the country around Whitby, Ont.

Belleville in Mourning

In conversation with a Review reporter to-day, Mr. Lavoci, of Belleville, stated that the city is in deep mourning, and the majority of stores and city buildings are draped in purple and black. It almost appeared as if Belleville had lost one whom the residents had known personally, so deep is their sorrow, and in one of the churches when the funeral march was played, many of the audience was moved to tears.

LIVE BABY FOR BAIT.

Bakutus of the Congo Have Successfully Resisted White Man.

To bait spring guns and man traps with live babies seems to be a regular device with the simple Congo forest tribes, who know that the white man cannot bear to hear an infant cry. This peculiarity was discussed recently before the Royal Geographical Society in London by Mr. E. Torday, who with Mr. Hilton Simpson and Mr. Norman Hardy, made an expedition between October, 1907, and September, 1909, to investigate the native tribes in the Kasai Basin, in the centre of the Belgian Congo.

The Bakutu, said he, were almost the only tribe of this region who had been successful up to the present in resisting the advance of the white man. This was due to their skill in forest warfare. The way leading to their village was defended by poisoned spikes hidden by leaves.

They used bows and arrows set like traps in the form of primitive spring guns, and they used the baby bait because they knew the European would be unable to resist the temptation to pick up an apparently abandoned child. The poison they used was absolutely deadly.

When Mr. Torday, after the expedition had been saved from death by a toy elephant, tried an old-fashioned conjuring trick, and so got the tribe to volunteer to carry their loads to the next village in safety, he threatened to set fire to the river, and, as a beginning, lit up a little spare whiskey. This convinced the natives that the white men were able to destroy anything, and they were naturally very keen to get rid of the magician.

The clockwork elephant came into play through a difficulty in respect of currency. The territory of the Bakongo had never before been crossed by white men. The coinage of the tribe takes the form of bars of iron weighing two pounds, and valued in English money at exactly sevenpence.

When the people heard that the travelers' stock of iron was nearly finished, they began to show hostility. Mr. Torday explained that

The chief brought about the climax by ostentatiously stealing our chickens, and this was, of course, a declaration of war. We were not in an easy situation, for though we could have held our own in the event of a breach of the peace, we should have had to fight our way back to civilization.

At length a less important chief gave them the means of an escape from the difficulties. After the theft of the chickens, he came and explained that he had no bad intentions himself, but that the great chief had decided to kill them. Said the lecturer:

"I replied that if he wanted war he could have it, and I would slay all his people with my elephant. Fortunately, among the many objects which we carried about with us was a clockwork elephant, which was capable of waving its trunk and humming and walking along."

Relying on the imagination of the negro, I proposed to show him my elephant. Mr. Hilton Simpson accordingly took him before my tent, which I entered. I wound up the elephant, and made it walk on some boxes, and then the tent door was thrown open; our friend, seeing the uncanny beast, wanted to run away.

Mr. Simpson insisted that he should have another look, but this was too much for the chief, for, shouting "I am going to fetch those chickens which I have been stolen," he ran back into the village, and in a few minutes our property was restored to us.

Mr. Torday said that amongst the Basongo Meno tribes belief in transmigration was found.

Daughter of India's Viceroy.

Lady Charles Fitzmaurice, who is well remembered in Canada, was Lady Violet Elliot, youngest daughter of Lord Minto. Her marriage, which took place in India, was a very grand affair. Her husband, Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, is a son of Lord Lansdowne, and has also resided in the Dominion. Lady Charles has a little daughter whose christening took place the other day in London when several important people stood as sponsors.

Milady's Mirror

The girl who from motives of economy or convenience prefers to do her own shampooing will save herself much time and weariness if she invests in several appliances used by professionals.

One of these is a spray with a long rubber tubing and fine nozzle. This can be bought to fasten to any spigot and is a great convenience in rinsing the hair. It is almost impossible to get the hair entirely clean by oneself. With the greatest care, some of the soap or shampoo mixture will cling unless forced out by the strong current of a spray.

Another convenience is an electrical drier. These can be found in a number of different styles—some that can be attached to any electric fixture in the house, others that are not dependent upon an electrically lighted room but have their own storage batteries.

Where the hair is heavy enough time is saved in drying to more than make the drier an advisable purchase. Where one is sensitive to draft and usually catches cold after a shampoo the drier is invaluable, as the current of air can be regulated to any desired temperature. The shorter time that damp hair hangs around shoulders is also a preventive of colds.

A drier that sends the current out into the room is better for the hair than those on which the hair rests to dry.

The Falling Hair of Convalescents.

When hair falls after a fever or other weakening disease it is for the reason that the parts near the roots have undergone decay. It is always a mistake to arrest any such fall. One should rather try to quicken it and so give the roots a chance of sending out new, healthy hair. Free combing, brushing and scalp massaging will soon get rid of the diseased hair. When the patient's strength allows the head must be washed and rinsed. Now comes the time for nourishing and stimulating the growth. If money is not very scarce it is intense folly to sacrifice utility to economy. In these cases one should always make an effort to purchase the best things obtainable, preparations ordered to meet the special needs of the patient. However, some excellent results have followed this simple treatment: Make a mixture of tincture of capsicum, ten parts; liquefied phenol, four parts; glycerin, ten parts, and water to complete the hundred parts. Shake and repeat the shaking before pouring out. Apply a dessertspoonful daily, thoroughly combing the hair both before and after the application. After treating the hair thus during seven days use the lotion only four times weekly and on the other days apply a small quantity of oil of rosemary mixed with three times its bulk of olive oil. As the weeks go by lessen the frequency of the capsicum mixture and weaken the rosemary mixture by adding more olive oil.

To Make Arms Pretty.

Girls whose arms are not round and smooth should begin at once to use a bath brush, for there is no doubt that constant daily application of such a toilet article scatters many a group of pimples and other skin disfigurements, while it stimulates circulation and clears the skin.

After scrubbing the arms with a bath brush and any pure soap for a week the roughness should disappear. The unevenness of the flesh is simply old skin that a cloth is too smooth to remove. But when there is irritation, such as sometimes appears on the face, more treatment will be needed.

Before using the formula about to be given the skin should be brushed with green soap, washing it off and drying carefully afterward. Then apply the ointment made from one dram of sublimed sulphur, five drops of oil of eucalyptus and one ounce each of ointment of oxide of zinc and ointment of rosewater. These should be smoothly blended. This mixture should be put on daily or at night. Twice a week only should scrubbing with green soap be given. The bath brush is to be used daily, however, with simple soap.

Finger Nails.

The nails should be cared for every day. If you follow this practice it will take but a few minutes at any one time. Soak your nails in warm water in which there is a little tincture of benzoin or aromatic vinegar. Lather them well with soap and then file the ends to the same shape as the little half moon at the base. Trim off all rough edges. Press the skin away from the half moon so that it will show distinctly. This ought to be done with the towel every time you wash your hands. Do not use a nail file for this purpose, but an orange wood stick. After the nails are shaped by this treatment at both ends polish them with a chamois polisher, being careful not to heat them by too brisk rubbing. Before polishing you may rub a little vaseline or olive oil on them, with a little nail powder dusted over. This will give a high polish which will last longer than the simple friction with the chamois. Be careful to wash the powder all of. The finishing touch is given by rubbing with a plain chamois.

YOUNG OFFICER'S TRIP

LT. ETHERTON TELLS OF JOURNEY IN FORBIDDEN LANDS.

He Spent Three Months In Making a Four Thousand Mile Expedition on Behalf of the Government Into the Country Behind the Himalayas—Tells of Kalmuck Women Who Make Love on Horseback.

Lieutenant Etherton, the young officer in the Garhwal Rifles, who has just arrived in England after completing a secret service mission on behalf of the British Government, spent three months in his overland journey from the Himalayas, through Chinese Turkistan, Mongolia, and Siberia, to the Trans-Siberian Railway, a total distance of nearly 4,000 miles.

After suffering almost incredible hardships and privations, Lieutenant Etherton finally carried his mission to a triumphal conclusion. At the end of his journey he received a cable from England announcing the death of his mother.

Some idea of the remarkable nature of Lieutenant Etherton's explorations may be gleaned from the fact that he encountered:

Strange nomad women in Chinese Turkistan who ride bucking horses in thigh-boots with high French heels, and are wooed and won by being captured on horseback. As many as a dozen suitors frequently take part in an exciting "chase of love";

District officials who were completely won over by the gift of a bottle of preserved gooseberries or a box of assorted crystallized fruit;

Mongolian natives who were utterly cowed by the daily "telescoping" of the explorer's collapsible bed;

A mysterious deserted lake, near the Russian frontier, eight hundred miles in extent, but of unknown depth, in which no fish swim and no boats float.

A press representative who visited Lieutenant Etherton at his home in Hampshire, whither the young officer had gone to recuperate for a few days after his trying ordeal of anxiety, hunger and intense cold, found a slim, dark-haired young man of middle height, dressed in service khaki.

Lieutenant Etherton, though only thirty years of age, has already traveled extensively in the United States, in Australia, and in South Africa, where he served with Kitchener's Fighting Scouts, and was awarded the medal with several clasps.

"This is good after Siberia," he observed as he entered his study from the garden, drinking in the warm sunlight and balmy air of a perfect English spring day.

"No one who has not experienced it can realize what it means to travel for months in a desolate country, all rocks and snow, with the thermometer sometimes 46 degrees below zero, in a fierce blizzard.

"I wore on my journey a heavy overcoat of black leather, lined with thick fur, a fur jacket and trousers, a fur waistcoat, and thick felt boots, but the knife-edged wind sometimes cut right through these as if they had been so much paper.

"One such blizzard caught us in the Altai Mountains, and as a result of this experience I was badly frost-bitten. My legs suffered the most, but by cutting away dead flesh, by snow-massage, frequent bandaging, and the attention I received at a small Russian military post on the Russo-Chinese frontier, I saved both legs, although I still feel the effects of frostbite.

"We started from Lansdowne, in the Himalayas, on March 15, 1909," said Lieutenant Etherton in describing his journey. "The expedition, in addition to myself, consisted of ten men, all of whom, however, with the exception of my sturdy little Garhwali orderly, who is here with me now, were changed from time to time.

"My presents for officials and others in the territory through which I had planned to travel had been carefully chosen. They included the following:

Twelve one and two-pound boxes of crystallized fruits.

Twelve one and two-pound bottles of preserved fruits.

Six large hunting knives.

Four large bottles of liqueurs.

Four small bottles of liqueurs.

One silver watch.

A plentiful supply of paper money.

"The liqueurs were for the 'Ambans' or high Chinese officials encountered along the line of route, the crystallized and the bottled fruits for the 'Begs,' or smaller officials. I found my gifts most effective.

"A bottle of milk punch which I presented to one official and a bottle of cherry brandy which another received from me, had especially good results.

"Our itinerary, which can be readily followed in outline on any map, was as follows:

"From Lansdowne to Rawalpindi, Kashmir, Gilgit, Honza, over the Pamirs—'the Roof of the World'—and by the little-known Yarkand River into the Kulan Urgu Valley; thence into the Asgar Sai Valley, and on to Yarkand, continuing through Chinese Turkistan, over the Tian Chan Mountains to Mongolia, across the Altai Mountains to Siberia, and so to the Trans-Siberian Railway—which was struck at Novo Nicholaevsk Station, thence by rail to Moscow, Warsaw, and Berlin, and so through Hanover to England.

"The journey, by the route I followed, had never been made before.

"From the time we left Kashmir until we touched the Trans-Siberian Railway it was all marching or riding—except the last 750 miles through Siberia, which were accomplished by sledge.

"During most of the journey our diet was confined to the following articles for every meal of the day: Mutton, rice potatoes.

"I never want to look at mutton again. How I longed for a decent civilized meal and a mug of good Pilsener! What I regretted most of all, however, was the absence of any fellow-being of my own race with whom to talk."

A Lucky Poetess.

As a girl Miss Jane Barlow, the Irish poetess, began to send her poems to periodicals, under the name of "Owen Belair." Some were accepted and many returned, and often she thought it was of no use and then again she felt impelled to go on. Miss Barlow related an amusing story of the beginning of her connection with The Cornhill. She submitted a short poem to Mr. Payne, the editor, and was mortified beyond measure when she receiver a postcard which she deciphered to mean, "I have no use for silly verses." Her father, however, found the communication to be "I hope to use your pretty verses," much to the relief of the young author. For ten years Miss Barlow contributed poems and sketches to The Cornhill and other periodicals before she ventured upon her first book "Bogland Stories," which, by her father's advice, she signed by her own name. Next came the "Irish Idylls," which established Jane Barlow's position as a delineator of Irish life.

A Duke's Millions.

His Grace the Duke of Bedford, who recently completed his 52nd year, is the eleventh of the exalted line, and is reputed to own ten millions of money, as well as some of the most valuable ground rents in London. He has the blue eyes, square face, and high forehead of his race, with the cleverness and some of the eccentricity for which the Russell family is famous. The Bedford tradition seems against school, and the present duke was educated at home, and afterwards joined the Grenadier Guards. He is a simple man, with domestic tastes, and his chief interests in life are zoology and natural history. He owns two nicknames. When in India, as Lord Herbrand Russell, the natives converted his front name into "Hatband"; and his own family—for reasons unknown—have always called him "Rousseau."

SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR

A Simple Treatment that Will Make it Truly Fascinating—Wm. Madill Guarantees It

Nowadays every up-to-date woman has radiant hair.

What a foolish creature a woman would be if she lost the opportunity to add to her attraction.

Yet in Canada to-day there are hundreds of thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair who do not make any attempt to improve it.

In Paris most women have beautiful hair, and in Canada all women who use Parisian Sage have lustrous and luxuriant hair.

And any woman reader of the Review, can have attractive and lustrous hair in a few days' time by using this great hair rejuvenator, Parisian Sage.

Wm. Madill sells a large bottle for 50 cents and he guarantees it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Was Warmly Welcomed

The following is from the United Canada (Ottawa) in its issue of April 30th:

Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, of the Diocese of Peterborough, who is known all over Ontario, and whose towering talents and zeal is only equalled by his modesty, was a visitor to the city last week. At Ottawa University where he was a student about 15 years ago, and a great favorite, he was cordially welcomed. At the House of Commons, Western Ontario Grits and Tory M. P's. arranged dinner parties in his honor; but Father Fitzpatrick was obliged to decline and left Wednesday night for Peterborough.

Temperance, in its true sense, does not, and should not, prohibit the sensible use by adults of a beverage so rich in health help as Regal Lager. This pure, delicious, mild beer greatly aids digestion.

BRILLIANT CEREMONY AT ST. JAMES' PALACE

King George the Fifth Proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India.

London, May 10.—With the time-honored ceremony of a most brilliant and impressive character, George V., yesterday morning was proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the seas, defender of the faith, and Emperor of India.

Sharp at the stroke of nine, four heralds arrayed in medieval uniforms of scarlet, heavily braided with gold, mounted the balcony of Friar's Court at St. James' Palace, where Queen Victoria presented herself to the people upon the opening of her memorable reign, and blew through their long silver trumpets.

The precincts of the palace were crowded with a great mass of people, many of whom could not secure but the briefest glimpse of the proceedings. The balconies and roofs of the ancient palace, which had been draped with red cloth, were reserved for the notables, all of whom were in the deepest mourning. Members of the royal household, the Ministers and their wives and high officers of state, all in brilliant uniforms, were gathered around the court. Gen. Sir J. D. P. French, with the headquarters' staff in full dress uniform, stood surrounded by a troop of horse guards in their red tunics and breast plates of polished steel. From the windows of Marlborough House, immediately opposite, the Duke of Cornwall, the young heir to the throne, the younger princes and Princess Mary watched the ceremony.

The heralds, having completed their duties, the officers of arms, chief of whom is the Duke of Norfolk, the hereditary earl marshal and chief butler of England, took their places on the balcony, forming the great heraldic company. None wore mourning, this having been removed for the occasion. Sir Alfred Scott Scott-Gatty, garter principal king of arms, with the Duke of Norfolk and two officers bearing the staffs of office, stepped to the front of the balcony and in a voice which could be heard across the court and in the streets adjoining, read the proclamation, while great throngs stood uncovered in a drizzling rain.

The duke and Sir Alfred then called for three cheers for the King, and the people responded with deafening hurrahs, which were silenced only by the reappearance of the heralds, who sounded another fanfare.

The last note hardly had died away when the band of the Coldstream Guards, which had taken up a position in the square, struck up "God Save the King." The young princes, from their point of vantage in the windows of Marlborough House, stood with their hands at the salute and the officers and troops stood at attention.

As the National Anthem was concluded, the first gun of the battery in St. James' Park belched forth a royal salute and the people in the square and streets at the same moment took up the refrain of "God Save the King." This was probably the most impressive part of the ceremony, the fervent singing of the crowds, which first reached those in the balcony as a hum, growing in volume as more and more singers joined in, while at minute intervals the gun half drowned the chorus. Meanwhile the royal standard had been hoisted over Marlborough House, indicating that the King was in the royal residence and flags upon the public offices throughout the city were raised to the mast head.

The same ceremony was then repeated at Charing Cross, Temple Bar, Chancery Lane, and the Royal Exchange. At Temple Bar permission had to be secured from the Lord Mayor of London before the heralds could enter.

A similar ceremony on a smaller scale was performed in every city throughout the kingdom during the day.

TORONTO BEATS RECORD IN Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN

Tried to Raise $600,000 for Building Fund and Got $685,000—Gave the Surplus to the Women's Association and Will Try to Make it $150,000.

Toronto, May 10.—With all world's records for raising money beaten to a point where Toronto's achievement will stand supreme for some years to come, the giant $600,000 building fund campaign of the Young Men's Christian Association came to a close last night with a subscription list amounting to a grand total of $685,803.01.

The supper which signalized the close of the campaign was a fitting climax to a performance on the part of the citizens of the city that was as unique as it was spectacular. The outstanding features throughout have been organization, determination and enthusiasm.

Probably this was best disclosed when A. E. Huestis announced the total for the day as $97,978.14, E. R. Wood asked if anybody wanted to assume the balance of $2,100 to make it an even $100,000. R. W. Eaton looked at his team, and with a set jaw walked down to the head table and conversed quietly with Mr. Wood, and then declared: "I will take half if John Godfrey takes the other half."

"I will accept his bluff," said Noel Marshall, who was acting captain in Mr. Godfrey's absence.

So the total went up to $100,000.

"This is one of the best moments in my life," said J. M. Godfrey, when he came in late. "I have driven thirty miles in an automobile to be here, and had to get the judge's order to do so. I incidentally got $100 from the judge for the campaign. Now we have gone so far, and placed the Y.M.C.A. on a permanent footing, why not turn over and help the young women?"

"What are we going to do with that extra $35,000?" asked Mr. Godfrey. "Let us get out and help the women. I have sat here to-night and wondered what we were going to do with the other three days. Why not get along and raise $150,000? I can guarantee another $30,000 or $40,000 from my team. We have only gotten our second wind. What I say is this: Let us stop talking, let us get down to business. I think we ought to get to business and clean up $150,000 for the women, and place their work on a permanent basis as well."

SYMPATHY WITH HULL

Ottawa, May 10.—On behalf of the Governor-General, Lord Lanesborough, His Excellency's secretary, yesterday sent this message to Mayor Fontaine, of Hull, regarding the terrible tragedy there: "His Excellency grieves much at your regrettable calamity, and begs that you will convey to the relatives of the deceased expression of his deep sympathy. He trusts you may be able to give him reassuring accounts of the injured."

Messages expressing condolence were also sent by Senator Belcourt, Mayor Hopewell, E. B. Devlin, M.P., and Mr. Gendron, M.P.P.

TWENTY MEN WERE INJURED

New York, May 10.—Twenty men were injured, five fatally, when a hot soldering iron was dropped into one of the small tanks in the Standard Oil Co.'s filling department in Williamsburg yesterday. The tank exploded, throwing out a geyser of burning oil, which spread to the neighboring tanks and set fire to the men in the room. There were sixty employes present, but only twenty of them were injured.

Orange Demonstration.

Niagara Falls, May 10.—July 12th the Brant, Lincoln, Welland, Haldimand and Wentworth Orangemen will hold a celebration here, according to an announcement made yesterday.

After an illness of only three days, Rev. Charles Guillemont of London died at Niagara Falls, N.Y., yesterday of grippe.

MAD DOG AT DENFIELD

Strathroy, May 10.—As the result of the ravages of a mad dog, farmers in the neighborhood of Denfield have been losing large numbers of sheep and cattle. The dog was owned in the city of Stratford, and from information to hand made the distance, 40 miles, between the two places, in little more than a day.

PRIESTS QUARREL WITH BISHOP

Montreal, May 10.—The priests of Ste. Marie de Manoir College, who started a new institution at St. John's in opposition of their bishop, Mgr. Bernard of St. Hyacinthe, and who were condemned to submit by the papal delegate, have decided to appeal direct to the sovereign pontiff.

They say: "In spite of the respect which we have for the apostolic delegate, we believe that His Excellency has exceeded his prerogative in taking from our college priests obtained by virtue of the civil code and of the canonic constitution."

Highway Robbery In Kingston.

Kingston, May 10.—Joseph Tighe of Syracuse was assaulted and robbed of $50 on a side street. The police are looking for two men who did the work, and who can be identified by Tighe.

Mrs. David Smith of Elginburg was thrown out of a rig in a runaway and had her arm broken.

A despatch from New York says:—Miss Ethel M. Jones, twenty years old, whose eyes were hurt by ammonia thrown recently by two mysterious assailants who also beat her, has recovered sufficiently to give the police an account of what happened to her.

Her "rat" saved her, she believes, for it tempered the force of the blow. Miss Jones struck out bravely with her feet and hands while her assailants made an effort to gag her. Then a mixture of amonia and camphor was thrown in her eyes. The men fled.

LT.-COL. GIBSON TAKES OATH

TORONTO ... ... mf-F, khfi8nm$

Toronto, May 10.—The message of condolence from the Province of Ontario is as follows:

"The unexpected tidings of the death of His Majesty King Edward VII, have been received with profound sorrow by the people of the Province of Ontario.

"The Ministers of the crown for the province request your lordship to present to His Majesty King George and to the members of the royal family the deep sympathy of the people of Ontario in the bereavement that has befallen them.

"His late Majesty possessed the unswerving allegiance and loving admiration of all his subjects in this portion of the Canadian dominion, where his devotion to public duty and his regard for the welfare of his people had greatly endeared him to all. This loss which the whole Empire has sustained by the demise of his honored and beloved Majesty, whose labors for the public good were recognized and appreciated throughout the world, is nowhere felt more painfully than in His Majesty's loyal Province of Ontario."

As the cathedral clock in the main hall of Government House was chiming four yesterday afternoon, His Honor Lieut.-Governor Gibson swore "to be faithful and to bear true allegiance to His Majesty, King George V." The ceremony took place in the large drawing room. The oath was administered by Sir Charles Moss, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal. Following His Honor, Sir James Whitney, Premier; Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General; Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, and Hon. A. R. Pyne, Minister of Education, received the oath of allegiance at the hands of J. Lonsdale Capreol, clerk of the Executive Council. In the case of Sir Charles Moss, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal, Sir John Alexander Boyd, chancellor; Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas Division; Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, Chief Justice of the King's Bench Division, and Sir Wm. Mulock, Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division, each in turn took the oath in the left hand and the Bible in the right, and after reciting the oath in the first person, the signature was affixed. The testament used by Mr. Capreol was bound with purple ribbon and has done service in connection with the administering of the oath to every provincial Premier since the day of John Sandfield Macdonald. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. Gibson and the Misses Gibson. To be sure that her own Bible would be used, Mrs. Gibson had his honor acknowledge the oath twice.

COMET WAS RED; FOREBODES EVIL

New York, May 10.—The Tribune publishes the following wireless despatch from the steamship Bermudian in Bermuda waters:

On the night of the death of King Edward a phenomenon was observed at Bermuda and recorded by a scientist who was watching Halley's comet, which first became visible at about 2 o'clock in the morning. At 12.30 o'clock the fort near Hamilton began firing the salute of 101 guns to the new King at intervals of two minutes, and as the last gun was fired, at exactly 3.52 o'clock, the comet's tail flared red.

The head also became a ball of red fire, and the phenomenon continued for five minutes. Many negroes working on the docks refused to work longer, and fell to their knees and prayed. In their superstition they exclaimed that the occurrence boded no good for the reign of George V. Several large parties are expected at Bermuda this month to observe the comet.

SAVED FROM PROBABLE FATAL INJURY BY HER "RAT"

MISS ETHEL M. JONES

In order to make the work of the census taking in New York city complete, the enumerators have been delegated to the public parks to question the many unfortunates who make the parks their homes at night. The work is not very pleasant to the census men, who find many of the park frequenters unwilling to answer questions.

EDUCATING AMERICANS

Winnipeg, May 10.—So great has been the demand of the American public for motion pictures of Western Canadian life that syndicates are even now demanding pictures. Harbeck of Seattle has spent the past ten days securing films picturing the arrival of the American settler and his various efforts in building a home and developing his farm on the prairie. The series includes views on the trail, meals in the open, the prairie schooner, steampows operating, etc. One of the largest New York syndicates has also completed arrangements for taking a series of typical Western Canada scenes.

SATISFACTORY RAILWAY BILL IS EXPECTED

Passaic, N.J., May 10.—In a speech before the Passaic Board of Trade here last night in which he discussed the legislative situation at Washington, President Taft declared with a great deal of emphasis, and amid an outburst of applause, that the railroad bill has not been emasculated in any vital way, and predicted that a satisfactory law would be passed.

IDENTIFIED HER ASSAILANT

London, Ont., May 10.—John Prodger appeared before Magistrate Love yesterday and was most positively identified by Miss Elizabeth Frank as the man who, on the afternoon of April 5, fired four shots at her when he broke into her home. Prodger was remanded until Thursday.

Trouble Brewing In China.

Chang Sha, China, May 10.—The general uneasiness has been greatly increased here by the appearance of a large number of posters, unsigned, demanding the destruction of foreigners and native Christians, and naming May 29 as the date for the general anti-Manchu uprising.

HIS REAL NAME IS RANDALL

Whitby, May 10.—"Not guilty" will be Archie McLachlan's plea to the charge of murder before Justice Teetzel in the Ontario County Assizes today. There will be no attempt on the part of his counsel, Wm. A. Henderson, of the firm of Robinette, Godfrey, Phelan & Henderson, at establishing an alibi, nor at setting up an insanity plea. Just an absolute denial of the charge of having poisoned his wife and two children and of setting fire to the house.

"I am as innocent of murder as a babe unborn," he excitedly proclaimed in the cell recently to Mrs. A. McLachlan, with whom he once resided. "I cannot remember what occurred on the night of the fire. It seems like a hazy dream."

McLachlan's real name is Randall. He lived with Mrs. McLachlan from the time he was a small boy until he was well grown, and took her name.

His little daughter, Monta, has been several times to see him in jail, and he has displayed much emotion.

Geo. Tate Blackstock will conduct the prosecution. Fifty witnesses have been summoned by the crown.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Lord Carrington has been appointed Lord High Chamberlain to the new King.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has been elected chairman of the board of the C.P.R.

Isaac Brock Dickie was run over by a wagon on his farm in Brantford Township and killed.

Over a thousand liquor dealers will meet at Quebec to protest against the early-closing movement.

It is reported in London that the Duke of Connaught will probably be the next Governor-General of Canada.

John Monroe, formerly of London, Ont., has been sent to Jackson Prison, Michigan, for from one to five years for larceny.

Mr. France's two-year-old son wandered away from home near Elkhorn, Man., and it is feared he has died from exposure or been killed by a wolf.

Constable O'Connell died at Montreal from his wound, and Timothy Canby has been arrested on suspicion of murdering O'Connell and Constable Fortin.

THE WITNESSES WILL BE PRESENT

Windsor, May 10.—The case in the Windsor court to obtain extradition papers for Arthur J. Best, suspected of having caused the death of his wife, Alice Best, in the Detroit River, will be resumed to-day. A strong effort is being made by the Detroit officers to have all the witnesses present who gave testimony during the Police Court examination. Judge McHugh of Windsor having ruled at the previous hearing that testimony could not be introduced through a reading of it, inasmuch as Best was not present at the time it was taken, nor represented by an attorney.

A THOUSAND BODIES FOUND

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 10.—More than 1,000 dead have been taken from the ruins of Cartago. No one is allowed within the precincts of the devastated city except the red cross workers and gangs of soldiers and volunteers employed in clearing away the debris, removing the bodies and dynamiting the dangerous buildings.

Most of the survivors of the earthquake are now at San Jose. Medicines and food supplies from the warships are being rushed from Port Limon, but the condition of those who still remain around the city makes it necessary that extraordinary measures must be taken to provide assistance and shelter for them.

A CHARGE OF INCEST

Toronto, May 10.—W. T. Clarke, aged 45, a street cleaner, was arrested yesterday upon a warrant charging him with incest upon his 17-year-old daughter. This is the third charge of this nature to be laid in the city since April 1.

Bank Fails.

Mobile, Ala., May 10.—News was received here late yesterday that the city bank and trust company of Demopolis, Ala., has closed its doors. The bank had a capital and surplus of $95,000, and deposits of $250,000.

Boy Shot His Little Sister.

St. Johnsburg, Vt., May 10.—While practicing with a 22-calibre rifle yesterday, Louis Martelle, 16 years old, of Sheffield, shot his six-year-old sister, Beatrice, in the head, killing her.

FUNERAL OF KING EDWARD ON THE 20TH OF MAY

Body Will Lie in State for Three Days in Westminster Hall After Which it Will be Interred in St. George's Chapel—Many Kings and Princes Will Attend.

London, May 10.—Friday, May 20, has been definitely fixed as the date for King Edward's funeral. The body will be removed on the 1[illegible]h from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall, where it will lie in state for three days, thence being taken on the evening of the third day to Windsor, for interment in St. George's Chapel on the day following.

The body of the late monarch will be borne on a gun carriage through the streets of London to Paddington Station and again through the streets of Windsor to the castle. The procession will be similar to that upon the occasion of the funeral of Queen Victoria in 1901.

Above the casket will be placed the royal insignia, the crown, orb and sceptre. King George, mounted, will ride immediately behind the casket, followed by other male members of the royal family, foreign monarchs and special ambassadors. The Queen, Queen Mother and ladies of the royal family will come next in the carriages. The rest of the cortege will be made up of representatives of the army and navy, members of the imperial household and high officers of state.

The Republic of France probably will be represented at the funeral by former President Loubet, although there is talk that President Fallieres may come. Emperor William will be here, as will also the Kings of Greece, Spain, Portugal, Denmark, Norway, Belgium and Bulgaria, and the heirs to the throne of Austria, Italy, Turkey, Sweden and Roumania.

Prince Fushimi, who is already in London, will represent Japan, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, younger brother of Emperor Nicholas, will represent Russia, while Holland's representative will be Prince Henry.

Brockville Proclaims Day of Mourning

Brockville, May 10.—The Town Council met yesterday and passed a resolution of condolence with Queen Alexandra in the death of King Edward. The mayor was also requested by resolution to issue a proclamation declaring a day of mourning on the occasion of the King's funeral. A large Union Jack, made specially for Brockville citizens when the King visited here as Prince of Wales, draped the chair of Mayor Patterson.

Elaborate Ceremony at St. John's.

St. John's, Nfld., May 10.—Elaborate ceremonies proclaiming George V. as King made an imposing spectacle at noon yesterday. Escorted by a guard of honor made up of cadets and blue jackets, Sir Ralph C. Williams, K.C.M.G., governor of Newfoundland, proceeded to the legislative halls, where were assembled both branches of the Legislature, members of the Cabinet, foreign consuls, high dignitaries of the church and judiciary, any many citizens.

Roosevelt to Represent U. S.

Passaic, N.J., May 10.—President Taft probably will designate Theodore Roosevelt as a special ambassador to represent the United States Government at the funeral of King Edward. He said last night that he would take the matter up with Secretary Knox soon after he returns to Washington.

New York, May 10.—"No insurance company in this country can carry a dollar of life insurance on the life of King Edward," said Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Co. "Royalty does not submit to a physical examination for insurance, and we cannot insure anybody who does not submit to such examination."

New York, May 10.—At Trinity Church, on Sunday, it was remarked that no one sat in pew No. 70, which has been called the "Prince of Wales' pew" because it was the one occupied by the late King when he attended a service in Old Trinity during his visit. A special memorial service will be held in Trinity Church at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the late King Edward's funeral. The service will be choral and admission will be by ticket only. The "Prince of Wales' pew" will be kept vacant and decorated with purple wreaths and draperies.

TORONTO THE BAD

London, May 10.—Rev. W. T. Graham of Toronto, secretary of the Baptist Social and Moral Reform League, startled Londoners Sunday by his recital in Talbot street Baptist Church of conditions in Toronto, and by charges he made against the Minister of Justice.

"I want to warn the young women," he said, "never to leave Toronto station, if they are alone, with any woman they do not know, and never under any circumstances to go away in a cab with people who may meet them on the train and make themselves friendly, and promise to see them to their destination. Beware of ads. in the papers for stenographers and companions. Don't trust anybody except a relative."

MADE SCENE IN CHURCH AT ST. JOHN

St. John, N.B., May 10.—After creating a scene in St. Peter's Catholic Church from which she had to be ejected, Mrs. Mary Millerstedt Sunday endeavored to throw herself into the harbor. The unforunate woman was caught by one policeman and taken to the police station, where she was pronounced insane. Her condition was due to the loss of her husband, who was drowned at sea some time ago.

LOW WATER DELAYS BOATS

Sault Ste Marie, Ont., May 10.—Low water in the St. Mary's River is working great delay upon navigation. In spite of the fact that the locks on both sides of the river are in commission, there is a blockade of about 45 vessels above. All are loaded to the high mark of last year and consequently cannot get through the Pee Lock, which has only 18 feet over the sill.

YUKON RATES ARE REDUCED

Ottawa, May 10.—As the result of representations made to the Postmaster-General by F. T. Congdon, M.P., the charge made for postal orders to Yukon has been reduced to the same rate as to the rest of Canada. Hitherto the rates have been double.

Farmer Killed by Wagon.

Paris, Ont., May 10.—Yesterday morning Brock Dickie, a prosperous farmer about three miles from here, accidentally fell beneath a wagon which he had just loaded and the wheels passed over his chest, crushing him to death.

Millionaire Publisher Dead.

Milwaukee, May 10.—George Brunder, aged 71, millionaire publisher of German newspapers in Milwaukee, died suddenly yesterday.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP REEVES,
Who administered the rite of confirmation at All Saints' church last evening.

HE DIED FROM POISONED CIDER

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 10.—The inquest into the death of Benjamin Thompson was held last night. The evidence showed that he died six days after drinking poisoned cider. He had quarrelled with John Baldwin, who committed suicide on Wednesday. Thompson told his wife that he believed Baldwin had poisoned him. The inquest was adjourned for a week.

WESTERN FARMERS WANT RAIN

Winnipeg, May 10.—The weekly crop report of the Canadian Northern, received yesterday, indicates that good progress is being made in sowing the coarse grains. All the wheat seeding is done and much of it is showing above the ground. The dry weather has been favorable for sowing, but in many of the districts a rain would now be welcome. A number of the agents of the company report that the farmers are looking anxiously for a good downpour.

Wholesale Shooting.

Staunton, Va., May 10.—Armed with a repeating shotgun, Arch Brown, 35 years old, opened fire upon the assembled guests at the home of a neighbor, four miles from here, killing two persons and wounding two others, one of whom is expected to die.

Wins Yale Scholarship.

Kingston, May 10.—Allan Bateman, B.S., son of Geo. S. Batemen of Sydenham street, has secured a scholarship in Yale University.

St. Luke's A.Y.P.A.

A meeting of the executive of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church is called for to-night at 8 o'clock in the vestry.

GOING TO LOOK FOR COAL

It was reported some weeks ago that good coal had been found in Northern Ontario. It is now announced that the Ontario Government has sent a party to investigate. It is to be hoped that the men chosen are experts, and that no expense that may be necessary for a thorough investigation will be spared. Not only the locality where coal is reported to have been discovered, but the whole northern country should be thoroughly explored for good coal, and if it is found the Government should take the utmost care to preserve it for the benefit of the people of Ontario. Valuable coal lands should not be allowed to fall into the hands of speculators and promoters.

QUEEN MARY AND THE QUEEN MOTHER

To two women the hearts of all the Empire will go out in sympathy—the new Queen and Queen Alexandra. It has been decided that the new Queen shall be known as Queen Mary, while the old Queen has decided to take the sweet title of "Queen Mother." Both these women have long been beloved in Britain, and while the people of Canada and the other Dominions beyond the seas have not had the same intimate acquaintance with them they long ago accepted the verdict of the mother country regarding these queenly women.

Queen Alexandra captured the hearts of the British people when she first arrived in Britain from Denmark in 1863 to become the wife of the Prince of Wales, and she has maintained her popularity ever since.

Queen Mary is British born, being the daughter of the late Prince Francis, Duke of Teck. She has always, from the time of her childhood, been regarded as the most popular of British princesses. She has proved herself to be a model wife and mother, and is devoted to the poor. She has a reputation for sound judgment and great tact, and there is no doubt that she will be a real helpmate to her husband in his kingly office.

DID NOT WISH TO BE KING

It is rather remarkable that the headship of the British Empire should come to a man who did not wish to be king. Prince George grew up without expectation of ever coming to the throne. His older brother, the Duke of Clarence, was in the line of the succession, and Prince George's only ambition was to be a good British sailor. He was twenty-seven years of age when his older brother, the Duke of Clarence, died. He grieved deeply for his brother and took no pleasure in the thought of being King. And now the cable messages say that he is evidently full of sorrow for his father's death, caring nothing for kingly pomp, yet anxious to do his duty to the Empire.

He is said to have a great aversion to red tape and to be simple in all his tastes. For years he has devoted much time to the improvement of the condition of the poor, being constantly assisted in this good work by his wife, now Queen Mary. It is stated that in company with the princess he has visited hundreds of slum houses, that he has conferred with local housing committees and discussed with architects schemes for rebuilding workmen's dwellings with modern sanitation. He is especially fond of children, and has constantly visited hospitals for children while he has suggested reforms for the families of industrial workers and given his personal attention to arrangements for sending children of the slums for a day's outing in the country. His life in London is said to have been divided between this benevolent work, reading and such quiet pursuits as hunting for rare postage stamps, of which he has a fine collection. While he lacks the wonderful personal magnetism of King Edward, his goodness and benevolence will no doubt make him a very popular King.

The London correspondent of the New York American says:

"The new King is deeply read, and cultured, and has kept in close touch with the literary world, likewise maintaining close relations with officers who were shipmates when he served in the navy. If the King has one absorbing passion it is his love for the navy, and it may be certain that one tangible effect of his reign will be constant, consistent influence to maintain a British fleet the largest in size and the biggest in efficiency. George has a strong sense of humor, which often breaks through the intense reserve of his character. One of the earliest authentic stories of the King concerns a visit to Windsor as a small boy to see Victoria. The latter was a strong disciplinarian, and George, who was restless and stubborn, frequently felt the weight of her displeasure. When breakfast was served the Queen ordered him to retreat under the table as punishment. George disappeared and remained quiet for 15 minutes. When Queen Victoria asked him if he would be good, George replied meekly in the affirmative, whereupon he was permitted to emerge. The Queen was speechless with astonishment when the prince crawled out naked, having stripped and piled his clothes neatly underneath. The same quaint sense of humor frequently cropped out when a naval cadet, and afterwards an officer he played many practical jokes on his messmates.

The present King had decided to devote his career to the navy. When the Duke of Clarence, his elder brother, died unexpectedly 18 years ago, George abandoned the sea with a heavy heart. In a sense he passed into obscurity when he became Prince of Wales. After his marriage with the Princess May of Teck, he settled into a comfortable methodical life of domesticated Briton and an impenetrable veil with which a domesticated Briton envelops his family hearth, effectually shut the heir to the throne from the public gaze. Through years he remained the same shy, retiring individual who made an unwilling appearance at levees and other state functions, or sometimes opened bazaars. The late King gave him little chance of displaying his personality, even had he so desired. During Victoria's reign Edward discharged many duties which the Queen relegated to him because of her advancing age. He thus kept constantly in the public eye. But when he ascended the throne he was unwilling to leave any official function to his son which he could perform himself. George was content to devote himself to his wife and steadily growing family. The happiness of his married life was, in a measure, curiously unexpected by the nation. His wife was engaged to Duke Clarence, but his death necessitated alteration of state plans. George was told he must marry his brother's fiancee. Although it meant altering his entire life and abandoning a love romance, he acquiesced, and the result is to-day pointed at with pride by British matrons who consider that marriages are happiest when arranged by parents. For one thing the British nation is profoundly thankful. The new King is thoroughly English to the core.

King George is an ardent, if quiet, supporter of a big navy movement. He knows more about the German naval plans than any other officer of the British fleet. He has tables showing the world's progress in battleship fleets at his fingers' ends. His distaste for German atmosphere will undoubtedly be felt in the new court. Edward's retinue included many foreign servants. His first valet was Austrian, his private courier a Swiss, and his second body servant likewise a Swiss. George prefers to be surrounded by his own countrymen. Although an apparently trivial detail, it will, nevertheless markedly increase his popularity at a time when the British people are especially sensitive to the inroads of German commerce and alarmed at the increase of German armaments. George and the Kaiser have one thing in common—an enquiring mind. Like the Kaiser, he never takes anything for granted. Physicians in London hospitals where he was a familiar visitor as the Prince of Wales, relate how he always insisted upon learning the smallest detail on any subject that interested him. Edward was inclined to affably accept the statements of other people; but his son is persistent in following any matter that interests him".

Servant Girls Disappearing.

During the last thirty years the demand for servants has doubled, while the supply has increased only by half in the last decade only by 5 per cent. In 1870 there was one to every twelve. Even in the recent crisis, when the cities were filled with unemployed, the demand still outran the supply. And yet during the thirty years past the number of self supporting women—that is, the actual labor market—has more than trebled. Forty years ago a woman thrown upon her own resources would tend to select housework for a living—in fact, one woman in two did so select. Thirty years ago only every third woman entered domestic service. Ten years ago only one in four rapped at the kitchen door. The other three applied—where? Every one knows—at the shop, the factory, the store.—McClure's Magazine.

Plato's Tree.

The giant redwood trees of the Pacific coast have a rival in Greece in one respect, for at Athens there lives and even flourishes a tree under which, tradition says, Plato used to expound his doctrines to his disciples. This is an olive tree—one of the longest lived kind among trees—and experts say that the tradition may be true, so far as its age is concerned. It is over twenty-three feet in diameter. For many years it bore no fruit, but was a source of profit to its owner, for every tourist thinks he must visit it. But a year ago it surprised every one by bearing a beautiful crop. The proud owner when the fruit was cured sent presents of these "platonic olives" to all the sovereigns of Europe.—Boston Herald.

HE WOULDN'T BRAY TODAY.

When Alexander Selkirk posed
And claimed to be the all
Of everything that lives and moves
On this terrestrial ball
'Tis very plain his better half
Was not like those today
Or he would not have blowed himself
And got off such a bray.

'Tis plain he never helped clean house
Nor saw a holiday,
When women take men by the neck
And make them big bills pay.
Nor had he bought a Paris hat
And mortgaged all he had for that.
O Alex, smart; O Alex, gay,
You wouldn't have so much to say,

Especially if her mother came!
She would your domineering tame,
And a new baby in one night
Would knock your conceit out of sight.
You men of this smart Alex style
Had better hunt a desert isle,
For if you're snared by woman new
She'll sweetly stoop and conquer you.
C. M. BARNITZ.

CROSSING EMBDEN, TOULOUSE AND OTHER GEESE.

Whenever you see a gander on the green there rises to your lips that old question, "Goosey, goosey, gander, where do you wander?"

Well, if you ever mate a White Embden gander and a Gray Toulouse goose and raise the green gosling rubbernecks to the age of the original of our picture (seven months) when you take a birdseye view of the tender offspring you will wonder where the shape and style of the old gander and goose went, for the only resemblance you'll see will be in the white and gray markings. Nevertheless it's a good cross for market purposes.

Both of these big breeds run to fat, which is shown by the dewlap under the chin and the abdomen dragging on the ground.

The Toulouse, too, is rather flabby and coarse of flesh. But, strange to relate, by this cross you get a fowl of graceful lines and finer, firmer fibered flesh.

This makes a more popular fowl, for market buyers aren't after goose grease, and you can imagine there's grease to burn when the gander and goose of these breeds weigh twenty and eighteen pounds respectively.

The other geese mostly used for commercial purposes are Gray African, White and Brown Chinese and the Canadian or wild. These are much different from the Toulouse and Embden, the Gray African only equaling them in size, the African and Chinese having big knobs on their heads and the Canadian being a sort of missing link between the duck and goose.

Good crosses are made by mating Canadian or Embden gander with African, and Embden gander with White China.

Geese should only be crossed for market purposes, and pure bred fowls should only be mated. Such offspring are called mongrels and mules. Mules do not breed, and those who confidently expect to breed something wonderful from their mixed geese seldom get eggs to set, and when such an exception occurs the eggs are invariably infertile.

DON'TS.

Don't expect the show manager to give your birds extra care without extra pay.

Don't say you value your hen at $1,000. Such homemade opinions look awfully cheap.

Don't fail to quarantine your show birds on return from the exhibition. You might have an epidemic.

Don't expect your town paper to puff your winnings when you advertise 1,000 miles away.

Don't forget that the early hatched chicks are the best birds for show. February and March are for show birds best; April and May best for nest.

Don't use commonplace cuts on your stationery, and in describing your stock don't use all the adjectives in the dictionary.

Don't let the turkeys roost out in stormy winter weather. The wind will blow them off the trees into a snow drift to freeze.

The steamer Sequin, aground near Ballard's Reef, has been released.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Cattle 10c to 20c Higher at Chicago—Buffalo Steady.

LONDON, May 9.—London and Liverpool cables quoted live cattle (American) steady, at 13½c to 14½c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef steady, at 11c to 11½c per pound.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, May 9.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were large—a record run of 141 carloads, consisting of 2961 cattle, 99 hogs, 105 sheep and 111 calves.

Distillery Steers.

Geo. Campbell bought for Morris & Co. five loads of steers fed at the Don Byres, 1250 lbs. each, at $7.50.

E. L. Woodward bought five carloads, fed at the same byres, for Swift & Co., 1370 lbs. each, at $7.50 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

Veal Calves.

The bulk of the calves sold at $3 to $6.25, altho a few choice quality reached $7 per cwt.

Ewes sold at $5 to $6 per cwt.; rams at $4 to $5 per cwt.; yearlings at $7 to $8 per cwt.; spring lambs at $3 to $6.50 each.

Hogs.

Hogs prices are higher, at $9.25 for selects, fed and watered, and $9 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 9.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market receipts last week were 2850 cattle, 295 sheep and lambs, 1580 hogs and 2325 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for local consumption amounted to 800 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 400 calves. Cattle prices, as compared with last Wednesday's, show an advance of 25c per 100 lbs., attributed to a lighter run and the improved demand from exporters for supplies in the west, on account of the high prices running in foreign markets and the low rates at which ocean freight space can be obtained, both from here and Boston.

There was some trouble in the Jewish trade, and dealers stated that they would not commence operations until it was settled. Choice steers sold at 7¼c to 7½c; good at 6¾c to 7c; fairly good at 6¼c to 6½c; fair at 5¾c to 6c, and common at 5c to 5½c per lb. Choice cows brought 6c to 6¼c, and lower grades 5¼c to 5¾c, and bulls at from 5¼c to 6¼c per lb. Hog prices have advanced 25c to 35c per 100 lbs. since last Wednesday, in sympathy with the recent advance in the Toronto market, but more so to the smaller supplies which came forward here, and the improved demand for the same from packers, as they were all more or less short of stock. Sales of selected lots were made at $10 to $10.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet on account of the limited offerings. Sheep prices ruled ½c per lb. lower, with sales of a few small lots at 5½c per lb. Spring lambs were steady at from $4 to $8 each. Calves met with a steady sale at $2.50 to $5 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 9.—Cattle—Receipts, 6700 head; active; common and medium butchers' grades, 10c to 15c lower; others steady; prime steers, $7.75 to $8.15; shipping, $7 to $7.75; butchers, $5.25 to $7.50; heifers, $5.25 to $7; cows, $3.25 to $6.65; bulls, $4.75 to $6.75; stockers and feeders, $4.75 to $6.25; stock heifers, $4.50 to $5; fresh cows and springers steady, $3 to $7.

Veals—Receipts, 2500 head; slow and 25c higher, $6 to $8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,500 head; active and 10c to 20c lower; heavy and mixed, $9.80 to $9.85; a few, $9.90; yorkers, $9.85 to $9.90; pigs, $9.90 to $10; roughs, $8.75 to $8.90; stags, $7.50 to $8.25; dairies, $9.75 to $9.90.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 23,000 head; sheep slow; mixed sheep steady; others 30c to 25c lower; lambs slow and 50c lower; lambs, $7.25 to $9; yearlings, $7.75 to $8; wethers, $7.25 to $7.40; ewes, $6.25 to $6.75; sheep, mixed, $4 to $7.25.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Beeves—Receipts, 3774; market irregular; steers, $7 to $8.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.25; cows, $3.20 to $5.80; dressed beef firm for native sides, at 11c to 12c.

Calves—Receipts, 7067; prime heavy calves steady to strong; others steady to lower; all sold; veals, $6.50 to $8.50; tops, $8.75; culls, $4.75 to $6; dressed calves steady; city dressed veals, 10c to 12½c; country dressed, 7c to 10½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 7834; sheep steady; lambs slow to 15c lower; all sold. Sheep, all clipped; lambs, all clipped, $8 to $8.25; state springers, $4.50 to $6 per head.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

CHAPTER VII.

ONCE again, just as the dusk was gathering, Eunice lingered by the fence near the spring house. The girl's heart was on fire this evening, and she felt that she would stifle or shriek if she went into the house and shut herself within those dreary whitewashed walls. Here in the open she might breathe deep. Today her pent up feelings had reached the high water mark, and tonight they must have outlet or she must suffocate.

What was the meaning, she was asking herself in bewilderment, of this mingled ecstasy and woe which were now her daily portion when of old (so long ago it seemed, though in reality it was only three weeks ago that he—the man from the city—had come among them) her soul had been cold, dormant, incapable of feeling aught of pain or pleasure? And now—to the tips of her fingers was she tingling with life, with burning emotions which stifled and pained, yet gave her the first taste of joy she had ever known. For the first time in her memory the heavy loneliness in which she had always lived seemed lifted. Something in her which had always been starved was fed. It had become worth while to rise up in the morning and go through with her tasks. The days palpitated now and throbbed. They were no longer the dull, dead drag they had been. There was always the possibility of a word or act of kindness from him. Never before in her life had she known kindness, but he had been kind to her. He had tried to shield her from her foster father's anger and had then hidden the newspaper for her. He had helped her when he saw her burdened with her heavy buckets of milk. He had several times spoken to her with a friendly interest.

These episodes, entirely trifling in themselves, appeared large and luminous to this girl, accustomed only to slights. Her imagination, fired by his utter difference from any one she had ever before seen, made of him a creature whose least word or act was weighted with significance. Her absorbing and passionate interest in everything about him—his voice, his accent (so strange to her ears), the movements of his white hands (never had she seen such hands), the way he sat or walked or stood or looked—all that he did or uttered was fascinating, intoxicating. And today her feelings had suddenly reached a climax of intensity which had amazed herself. It had come upon her when she had seen him return from his afternoon outing in company with the two young ladies—young ladies of his kind of people, of education, beauty, worldly knowledge, money, freedom from drudgery, everything which made a woman appear attractive, everything which she lacked.

Apparently he had been spending the afternoon with them. Theirs was the privilege of looking upon him for hours together, of hearing the sound of his voice, of drinking in his thoughts about things (how hungry her own mind was to read all his thoughts and feelings), and—oh, bitterness!—they had all three come upon her when, weary and soiled and overladen, she was awkwardly lugging her heavy buckets across the garden. She had fancied his snowy hands had shrunk from touching her soiled ones as he took the buckets from her. The overwhelming sense of her own inferiority in the face of the contrast between herself and the boarders had been followed by a passion of inward rebellion that had left her physically exhausted. It had not yet spent itself as just now she lingered in the dusk by the spring house fence. Her heart burned within her with a feeling that she did not understand, for the passion of jealousy was to her as unknown as the passion of love. Her own blinding, consuming emotions were appalling to herself in their utter strangeness and newness.

He had said that he wished to assume a farmhand's disguise because he didn't want to associate with the new guests. Why, then, was he spending whole afternoons with them? Was he repenting him of his whim? And they, even though they thought him a mere farmhand, could not fail to find happiness in being with him, for farmhand or gentleman, he was himself.

The young ladies appeared to her very stupid not to recognize that he was not a farmhand. To be sure, they probably did not know many farmhands and so did not see how impossible it was, but they had only to compare him with Abe and his father to see the absurdity of it.

This evening, for the first time since he had come to the farm, she fell to wondering in a vague, indefinite way what was his mental image of herself, whom he saw only at her drudgery, treated slightingly by every one, always looking hideous in her working clothes, shy before him even to cowardice. That day he had found her with the newspaper he had evidently supposed that her starting and turning white had been caused by her fear of being caught in the act of disobeying her foster father. She had read his look of half contemptuous pity clearly enough, and it had served to increase her agony of embarrassment before him. Then his poorly concealed mockery at her not knowing about that great man, Andrew Carnegie how that had mortified her! And now to heighten the effect of her own uncomeliness here were these well dressed, well looking, well educated and worldly wise young ladies daily before his eyes. Oh, if only she could creep into a corner and remain unseen while still not losing the bliss of seeing him! But, then, there was the ecstasy of having him occasionally speak to her. The few dozen words he had spoken to her in the time he had been with them were graven deep in her heart. Why should he seek to talk to her now and then if he utterly despised her—he who at first had meant to avoid even those two girls from the town by assuming a farmhand's garb? He never talked to Ollie. Why did he speak to her? True, their few encounters had been quite accidental. He had not sought her out. Perhaps he took the trouble to speak kindly to her because he was sorry for one whom every one else half despised.

Her thoughts were interrupted by the sound of approaching footsteps and voices. The two young ladies were coming toward her across the grass plot.

"Eunice!" cried Daisy when still a few yards distant. "Do you know where Pete is? I want to hire him to take us for a drive."

Eunice's heart beat thick in her breast. To see these pretty girls, their fair bodies daintily clad, their white hands bearing no ugly marks of rough work, their care free spirits bright with happiness—to look on and see them drive off into the summer twilight with him—she could not bear that this evening!

"Where is he?" repeated Daisy. "I'm going to find him if I have to search all over the farm. It's such a dandy evening for a drive!"

"Did you look up in the north cornfield?" Eunice asked, not glancing up.

"'Way up in that north cornfield?" cried Daisy in consternation.

"You are sure he is there, Eunice?" asked Georgiann.

"It would be well for you to look there," the girl steadily replied.

"What proof can you offer that he's there, Eunice?" demanded Daisy. "I don't want to chase up there for nothing."

"If you have looked every place else, that's the only place he can be."

"That seems reasonable," Daisy granted. "Is he mowing corn up there tonight?"

"No," Eunice was able to answer truthfully.

"Then what is he doing?"

"He may possibly be looking to see how the corn is coming on, but," she hastily added, "I can't prove it."

"Well," sighed Daisy, "come on, Georgie. We'll have to skate if we're going to get a drive tonight."

They went away, and Eunice was left alone to face her own chaotic

"What led you to think I was up in the north cornfield?"

thoughts. She leaned her elbows on the fence and pressed her palms against her burning cheeks to cool them. The sunset, palpitating and rich with color, seemed to her as she gazed out over the fields to the crimson horizon to mirror her own warm passionate heart.

She had lied to these young ladies! Not in actual words, but the impression she had given was false. Why had she done it? What good could it do her? And suppose he knew! A wave of shame enveloped her. The hands supporting her cheeks covered her eyes as though to shut out from her sight the disgraceful self she beheld. Could she ever look at him again after this?

"What led you to think I was up in the north cornfield?"

She did not uncover her eyes, she did not move. He was there beside her! He had overheard her telling those girls to look for him in that impossible north cornfield, a quarter of a mile away! He had been standing, no doubt, just within the spring house and had heard her utter those lies. He had surely recognized that they were lies, though her spoken words had not been literally untrue.

"I didn't tell them you were there," she faintly answered.

"Why, you sent them up there to find me, didn't you?" he asked, his tone puzzled.

"Yes," she confessed like a guilty child.

"Well, didn't you think I was there?"

She shook her head.

"You didn't? Then why in thunder did you make them think I was?"

"Because—that's where I knew you wouldn't be." The words seemed dragged from her against her will.

He appeared to puzzle over it a bit. What he really was thinking was that perhaps he had now stumbled upon the solution of the mystery of this maiden. To offer as an explanation of her having sent those girls to look for him in the north cornfield that she knew that's where he wouldn't be—evidently she was not quite right in her mind.

But another idea occurred to him.

"Ah!" he said. "You wanted to give them a false scent, knowing that I prefer to keep to myself?"

It was a beautiful explanation. For a moment she half believed that was why she had sent them to the north cornfield—to protect him from their unwelcome society. Anyway, it was infinitely comforting to have him think so, instead of knowing her real reason. What was her real reason? She could not have defined it, even to herself.

He seemed waiting to hear her confirm or deny his surmise. But she did not speak.

"It was very kind of you," he presently added, "to want to oblige me."

Her face burned hotter. She had an impulse to turn to him and undeceive him—to tell him the disgraceful truth. But what was the truth? Why had she wished to keep him away from the two girls?

It was her entire ignorance of life that made it so impossible for her to understand her own quite primitive emotions.

"It was clever of you, too," he chuckled. "The north cornfield! I'd be just as likely to be at the north pole, wouldn't I?"

Kinross was, in fact, gratuitously assuming that she had wished to return his favor to her in having averted her foster father's wrath upon finding her with the forbidden newspaper.

Eunice was conscious of the fact that, while in her heart she felt ashamed of what she had done, she was throbbing with joy at having done it, for was he not here alone with her in the summer evening? She exulted madly in her guilt.

"I would never have dreamed you capable, little Eunice, of such subtlety," he went on, and she could feel the amusement in his voice. "To think of those two poor girls scouring that cornfield in search of me! And you look so harmless!"

He gave a short laugh as he put his pipe to his lips.

Was he really so glad, she wondered, at having escaped them? The thought was followed by an apprehension which clouded her joy of the moment. If he was so fond of being alone, her own presence here must annoy him, but he had come to her. She had not intruded upon him.

"I must go indoors now," she suddenly said, her low sweet voice scarcely above a whisper, as she drew back from the fence.

"Must you? What for?" he asked, and her hungry heart felt or imagined a note of regret in his tone.

"I don't have to—if—if it doesn't annoy you for me to be here."

Again to Kinross' ear that something in her speech so unlike that of the rest of the family! So arrested was he by it that for an instant he did not answer her question. His silence was answer enough for her, and again she quickly stepped away from the fence.

"No"—he abruptly stopped her—"you don't annoy me."

He was struck with the absurdity of his telling a young woman that her society did not annoy him. He saw in the dimness how her face lighted up at his words, and a quick compassion stirred him.

"Poor, lonely child!" he thought.

But in the same instant he realized that her sudden radiance was clouded over by her habitual pensiveness.

"I'm not important enough to," came her response in a low, sorrowful voice. "Am I?"

He turned and looked at her. "Now, Eunice," he asked after an instant's weighing of it, "just what do you mean by that?"

"A kitten or a poodle would annoy you more than I, so you don't feel obliged to dodge about to be rid of me as you do of—others—who are more important."

Hello! She had found her voice; she was become articulate! Was that a note of bitterness he caught in her words?

"I will go indoors now," she repeated, with a melancholy dignity, as again she drew back from the fence.

He had an impulse to urge her to stay. There was an undefined impression in his mind that he wanted to question her about herself. But both the impulse and the impression were too vague to urge to prompt action, and before he could clarify them she was gone.

Eunice meantime, as she sped across the orchard, was already regretting passionately that she had left him. If she did not annoy him was not that enough for her to expect? Why had she not remained to drink in at least the happiness of being near him? And what did it matter if to him her existence was as that of a fly?

"He was speaking to me—to me—and I came away!"

She stopped short in her quick walk and half turned to go back. Her eyes fell upon two figures just coming into the orchard and walking toward the spring house. They were the young ladies, and they had spied Pete where he still stood by the fence. Daisy's rippling, shallow laughter floated to her on the quiet evening air. She stood still and watched. Would Dr. Kinross go away when he heard them coming? Yes, he was moving off, though escape was not very easy. She heard Daisy call out to him to stop him. She saw him hesitate, then turn back and wait. Daisy ran up to him and caught hold of his shirt sleeve. Georgiana followed with slow, stately grace.

Presently the three of them went across the orchard together toward the lane that led to the hill. Were they going to climb the hill together? The sunset view from there was very fine. It was the one spot in all the region that was dear to her, because here, in solitude, she had known some hours of peace and even of happiness, and the place had come to seem to her her very own. And now those girls were going there with him—to her hill.

She shrank back into the shadow of some trees as they came near enough to see her.

"It's a good deal of a climb," she heard Dr. Kinross say in a tone of warning.

"I'm game!" Daisy declared. And then they moved out of her hearing.

She watched them as they emerged into the road and went up the lane until they disappeared around a bend at the foot of the hill.

Her bosom rose and fell in a long deep breath as at last she turned away and slowly, with her head wearily drooping, walked through the garden to the kitchen porch and went into the house.

CHAPTER VIII.

"YOUR mother wouldn't leave me go, Abe, you know that, even if I wanted to."

"Yes," said Abe bitterly, "even if you wanted? That's the way you put it, ain't? And you don't want. If you'd make your mind up, Eunice, that you wanted to go, don't you know that mom she wouldn't have the dare to stop you? Because you're got your age, and if mom tries to boss you you have the right to up and tell her, 'I don't have to.' It's time you knowed that oncet!"

Eunice looked at her foster brother and would be lover with sudden attention. They were in the spring house, he standing in the doorway and barring her exit, and she, with her daily burden of butter, cheese and milk for the dinner table, waiting anxiously to be allowed to pass.

"Have I the right, Abe, to follow my own will?" she asked, with a repressed eagerness, which Abe instantly interpreted as referring to his invitation to her to go with him next day to the circus in town. "I didn't know that, Abe!"

"You're your own boss when you're eighteen a'ready."

"But your mother and father support me," she reasoned, repeating the lesson which had been ground into her ever since she could remember anything, "and so have a right to control me, haven't they?"

There was an anxious wistfulness in her eyes which thrilled her baffled and discouraged suitor with hope.

"Don't you earn your keep and a good bit over where [which] you don't get? If they had a hired girl do half what you do, still they'd have to give her two a week."

Mending With Plaster.

In lieu of drawing the torn edge of a dress together with silk thread or even with frayed threads of the material an excellent plan lies in your medicine chest.

That sounds a trifle startling to the needle worker, but listen. A piece of court plaster will form a good working basis upon which a comparatively invisible reparation can be made.

If the tear be on the plain width the skirt should be laid upon a table, the edges pulled together and pinned down and finally the strip of court plaster applied. A hot iron will press the edges together, and the frayed threads should be cut away as a finishing touch.

Acute Dyspepsia

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge, P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep, and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

ORIGINAL AND ECONOMICAL MEANS OF GETTING GRAVEL

Is Employed in Connection With the Construction Work on the New Temiskaming Dam—Gravel Shovelled Into Chute Which Runs From Top of Hill to the Cement Mixer at Cost of Twenty-Five Cents a Yard

Mr. Arthur Graham of this city, who is in charge of the cement work in connection with the mammoth concrete dam being constructed at the junction of the Ottawa River and Temiskaming Lake, is in the city on a short visit. The construction of the dam is in charge of Mr. A. G. Morrison, who superintended the work on the Peterborough waterworks dam. At the junction of the lake and river an island causes a break in the course of the water, and when the water is low logs get jammed in the channels on either side of the island. A dam is being built for both channels, and when the work is completed there will be no difficulty in driving the logs through the channels, and a generous supply of water power will also be afforded for the future.

The dam will be about 800 feet in width on both sides of the island, and each structure will have fifteen piers and two abutments.

Pete Cavanagh, Felix Lynch, Elmo Bogue and Joe Lynch, all of Peterborough, are engaged in various departments of the work.

AN ORIGINAL SCHEME.

It was found when construction work was commenced on the dam that it would be very difficult to get gravel. The C.P.R. was asked concerning the supply and quoted a price of $1.50 per yard. This suggestion didn't meet with the approval of those in charge of the work, as the gravel would have been too expensive at the price. So, getting their heads together, they finally evolved a scheme by which the gravel could be gotten at a cost of 25 cents a yard.

The explanation of this economical venture is as follows:

About a hundred yards from the west side of the dam there is a brook on the top of a hill, where gravel is available. A chute twenty feet wide and sixteen feet high was built from the top of the hill to the cementmixer on the works. The stream was diverted into the chute and six men were placed at the top of the chute to shovel in the gravel, the water carrying it to the hopper at the mixer. A screen placed at the foot of the chute insured all the gravel being screened and washed, as it was emptied into the hopper. The lower portion of the chute is worked on a swivel and swung to one side when the hopper is full, the gravel being emptied in a heap beside the hopper ready for use.

AN ELOQUENT EULOGY OF THE LATE KING EDWARD

The following eulogy of King Edward was given at St. John's church on Sunday morning by Rev. H. R. Trumpour:—

"Before I begin my sermon I am sure that standing as we do, behind the dark curtains Death has drawn round our empire, and beneath the shadow of our Monarch's last summons, you will expect me to make at least some reference to our imperial bereavement.

Kind Edward VII. has fallen asleep. Twice with but scanty interval the King of Kings has summoned England's proud and mighty Monarch from the scene of earthly law to the presence chamber of the throne of grace. Twice in briefest memory our British Empire has surrendered its Sovereign unto a yet more Sovereign will.

Edward VII. has passed. The suddenness of it, our distance from it hinders heart and mind from comprehending its reality, from submitting even as yet to the full natural feelings of personal sorrow. For not till the details came, and we stood beside that bed with a strong wrestler wrestling with a wrestler stronger yet, or we sat beside that weeping Queen, or as it were, mingled with that London crowd and devoured every letter of hope in the bulletins of health and our heart was hushed and quickened when there was no hope; not till then did the sorrow and sadness of it all begin to break in upon us.

It is premature now to utter estimate about His Majesty's character and royal servitude, but if any man has had it, Edward VII. had all that was coming to him from this world. And yet anyone who in recent years has had the privilege to gaze upon his aged and care-worn, whitened face, could read therein this tale, that he had not escaped this world's heavy discipline of trouble, worry, pain and responsibility. One reads those last words: "It is all over, but I think I have done my duty," in the returning vision of his prematurely aged countenance. He has served his day and generation better than we know. It has been a harder leader's task than we can estimate. We look toward the future and wonder whether all will be well without his master mind and personality. In the terrible issue involved in England's social and economic need, involved in the impending throes of constitutional struggle, involved in international politics, and especially German expansion, involved in the consolidation or disintegration of Empire, we would like to call him back and again load upon his Elizabethan skill of diplomacy and political astuteness, these burdens of ours, under which, perhaps, he has sunk. But it cannot be, and we pray that King George will not merely receive his father's royal mantle, but that God will give him a double measure of wisdom and authority.

Some may do so, but it is yet premature for me to say much of His Majesty's happy reign, his great ability and energy, his royal character, his place amid those who have gone before. As loyal subjects of a bereaved empire we pray the God of Hosts for comfort and strength, but above all at this sad moment we pray the God of consolation will sustain those personally bereaved, the widowed Queen and all the royal family. Amen.

CONGREGATION OF ST. PAUL'S SAW MORTGAGE BURNED; INTERESTING ADDRESSES

Last night St. Paul's church was fairly well filled by an audience, in which the fair sex predominated. The occasion was the ending of the ceremonies in connection with the celebration of the 75th anniversary of Presbyterianism in Peterborough and among the audience was noted His Honor Judge Roger, of Cobourg. Shortly after eight o'clock the 474th hymn was sung. Rev. Mr. Hughes offered a prayer. Miss Scott next rendered a vocal selection in good voice. Rev. Mr. Pogue noted that there was a long list of speakers, so he would not speak himself for long. He said that there were a number of workers in the past and remarked the loss the congregation had sustained when Judge Roger was raised to the bench. He then called on the judge, who expressed the pleasure it afforded him to be back in St. Paul's church. He was almost afraid to say how long he had been connected with that church. When he came back to Peterborough a fortnight ago he noticed the quiet and comfortable surroundings of St. Paul's. St. Paul's has had a long and strenuous career, even in his memory. His father, who came from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, was the first pastor. He himself had attended the little quiet church in Scotland where his progenitors had been ministers for generations. The judge then gave a history of his relatives in Scotland. His father came to Cobourg in 1833, as a missionary and then came on to Peterboro. The speaker's father two years after arrival, went to New York to get married. The speaker then went on to speak of the seperation of the Free Church in Scotland. His father joined the Free Church. Judge Roger gave a detailed history of the Presbyterian Church in Peterborough, but especially of St. Paul's. This corresponded with the history given last week in these columns. He told incidentally of the old-fashioned tea-meetings held in St. Paul's Sunday school which was attended by people of other churches. His father driving home one dark night got lost in the woods and after unhitching the horse he drove, rode it home, the horse finding the way. Where he was lost is now the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Works. He thanked Mr. Pogue and the congregation for asking him to be present.

Rev. Messrs. Yule, Wilson and McKay were called in time and gave their experience in connection with St. Paul's. Mr. Yule knew nothing of his call as assistant at St. Paul's until he got a letter to the effect from Sheriff Hall. Through shyness he thought at the time of backing out. Still he came out after living in Peterborough for the first year of his ministry and has always followed the career of St. Paul's with deep interest. He wished the congregation every prosperity in the future. He thought too many men want the benefits of the church without assuming any responsibilities. He congratulated the congregation on its [illegible].

Rev. Mr. Wilson noted that this was a happy occasion, still all hearts must be sad when people think of the King lying dead across the sea. He then paid a strong tribute to the dead monarch. The speaker gave a humorous account of his taking two sermons "out of his barrel of four," when he first came to preach in Peterborough, whilst a student. The three years he spent in Peterborough were happy years. Mr. Ketcham had telephoned him in the morning regretting he could not be present. Mr. McKay expressed the pleasure it gave him to be present. During his year in Peterborough most of his work was done in the mission still he always took great interest in St. Paul's.

Among the speakers was Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Review. Mr. Dobbin gave a very interesting and instructive address on former days in the city touching on old buildings, railroads, etc.—owing to experience and knowledge gained during his past years in newspaperdom enabled Mr. Dobbin to give not only a comprehensive but correct history of our city.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay, chairman of the board of managers, then presented Mrs. T. G. Hazlett with a pair of silver tongs on behalf of the board in appreciation of her generousity in discharging the mortgage indebtedness of $3,200. Mrs. Hazlett held the document while Mrs. Roger, the only living member of the family of the first pastor of St. Paul's, applied the light while the mortgage was being burned, the congregation sang with great fervor "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

At the conclusion of this Mr. D. H. Moore spoke further in appreciation of Mrs. Hazlett's generosity.

ANNIVERSARY WAS OBSERVED

By Charlotte St. Epworth League—Other Methodist Leagues Were Present.

The meeting to commemorate the twenty-first anniversary of Charlotte street Epworth League was held last night in the Sunday school room, and as all that could be desired in the way of an enjoyable and successful affair. The four Methodist Leagues of the city, George street, Mark street, St. James and Charlotte street were out in large numbers, and the attendance ranged between two hundred and two hundred and fifty.

The programme for the evening was a varied one and consisted of musical selections, addresses and papers by some of the members.

The principal address of the evening was made by Rev. Mr. Coon, (who spoke on the "Characteristics of Methodism. In his remarks Mr. Coon told how Methodism had derived its name, from the methodical manner in which John Wesley and his followers had conducted their first services. The first open-air preaching services had been started by Wesley. The first society of Methodists had been organized in London in the year 1739, and another in Bristol in 1742. In In concluding his remarks Mr. Coon urged every person that called himself or herself a Methodist to become so in every sense of the term. Methodism, he said, is particularly adaptable to Methodists, and all useless forms occupy a subordinate part of a Methodist service.

Miss Collins, of St. James' church, gave a splendid paper on missionary work, which was listened to with great attention. The presidents of the leagues also gave short, bright, instructive addresses, in which they congratulated Rev. J. G. Brown, the chairman of the District League, on the success of the evening, due to his efforts. The meeting was dismissed with the benediction.

Solo—Miss Pringle.
Solo—Miss Gertrude Howson
Duet — Miss Simpson and Mr. F. Myles.
Duet—Mr. and Miss Lee.

The accompanists for the evening were Mr. McCann, Miss E. Pringle, and Mr. Bruce Quinn.

The Steamer Monarch will leave Wolfe St Wharf at 8 a.m. to-morrow, Wednesday for all Stoney Lake Points returning same night.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR THE KING

Since the death of our lamented King, many inquiries have been made regarding the advisability of holding a public memorial service on the day of his burial. With the end in view of arranging for such a service a meeting of the Ministerial Association of the city is called for on Thursday at five o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, and the probability is that the service will be held.

A THREE DAYS MUSICAL FESTIVAL IS PROPOSED

To be Held Here in Month of May--Suggestion to Augment Conservatory Madrigal Club to One Hundred Voices—To Advance Musical Interests of Peterboro

Nothing is more contagious than enthusiasm. Last year the visit of the Sheffield Choir and their marvellous perfection of vocal work was an inspiration. At that time Mr. Rupert Gliddon, director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, suggested to some musical enthusiasts the idea of a musical festival. The idea was warmly received, but owing to the fact that the time was too short to prepare creditably for a musical festival to be held, as is usual, in the summer—the month of May was, for the time, abandoned.

But the idea, which was considered possible, was by no means given up. As the Sheffield Choir furnished the inspiration last year, the conspicuous success this year of the Peterborough musical organizations in the Earl Grey competition, furnished the necessary encouragement to undertake the holding of a musical festival in Peterborough next year.

With the co-operation of the citizens, who will derive all the benefit in the way of publicity, the work can be done. The object of the festival is not to make money for anybody, if money is lost, its object will have been gained.

It is proposed to hold a three-days' musical festival in May, to consist of the presentation of varied programmes.

The Conservatory Madrigal Club will be augmented to one hundred voices, which Peterborough can easily supply, with an auxiliary chorus of three hundred children. This will bring the club to the numerical strength of a choral society, and permit of the performance of the larger choral compositions.

FORMER LOCAL NEWSPAPER MAN KILLED IN CHICAGO

Special to the Review.

Chicago, Ill., May 10.—Through efforts of the police and coroner's office a stranger killed by the United States mail wagon Saturday night, has been identified as Isaac H. Brock, a well known writer and newspaper man. He was formerly editor of two Canadian periodicals in Chicago, and until reently was connected with newspapers in Peterborough. Mr. Brock was crossing the street, when he was run over by a mail wagon driven by Peter Trautner. The latter was taken into custody by the police.

Isaac H. Brock, referred to in the above despatch, was a cousin of Mr. Arthur M. Brock, jeweler, who resides at 571 Weller street. The deceased, whose parents lived in Oshawa, came to Peterborough twenty-five years ago and was editor of the Examiner for some time, and also of the Morning Times. He left here for Chicago and continued to be identified with newspaper work. At the last general elections he was a special reporter for the Examiner, and after the elections he left for Fort William to visit his daughter. He was in the neighborhood of sixty years of age.

TWENTY EIGHT CANDITATES CONFIRMED AT ALL SAINTS'

"The Lord will give strength unto His People." Psalms 29, 10; was the appropriate text used by Bishop Reeves last night at the confirmation exercises at All Saints church last night in his address to the candidates and the congregation. The Lord would give strength unto His people that was a message delivered long ago through the mouth of the psalmist, but made by the Lord God Himself.

His Lordship spoke thus in admonishing the communicants to observe their confirmation vow and live lives of usefulness and purity and pleasing in the sight of God.

A large congregation assembled for the important and significant occasion. The lesson was read by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, who also pronounced the Langfeldt, who also said the prayers.

His Lordship in his earnest and convincing appeal to the communicants spoke of the inward and spiritual strength of God as being the means the candidates had of keeping their confirmation vows. God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, the three persons in one God, were the source of spiritual strength. It was not in spiritual strength that God took delight although that was something to be proud of. He gave strength to His people by the spirit in in the inner man.

The Lord would give strength to His people the text read. Who were His people? The Israelites of old were peculiarly God's people. But although they had many spiritual privileges they neglected their real inward connection as making them God's people. The Jews as of old, were still God's people, but the fullness of that blessing would not come to them until the veil had been removed and they recognized Jesus as their Messiah—their Saviour.

And to-day, as in the days of old, the outward sign of baptism alone was not sufficient, but there must be that spiritual strength, there had to be spiritual strength imparted to make the communicants real people of God. They must show in their lives by what they did that they were the people of God.

This strength would enable them to make good confession before their fellowmen that which would help them to live true, earnest, upright lives and enable them to overcome their besetting sins and become good citizens of the Kingdom of God and of the British Empire.

After the singing of the hymn "Thine For Ever," the sacred rite of confirmation was performed by the Bishop, at the conclusion of which, "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death," was expressively sung by Mr. George Chandler.

There were twenty-eight candidates at last night's confirmation, making a total of sixty-three confirmed in twelve months.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH CELEBRATE DIAMOND JUBILEE

Interesting and Appropriate Addresses by Vestry Ministers—Potraits of St. Andrew's Ministers Unveiled

The Diamond Jubilee of St. Andrew's church was celebrated last night by highly successful and appropriate ceremonies.

At eight o'clock the proceedings beban by the singing of the coronation hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' name." The Rev. S. S. Burns, of Lakefield, offered prayer.

The pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, presided and expressed his delight at the very enthusiastic manner in which the congregation and friends had taken part in the important services of the Sabbath, and he knew they would enjoy the present occasion. The interest of the occasion has been increased by the presence of the Rev. Dr. Campbell of Montreal, clerk and ex-Moderator of the General Assembly, who had been Mr. Potter's minister when he was a boy of five years of age in the city of Montreal. Dr. Campbell's address was of a most interesting character and was listened to with the closest attention by the very large congregation that gathered. Dr. Campbell referred to the early days of the Presbyterian church in connection with the church of Scotland of the Free Church movement and of the great work that had been done by their first minister, Rev. John M. Roger, whose work he described as unique in as much as he had shown a very moderate attitude in the time of the disruption movement in this case held the affection and esteem of all Presbyterianism. He also referred to the leaders in the church in Canada and specialized on the leading families of the "Old Kirk" in Peterborough, whose memories he still cherished. He spoke of his desire to have celebrated the 450th anniversary of the Reformed Church of Scotland under John Knox and others and showed that the creed and policy of the church which they formulated, was much the same as at present and he felt it could not be improved upon. Dr. Campbell gave the hint that he is not a humorist, as he cannot bring himself to favor the abolition of the eldership and the question of the right of the people to call their own minister.

The address of the Moderator of Presbytery, the Rev. D. A. McKenzie, was scholarly and delightful. Mr. McKenzie is a fluent and forceful speaker and was earnest in his helpful exhortation to the congregation. The Rev. D. A. Thomson made a happy speech and in his own inimitable fashion brought mirth and gladness to the hearts of St. Andrew's people, who are always glad to see him, the Rev. Dr. Marsh, whom the chairman referred to as the "telescope" man, and the Rev. S. S. Burns, of Lakefield, expressed their good will on behalf of the congregation. Mr. Andrew Macfarlane, chairman of the board of trustees, and Mr. Richard Lees, clerk of session, expressed the great pleasure of the congregation, at the presence and most helpful address of the Rev. Dr. Campbell. This was carried with the greatest enthusiasm.

The musical part of the programme was of a particularly high order. The choir rendered in excellent form "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," Mrs. E. Dormer, Miss Howell, Mr. A. C. Huycke, Mr. Jas. Browne taking the solo and duet parts.

The work of Master Wilfrid Morison, boy soprano, was of exceptional merit, "With Verdure Clad," 'Queen of the Earth," "Beloved, 'Tis Morn,' and "The Veteran Song" being the selections rendered. Everyone enjoyed the last number particularly in its outburst of "Long Live the King."

At 10.15 the large audience retired to the lecture hall, which was tastefully and brilliantly decorated. Its capacity was taxed and yet not uncomfortable and the company were soon busy with refreshments and formed in groups of friends. The ceremony of unveiling the portraits of the past ministers was proceeded with and in turn were presented as follows;—

That of the Rev. John M. Roger, for 24 years pastor, was presented by Mr. Richard Lees, on behalf of the session.

That of Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, was presented by Mr. Andrew Macfarlane on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society.

That of Rev. Kenneth McLennan was presented by Mr. Elizie Curry on behalf of the Young Men's Guild.

That of Rev. Alexander Bell was presented by Mr. Edson Gregg on behalf of the Y.P.S.C.E. and the portrait of Rev. A. MacWilliams was presented by Mr. F. E. Kerr on behalf of the Sunday school.

The portrait of Mrs. Charlotte Jane Nicholls presented by the Board of Managers, will have a conspicuous place in the centre of the south wall of the lecture hall. Mrs. Nicholls was a most devoted member of St. Andrew's church and was of a large and generous Christian spirit, bestowing her blessings on all the churches and on all classes of citizens. Her public benefaction have been prized by everyone, as they will continue to be enjoyed by many to come. The pastor encouraged his members to emulate as church people the spirit of this noble woman.

This ceremony was most happy throughout and at close many of the congregation stood around the portals viewing the features of the men who has inspired them to better living.

Judge Roger, of Cobourg, extended his personal regards and good wishes on such an occasion and referred to the number of men St. Andrew's had sent forth into the ministry of the church.

The proceedings of the Diamond Jubilee of St. Andrew's will long remain in the memories of old and young a season of great inspiration and renewal of devotion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

The Chimes

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Allow me, through your columns, to approach my fellow-citizens in reference to the chimes enterprise now before the city. It did not emanate from St. John's congregation as a whole, but from a few members of that congregation who, from the beginning, have had the warm support of other citizens in what they reasonably or unreasonably believe to be a unique project for the general advantage of the city.

No doubt St. John's church has a more direct interest than any other body, and therefore should undertake the main part of the work, as the congregation is certainly doing. At the same time, a chime of bells (unlike a single bell) to make music for, and to express the feelings of the whole city, and may, possibly, be most enjoyed by those at a distance. A city with a chime has a completeness otherwise lacking. Besides all the larger cities, Stratford, Guelph, Petrolea, Cobourg and other Canadian towns have chimes. Why should Peterborough be behind?

Now, the different congregations either could not or would not go to the great expense of procuring this luxury. It has been talked about for years, and several efforts have been made without avail. If Peterborough citizens really want a good set of chimes, the only practical means is for them to unite in a wide and general effort as fellow-citizens. Even $5,000 will only procure a good satisfactory set, as at Stratford, but not by any means the largest or best, for Petrolea's cost $6,000.

Now, as a matter of fact, our people have accepted the proposal in this light, and generous contributions have already gladly come from men of all classes and creeds. "Yes, we must have the chimes," is the general response, and it seems clear that this represents a very wide feeling. But up to the present not quite half the necessary sum has been secured, and the most accessible of our citizens have been canvassed. The great mass of people are more difficult to be individually approached by the small committee, and yet upon their action depends when the chimes can be obtained, which just now seems rather far away.

While gladly giving the hard work involved, we are naturally averse to asking people whom we do not personally know, or to urging anyone. Will not those who want to see this project speedily consumated come forward themselves, telephoning or sending subscriptions of any amount? And is there not here an opportunity for unselfish, public service by some of our richer citizens? It has been by the generous gifts of such public-spirited men and women that most of the other cities have their chimes.

But if such benefactors are not forthcoming the chimes will yet be erected by the liberality of a greater number of citizens who will, on this account, feel more interest and pleasure in them.

It has been well said that Peterborough has gained some of its benefits so easily that they are not appreciated at anything like their real value. And if we all have to work and give, we may all be brought a little closer together in making the common effort.

With deep gratitude for the kind reception already given,

Faithfully yours,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

CENTRALS SCORED SEVEN RUNS IN SIXTH INNINGS

In a city school baseball league fixture yesterday afternoon the Centrals added another to their win column by defeating the South Central nine by the score of 12—2. For four innings both teams played much better ball than the grounds warranted, but in the succeeding innings misplays were frequent, and particularly so with the South Centrals, and these with some hard hitting by the Centrals gave the small army of young rooters an opportunity to test their lungs and they more than made good.

The Centrals were the better fielding team, and several of the plays were executed in a manner that would keep some of the other exponents of the baseball game guessing to excel. The team was also stronger with the bat, and after the fourth had no difficulty in solving southpaw Parker's shoots. Smith twirled a nice game throughout and was well supported by Cavanah at the receiving end.

Parker would not have had so many runs chalked up against him had his teammates given him better support.

One decision in particular, when the umpire called a runner out at home did not meet with the approval of the Centrals, and the occasion called for a general assault on that official, and nothing less than an earthquake would have saved him, had not the team and its supporters partly forgotten the incident in the joy of victory, which afterwards turned out to be in their favor. However, it might be remarked, that no objectionable language or epithets were used, and for this the boys are to be commended. The teams were:

Score by innings:—

FIRST INTER FORM LEAGUE FIXTURE WON BY FORM 3B.

The Inter-Form Baseball League of the Collegiate Institute opened yesterday afternoon with a game between Form 3 B and Form 2 B, and while good ball was played in spots, these same spots were not very plain to the naked eye. Mulhern's nine were ahead in the proceeding at one time by 9—1, but the Minorgan outfit breezed to the front and won out with two runs to the good. The score was 14—12, and only seven innings were played. The game was featured with healthy batting and juicy errors. Home runs were made with the bases full. Armstrong replaced Mulhern in the seventh. The teams were:

Umpire—Fred Craig.

WHY THE UMPIRE WAS MOBBED

BY KIRTLAND A. WILSON

The score was tied at 1 to 1
The final inning came
With all the hopes of rival towns
Dependent on the game.
The first three up died one, two, three,
In efforts that fell flat,
And then amid a storm of cheers
The home team went to bat.

And two fanned out, while hope sank low,
But, lah, the local's pride
Now marches smiling to the plate
With strong and jaunty stride!
The ball comes whizzing—see, he strikes—
And cuts the air in two.
(Loud groans.) Again the ball is thrown—
The umpire shouts: "Strike two!"

The field grows silent as a church
While breathlessly they wait
The ball whose flight will make or mar,—
The messenger of fate.
The pitcher settles in his box—
He lifts his arm—he throws;
The batter swings—oh, joy, he swats
The ball square on the nose!

It speeds off through the sunlit air
As from a canon shot,
While fandom all ecstatic throws
Hysterics on the spot.
And see, the runner reaches first,
And now takes second base
As o'er the field the ball soars on
In hyperbolic grace.

"Take third! Take third!" the rooters roar—
The ball is still in air—
He rushes on amid the din
With wet and flying hair.
He reaches third! The fans go wild
And throw their hats on high.
The runner pushes on, for hear:—
"Come home! Come home!" they cry.

He bends each muscle to the task
And plunges for the plate,—
A slide—a cloud of dust—and ah!
He reaches home.—But wait:
Above the plaudits of the crowd
A voice is heard to rise
It is the umpire's. Hark to him:—
"Foul ball!" the lobster cries.

HITLETS

Mr. Robt. Begley has presented the St. Peter's school senior baseball team with half a dozen willow bats, and to say that the players are "tickled" would be putting it mild.

Eddie Brown, last season with the Royal Oaks, of Toronto, has signed a Strathcona certificate. Brown is an infielder.

Toronto won the home opener from Baltimore yesterday by one run. Over thirteen thousand were in attendance and in the early stages of the game the visitors looked good to win. Outfielder Shaw romped home with the winning run in the ninth.

Newark outhit and outplayed Rochester on their own grounds and took the game with a margin of three runs.

Pfeister beat Bugs Raymond at Chicago, and ten battery men were used in the Pittsburg-Brooklyn game which went in favor of the Pirates.

TENNIS

The members of St. John's A.Y.P.A. who intend playing tennis this year are asked to be on hand at the special meeting in the schoolroom on Monday next, May 16th. The gentlemen are asked to hand in their names and the special fee for the city championship tournament not later than Monday next to Mr. Charles Downs or Mr. William Coleman. Arrangements will also be made on Monday for the tennis festival on May 24th.

The following is the first round in the lawn tennis tournament to be played at the Y.M.C.A. courts:—

CLASS A.

1—A Myers, H. B. Collier.
2—Dr. McPherson, F. Cressman.
3—G. Miller, F. D. Burnett.
4—Stanley, H. Lees.
5—G. Rankin, F. Denison.
6—N. Geale, A. Matthews.
7—F. D. Kerr, S. Hall.
8—H. Myers, W. C. Collier.

CLASS B.

1—L. Turner, R. Glover.
2—H. Hill, B. Lees
3—B. Sharp, J. Thompson.
4—S. Caniff, A. A. Perrin.
5—M. McCarroll, G. Martin.
6—W. Pickup, S. Laing.
7.—D. H. Downie, C. E. Sisson
8—J. Kingsborough, J. Lambert.
9—A. Harper, R. Scott.
10—G. Matthews, F. Brown.
11—H. Smith, W. Stratton.

The round must be played off before May 20th, and all players will kindly remember that the east court will be reserved for matches.

LAWN BOWLING

Those desirous of bowling this summer are requested to join the Lawn Bowling Club without delay, as the rinks will be made up in a few days. The lawn is in excellent shape and a most interesting season is looked forward to. Anyone wishing to join the club should communicate with the secretary, Dr. Marshall.

The tennis court in connection with the bowling green is in splendid shape and games have already been played on it.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

I shall never forget my own first real look at the canal. It was at the end of a day, about 5 in the afternoon, and I had set out to walk from Empire to Culebra along the brink of the great Culebra cut. This section is perhaps the most dramatic in the whole work. When ships sail through here the passengers on the decks will look up almost 500 precipitous feet along the sliced red side of Gold hill to the crest of the continental divide.

The workmen were all out of the ditch now, and it was time to fire the big blasts. I waited in some trepidation, for the notion of an amount of dynamite that can be stated in tons being shot off at one time and in one place was rather appalling. And what happened was appalling, though not in just the way I expected. My eardrums have been more seriously assaulted on the Fourth of July by a four inch cannon cracker. The quality of the noise made by that blast is rather indescribable. It was immensely vast, a sort of titanic grunt. The great rocky ridges which formed the bottom of the trench heaved up bodily under a sudden cloud of brownish smoke. When it had blown away those defiant rocky ridges were gone, and in their place was chaos.

Figures don't mean much—millions of cubic yards, and so on. But the great trench I was looking at did not look man made at all. The men who were straggling back into it looked like ants. The steam shovels, arrayed in echelon, seemed hardly bigger than big black beetles. And a belated dirt train crawling up the incline out of the cut might have been a caterpillar. It seemed impossible that their puny nibblings could have made that gap in the backbone of a continent. It looked rather like the doing of nature in one of her paroxysms. No, not quite like that. It looked like a crease from the finger nail of Almighty God.—Henry Kitchell Webster in Everybody's.

Contrary.

Biggs—That fellow Oliver is inclined to be somewhat contrary, isn't he?

Driggs—Contrary! Why, if he had two ideas in his head they would fall out with each other!

Farm and Garden

GASOLINE PLOW HORSE.

Farmer Also Does Harrowing With Homemade Tractor.

Harry B. Kean of Ontario county, N. Y., has made a gasoline plow and harrow by mounting a motor on some old binder trucks. He says of it:

"The cut shows the tractor at work drawing harrows in the orchard. It weighs 3,815 pounds. It is equipped with a ten horsepower double cylinder motor of the two cycle type. It draws the two three-horse spring tooth harrows when set about as deep in the ground as they will go at the speed of one and one-half miles per hour, covering about two acres per hour. As we have quite a good deal of fruit on our farms, the principal work of the tractor has been just as shown in the picture, excepting that part of the time the harrow used is a four horse double action disk, heavily weighted with large stone. We find the machine very advantageous for this work, as it goes steadily and does not work to one side or the other, so that you can keep the drags right to within two or three inches of the trees without the danger of barking them.

"We use the machine also in a great many other kinds of work. It hauls a two bottom gang plow (fourteen inch bottoms) seven inches deep at the same speed, and with the steering arrangement we have I think we can turn around on as narrow a headland as the horses can—can turn it in a circle a very little larger in diameter than its length. We grind our own feed, using the engine to run the mill. Our mill is not large, but with this amount of power we grind thirty bushels per hour. The tractor is very handy for pulling out brush and young saplings in old fence rows; also for dragging off bowlders, as it is so much stronger than a team of horses. It is also the best wire fence stretcher we have ever used. You can draw the wire up to any tension you choose and set the brake and the wire is held till stapled.

"We have never kept accurate account of the fuel used when plowing or dragging with the engine, but I believe it averages about $1.50 worth per day, which we do not consider much when it is taking the place of two teams or horses. From the use we have had of the machine we do not now feel as though we could possibly get along without it. I believe motive power in the future is going to revolutionize farming operations as greatly as it has the road travel in the past few years."

Home Pasteurization of Milk.

Milk is most conveniently pasteurized in the bottles in which it is delivered. To do this use a small pail with a perforated false bottom. An inverted pie tin with a few holes punched in it will answer this purpose. This will raise the bottles from the bottom of the pail, thus allowing a free circulation of water and preventing bumping of the bottles. Punch a hole through the cap of one of the bottles and insert a thermometer. The ordinary floating type of thermometer is likely to be inaccurate, and if possible a good thermometer with the scale etched on the glass should be used. Set the bottles of milk in the pail and fill the pail with water nearly to the level of the milk. Put the pail on the stove or over a gas flame and heat it until the thermometer in the milk shows not less than 150 degrees or more than 155 degrees F. The bottles should then be removed from the water and allowed to stand from twenty to thirty minutes. The temperature will fall slowly, but may be held more uniformly by covering the bottles with a towel. The punctured cap should be replaced with a new one or the bottle should be covered with an inverted cap. After the milk has been held as directed it should be cooled. To avoid danger of breaking the bottle the water should be warm at first. Replace the warm water slowly with cold water. After cooling, milk should in all cases be held at the lowest available temperature.

Premier Murray, of Nova Scotia had his left leg amputated on Saturday.

A PEACEFUL IMPERIALIST.

C. A. Magrath, M.P. for Medicine Hat is No Flag-Flapper.

"In business an employer generally wants his employes to keep their mouths shut, and do little or no talking; in politics, which is the country's business, we are all expected to talk."

C. A. Magrath, M.P. for Medicine Hat, hasn't been in politics very long, but he has been unable to find out the why of the foregoing statement which he made the other day. He has been in business for thirty years in the west and in politics for two or three years, and he hasn't become reconciled to the change. Some of his friends in the Commons say he doesn't care for politics. Mr. Magrath himself won't admit that he would sooner be doing a political turn than eating a dinner, but at the same time he is one of those men that politicians are looking up to these days. He was sent to Ottawa in the general election of 1908. Of course, every politician claims to have been "sent" or "sent for," but Charlie Magrath, of Medicine Hat, is one of the really and truly "sents." So far he hasn't made more than two or three speeches in the House. Yet he looms as a big man on the Opposition benches.

Out west they have said for years that Charlie Magrath was a good square fellow—a chap who was business from the drop of the hat. Thirty years ago he went west from Pontiac county in Quebec, and he landed in Alberta about 1878, or about the same time Hon. Frank Oliver was getting out the smallest paper in the world at the biggest price somewhere in the west. Magrath did survey work, became connected with irrigation and railway interests, and made a little money, being for years manager of the Alberta Coal & Railway Co. at Lethbridge. No, he is not a millionaire, far from it; but he made enough to keep him from asking for an old-age annuity.

Physically Mr. Magrath is a big man, a little stooped from the weight of an overly heavy share of the burden of Canada's west. He's got a heavy handshake. His hair and moustache are quite grey, but his eyes are clear, and his face is free from those north and south wrinkles; all of which denote that he never let his work get on his nerves. He quit making money because he did not want to be wealthy, and did not want to bother with a distribution bureau if his conscience troubled him. Of course, a man of his energy couldn't live in southern Alberta doing nothing, so they sent him to Parliament. He has not done anything very sensational on Parliament Hill. He is not likely to, but somehow or other when you look at him you know he's going to count for more than his vote.

If Mr. Magrath hadn't been fortunate enough to receive a mathematical training in his youth he might have been a poet. He has a streak of poetry somewhere, even though he keeps it bottled up, because the busy west is not very strong on poor poetry. However far the poetry idea may be from the facts, it is very true that Mr. Magrath is an idealist. He can picture the greatest of pictures for Canada, but his mind's picture of the coming Canada does not consist altogether of a money-making and a money-mad people, but a nation strong in all the virtues.

"I am an Imperialist," he told the writer in a burst of confidence when that subject was broached one day, but he added, "Not of that sword-waving, flag-flapping kind. It seems to me that a united British Empire can do much toward preserving the peace of the world. That is something worth striving for. Therefore, if for no other reason, Canadians should do all in their power to strengthen Imperial ties. If we Canadians want to help the coming of the world's peace we can do it by being ardent Imperialists."

Mr. Magrath has dipped in business and in politics, and his next venture will be in the role of an author. His publication hardly promises to be a classic, but it does promise to do some good work for the west. It will be a pamphlet dealing with some phases of western Canada, together with a hand-out of advice gathered from thirty years' experience.

In the Wrong Place.

Mr. H. J. Crawford, principal of the Riverdale Collegiate, Toronto, makes the happiest kind of a chairman, and his services, consequently, are much in demand.

Not so very long ago he occupied the chair in an Islington hall where an amateur dramatic company was giving a performance, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to a local church. The dramatic company was headed and organized by Mr. Lawrence Anthes, of the Toronto Foundry, a warm friend of Mr. Crawford's, and most of the cast were also well-acquainted with the genial, popular principal.

During the first act one of the church officials held a whispered conference with the chairman, and when the curtain fell the latter mounted the platform and addressed the audience. The tones of his resonant voice reached the actors, and, knowing Mr. Crawford's happy knack of saying what he had to say in a way to please his hearers, one of the troup fired off a horse pistol and the rest cheered lustily.

But the applause was not taken up by the audience. Instead there was a moment's absolute quiet, then an hysterical giggle or two, and, almost before the actors had time to wonder why their plaudits fell so flatly, a friend hurried in through the wings and whispered hoarsely:

"Shut up, you idiots! Crawford wasn't boosting your show. He announced that Sister ——, who died yesterday, would be buried to-morrow afternoon!"

Twelve Million Telephones.

It is reported that there are now in this country 12,000,000 telephones, or one for every two houses in the country. This does not mean that one-half of the residences in the country contain an instrument, since many business houses have a large number, but the figures are instructive and illuminating. Practically everybody who is anybody in the cities or towns and villages has a telephone, while those in the country districts are legion. The astonishing fact is that each of these phones is used on an average of six times a day. The total number of calls in a year runs up into the billions, and it is not appreciable by the human mind.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Agony OF PILES

ONLY those who suffer from piles know the misery it brings! It robs life of its pleasure, steals the brightness from existence, and substitutes days of dull pain and moments of acute agony. Most so called "remedies" give ease only for a time, and then—back comes the trouble and pain and misery! Zam-Buk cures Piles! And cures permanently. Proof of this lies all around you. Women and men in all stations of life have proved it—possibly some of your friends! Let it cure you!

Mrs. Wm. Hughes, of 253, Hochelaga St., Hochelaga, Montreal, says:—"I was a sufferer for years from blind, itching and protruding piles. The agony I suffered no one knows. Remedy after remedy proved useless. Day followed day and there was no relief for me—pain, loss of strength, dulness, misery, this was my experience until Zam-Buk was introduced. I know now that there is nothing on this earth like it! It cured me of piles, and once cured, I have had no return of the evil. I would like all women who suffer as I did to know that Zam-Buk will cure them!

Besides being a specific for piles Zam-Buk cures eczema, blood-poisoning, cracked or chapped hands, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, scalp sores, ringworm, bad leg, frost bite, cold sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50 c. box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for price.

CLEANED OUT THE PLACE.

Alfonso's First Encounter With a Small Railway Lunch Room.

Xavier Paoli in McClure's tells of King Alfonso's first encounter with the lunch room of a small railway station. Alfonso had been out motoring and was ravenously hungry.

"Give us some lunch, please," said the king to the lady at the bar.

The refreshment room unfortunately was very meagerly supplied. When the two travelling companions had eaten up the scanty fare represented by a few eggs and sandwiches, which had probably been waiting for more than a month for a traveler to arrive, the king, whose appetite was far from being satisfied, called the barmaid, a fat and matronly Bearnaise with an upper lip adorned with a pair of thick mustachios.

"Have you nothing else to give us?" he asked.

"I have a pate de foie gras, but—it's very expensive," said the decent creature, who did not see a serious customer in this famished and dusty young man.

"Never mind; let's have it," said the king.

The woman brought her pate, which was none too fresh. But how great was her amazement when she saw the two travelers devour not only the liver, but the fat as well! The pot was emptied and scraped clean in the twinkling of an eye.

Pleased with her successful morning's trade and encouraged by the king's ebullient good humor, the barmaid sat down at the royal table and began to tell the king her family affairs, questioning him with maternal solicitude. When at last the hour of departure struck they shook hands with each other warmly.

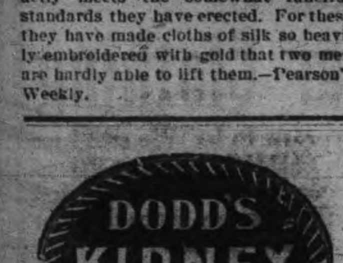
Some time afterward the king was passing through Dax by rail, and as the train steamed into the station he said to me:

"I have an acquaintance at Dax. I'll show her to you. She is charming."

The plump Bearnaise was there, more mustachioed than ever. I will not attempt to describe her comic bewilderment at recognizing her former customer in the person of the king.

Elephants' Love For Finery.

Strange as it may seem, the elephant is passionately fond of finery and delights to see himself decked out with gorgeous trappings. The native princes of India are very particular in choosing their state elephants and will give fabulous sums for an animal that exactly meets the somewhat fanciful standards they have erected. For these they have made cloths of silk so heavily embroidered with gold that two men are hardly able to lift them.—Pearson's Weekly.



IN BOER LAND.

Young Woman Tells of Family Life in the Transvaal.

"Life is not lonely or dull on a South African farm, although town folk, accustomed to getting up at 9 o'clock in the morning and dawdling through the day, pretend to think it is," writes a young woman of that part of the world to a London newspaper.

"There is always something to be done. Before sunrise my brothers are up and out with the men, looking after the flocks, mending fences, inspecting here, improving there. Our farm has 30,000 acres and carries roughly 1,000 sheep and perhaps 1,000 head of horses and cattle.

"There is no place for children like a South African farm. We were out in the open all day long. Every tree on the farm we climbed, and in the orchard, too, eating the apples before they were ripe, for which we were soundly whipped. That also was good, for the green apples did us no harm, and the whipping taught us to respect our elders.

"In a creek by the river stood a willow tree which we used like a flip-flap. Bending its point over to the bank, one of us would get on and be switched across, but if on the other side the branch was not caught and held, then the luckless rider would oscillate like a pendulum of a clock put upside down, till at last he (or she) must fall into the water. Then he would be fished out and we would all sit on the bank while his clothes dried in the hot sun.

"Every animal on the farm we rode, ponies and cows, and even ostriches. There is nothing so comfortable as an ostrich, warm and soft, and it moves like a feather bed on springs. You tuck your knees well below the outstretched wings and take a firm grip, and when they let the bird go you are floating in the air. As for dismounting, it is quite easy; you have only to fall off backward.

"Far from being lonely, my recollection of our home in those early days is that it was like a small hotel. The farm lies on the high road between Bloembontein and Jagersfontein, and people traveling from one town to the other seemed to take it for granted that they could stop there for the night.

"One night, I remember, we entertained the Hon. St. John Brodrick, who was at that time making a tour of South Africa. After supper our talk turned upon the prickly pear fruit, and our visitor expressed a desire to see one. A Kaffir boy was sent out to get some, and when they were shown to him Mr. Brodrick incautiously took one up and put it to his mouth, covering his face and hands with the tiny, irritating prickles. I have thought since that the incident was typical. We Boers are somewhat like the prickly pear, sound and kind at heart, but sticking all our spikes into those who handle us the wrong way!

"It may be supposed that housekeeping under such circumstances was not very easy, for our Kaffir girls, though they are plentiful and willing, are very stupid and need to be constantly overlooked. I never heard, however, of any Boer lady who broke down and had to indulge herself in a rest cure. The air of the veldt is in itself better than any 'cure.' Ah, such air! When you breathe it, everything seems possible, even the most impossible things. I think that was really how the war—that most impossible war—came about.

"No one wants to speak about the war with England now; only to forget it. One of my brothers fought from the first; then, when we were harder pushed, the second joined the commando, too. My third brother, who was a doctor, served on our ambulance. As for me, I was in England at the time, but it did not seem right for me to live there, so I went to Holland, where at least they understood our Taal tongue. And after it was all over I went out to Africa again.

"Of course, my brothers came back to the farm: they could not have gone to any other country, any more than my father could have gone in his day. So they began the farm all over again. Our house had not been burned down, but it had been abandoned to stray raiders and to the elements for over two years."

The Oldest Pitwoman.

At the time of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, 1897, there were fifteen or sixteen women living in Tranent who had worked underground in the coal mines. Now the number is reduced to three—Janet Murdoch, Helen Reid, and Isabella Sommerville, better known as Bell Somers, and widow of the late Sergt. John Harrison, the enlister of Hector Macdonald.

Sommerville is now in her eighty-sixth year, and may safely be set down as the oldest pitwoman in the world. She was born at Old Craighall, in Mid-Lothian, was taken down below at Edmonstone Colliery when between six and seven years of age, and had to learn "slype drawing," crawling on hands and knees among mud with a tail-chain attached to the empty or full slype, and pulling it behind her like a pony. She afterwards worked at Harley Muir till the women were expelled from the pits in 1843.—Glasgow Herald.

His Majesty's Hint.

It is well known that the King considers hirsute appendages as an unnecessary adjunct for a clergyman. Some time ago His Majesty, being on a visit to a well-known peer, observed that the chaplain, who was also rector of the parish, would be improved in appearance by removing his moustache. This criticism was told to the young cleric, who forthwith took the hint and appeared clean-shaven.

On the King's next visit he inquired as to the identity of the clergyman who was invited to dinner, not recognizing his changed appearance. Some very complimentary remarks and not a little amusement on the King's part followed the discovery of how His Majesty's former hint had been acted upon in so practical a manner.

A Powerful Press.

The Philadelphia mint use a press that can exert a force of 1,100 tons to the square inch to stamp medals.

King Leopold is said to have given $6,000,000 in Congo bonds to Countess Vaughan.

Points For Mothers

Where there are small children mother's stocking basket is very rarely empty.

It is amazing how small toes and heels resent being covered and how quickly they work their way into the outer world. A great deal of time and trouble is saved and the lives of the stockings doubled if the toes and heels are run with mending silk or even with cotton before they are worn. Silk will not shrink as mending wool does, and it is not nearly so bulky.

Washing, too, has a great deal to do with the wear of stockings. They should first of all be well shaken in order to remove any dust and then soaked for fifteen minutes in a lather of warm water and soap to which a little ammonia has been added. Next make a fresh lather of soap and water and squeeze the stockings in this. Rinse in two lots of warm water, dry and press with a moderately hot iron before they are quite dry. Never use soda for socks or stockings. It injures the color.

Hints About Babies.

Never bathe a baby immediately after it has fed. Two hours at least should elapse before a bath.

When a child is fretful give it a little water to drink. Just as often as not it is simply thirsty.

A lump of ice tied in a muslin bag will soothe gums swollen from teething and is welcome to most babies.

Ill nature or angry outbursts on the part of a mother will unfailingly react on the baby, who will suffer from indigestion, colic and general fretfulness.

When a child suffers from earache syringe the ear with water as hot as can be borne every hour or so and keep a bag of hot salt over the back of the ear. Never drop hot oil or any other substance except water into the ear. Keep the child very warm and quiet. These earaches, so frequent in childhood, are generally due to congestion from a cold.

Babies should preferably sleep on their sides. When sleeping on their backs the food is apt to rise in their throats and choke them.

Game For Children.

Did you ever make a pin organ? It is great fun and so easy that even a very little child could make it with some help perhaps. The pins are just common pins, interspersed with a few needles, and the organ is just a cigar box. Turn the box upside down and mark a straight line down the center and drive in the pins, remembering always that the deeper they are driven in the higher will be the note. Small black pins make good high notes, while needles are excellent for bass notes.

An older child with some ingenuity can tune his organ to play real music. Select a simple tune and drive each pin in until it corresponds to a note. Use a small hammer and push the pin up and down, picking it with another pin until it makes the right note. Time is regulated by placing the pins of greater or lesser distance from each other, and a little experimenting will soon make the task comparatively easy. To play the organ use a stout wire hairpin.

For Hard Knocks.

Small folks who play hard will fall down and get hit and bumped.

To relieve the effects of a blow rub the injured part immediately with a little butter or olive oil. It should be applied every half hour for an hour or two.

It is curious how many people acquire black eyes by walking carelessly around in the dark.

Since bruised eyes may cause serious trouble, some precaution such as the following would be quite worth while:

When walking in the dark in unaccustomed places always raise the arm to about the level of the nose and keep it bent there to protect the face and chest.

Quilling For Hats.

Some very beautiful quillings for children's hats can be made more successfully by hand than by machine.

They require a quantity of ribbon velvet or ribbon (more of the latter, because it is less heavy), but the simple mushroom shape will mean no further expense for trimming. Your inch wide ribbon will work up well into a snappy looking hat decoration when the two ends that depend from the back, after the quilling is tacked to the hat, are each passed through a jet or metal slide.

A Soothing Bath.

A warm bath in which a teaspoonful of carbonate of soda has been dissolved has a wonderful effect in quieting the nervous irritation of a teething or otherwise cross child. In nine cases out of ten he will go to sleep almost as soon as he is dried and wake up as bright and amiable as one could desire.

A Wise Precaution.

The careful mother always makes several pairs of strings for baby's cap. These she hems at their unfinished ends after their embroidered ends are worked.

An ancient diary found at Viterbo, Italy, notes the appearance of Halley's comet in 1066.

A WONDERFUL CAPTAIN.

Collingwood Had Misfortune Always to Follow Someone.

Collingwood's fame is great and lasting, but in the imagination of his fellow-countrymen he remains a somewhat shadowy figure among the more tangible heroes of his time, a man of splendid achievement and of undimmed reputation, but one who never moves alone, or first, across the stage, says Henry Newbolt in The London Graphic. This was his destiny from the beginning; wherever he went in life he found a greater man ahead of him.

There is something strangely ominous in the regularity with which he was sent by fate to sail in Nelson's wake. As a lieutenant he succeeded him first in the Lowestoffe and then in the Bristol; as a commander he followed him in the Badger, and as a post-captain in the Hinchinbrook. He was with him under Hughes in the West Indies, and gave him invaluable backing through the troubles over the Navigation Laws; seconded him in his magnificent disobedience at St. Vincent; carried out his plan for the Trafalgar attack; succeeded him in the Mediterranean command, and there found death, after a wearier struggle, but in the same obedience to the love of duty.

It is true that of this extraordinary record part only was the work of accident; part may have been due to the insight of the authorities, and the most memorable items were the result of Collingwood's own genius for loyalty. But the result has been that the public has hitherto been content to find the biography of Collingwood in the Life of Nelson, and has taken little pains to form a clear picture of the man himself, apart from his memorable services and his almost more memorable friendship. Another contributing cause was, no doubt, the fact that Collingwood was actually less visible to his contemporaries than any prominent Englishman of his time. To the people of these islands he was a name, a force, a safeguard, but hardly a living and conversible being—a historical personage who happened to be still alive, but of course out of reach.

For long and continuous sea service his life has no parallel; out of fifty years he spent less than six on shore; from 1793 to his death in 1810 he had but one year at home. In those seventeen years of war he fought in three great battles—the First of June, St. Vincent and Trafalgar—but the rest of the time was passed in the harder service of blockade, the strain of which may be faintly imagined from the fact that at one time he kept the sea for twenty-two months without so much as once letting go an anchor. As he himself wrote when watching off Cadiz in 1806, "A battle is really nothing to the fatigue and anxiety of such a life."

Fortunately, though materials seem to be lacking for a detailed life of Collingwood, it is possible to find him in his letters, which are excellent reading. "I know not where he got his style," said an eminent diplomatist, "but he writes better than any of us." Perhaps that is true of most sailors: they have leisure and loneliness, and minds less crammed with journalistic phrases.

It is not, however, so much the style as the substance of Collingwood's letters that will give the reader the sense of intimacy; even when "the English admiral wishes health and peace" to His Highness the Bey of Tunis, he is less interesting than when he sends a sovereign to his old gardener Scott, to comfort him "in these hard times," or gives directions for the education of his beloved daughters. "How do the dear girls go on? I would have them taught geometry, which is of all sciences in the world the most entertaining." His taste was all for science. "I would have my girls gain such knowledge of the works of the creation, that they may have a fixed idea of the nature of such a world. Whenever they have that," he adds, "nothing on this side of the moon will give them much uneasiness of mind."

His sense of humor is intermittent, but lively: in this vein he loves especially to play with Bounce, the dog (in prose and verse), and admirably relieves the solemnity which naturally accompanied his elevation to the peerage. "The editors of the Naval Chronicle have written to me for the history of my life and progress. . . . So I have employed —— to write a history for me. For my birth and parentage he has selected two or three chapters of Bamfylde Moore Carew; for my service in the West Indies and on the Spanish Main he has the history of the Buccaneers; and for my shipwreck he has copied a great deal out of Robinson Crusoe: all of which, with a few anecdotes from the lives of the admirals, a little distorted, will make, I am inclined to think, a very respectable piece of biography."

The words which immediately follow these give a curious touch of reality. "I have just heard that the Brest fleet is at sea, and coming this way. If they do [illegible] them all, and it would be a lucky hour." Another vivid stroke, in his account of Lord Howe's victor, is worthy of the author of "The Dynasts." "We received all their broadsides two or three times before we fired a gun. It was then near ten o'clock. I observed to the admiral that about that time our wives were going to church, but that I thought the peal we should ring about the Frenchmen's ears would outdo their parish bells."

Motoring Through the Air.

Barney Oldfield's recent 27-second mile feat recalls to mind the feat of the intrepid motorist, Mr. Coles, who some time ago gave a thrilling performance at the London Alhambra. A platform constructed some feet from the stage, and supported by strong baulks of timber, was approached by a steep chute on one side and steps on the other. Driving the car up the chute, Mr. Coles brought it to a dead stop in a space not an inch longer than the actual length of the car, and then sent it down two flights of stairs, afterwards pulling the car up in its own length. There was no ridge or [illegible] of any kind to the side of the stairs, and a mistake of a quarter of an inch would probably have resulted in a fatal smash-up.

A Great Railroad Project.

The greatest railroad project now on foot in this part of the world is that of a line to Hudson bay as a cheaper outlet for the wheat region of western Canada. The line will be about 500 miles long and largely through an unbroken wilderness. The surveys are now made, and it is definitely announced that the road will be built by the Canadian government. It will not be available through the whole year on account of conditions in Hudson bay. Although this great body of water is commonly regarded as a polar sea, no portion of it reaches the polar circle, and neither the bay nor the strait ever freezes completely over. Nevertheless the great ice floes, the fog, the storms, the intense cold and the magnetic conditions make navigation exceedingly difficult and dangerous through more than half of the year. The line will shorten by a thousand miles the distance between England and the Canadian wheatfields and reduces by two days the distance between England and Japan.—Youth's Companion.

The Number of Comets.

People who have been surprised and possibly concerned about the number of comets seen this year will be interested in the statement made by Professor Paul Turner in a London lecture on Halley's comet that there may be 50,000,000 comets. Some comets, he says, take thousands of years to return instead of seventy to eighty years, like Halley's. "Comets," the professor adds, "spend most of their time at a great distance from the sun traveling so slowly as to be almost stationary. Halley's comet describes in a few weeks an arc equal to that over which it spends forty years at the other extreme of its orbit."—Exchange.

For the Scandalmonger.

The Orleans museum has just been enriched with a curious relic of the past which some workmen in making excavations in the city came across. It is a stone representing a grinning figure, showing the teeth, the countenance being repellent enough. In this way the loquacious woman, the scandalmonger, was brought to her senses. The stone, suspended by a chain, was placed round her neck, and so accoutered she was compelled to walk round the town in which she lived. The stone is supposed to date about the sixteenth century.—London Globe.

Mexican Miners.

The living conditions of the workers in the larger mines of Mexico are extremely humble. The average man and his family live in a one room shack, mud house, stone hut or dug out along some bank. Their food consists of dried meat, fried flour cakes beans and rank coffee. Stoves are found only in the better homes. The laborer's meal being cooked over a little fire between stones. At meal times the family gather around the fire, and they sleep on blankets on the floor.

Human Body Gives Off Light.

Is the human body luminous? Commandant Darget of the French Academy [illegible] maintains that the human organism gives off radiations that act on the sensitive plate much like the X rays or the radium emanation. One French firm has several times been obliged to discharge men and women who fog the photographic plates when manipulating them.—Chicago Tribune.

DEATH OF KING EDWARD CANCELLED THE SHOW

Montreal's Exhibition of Horses Was to Have Opened on Monday But Has Been Postponed.

Montreal, May 8.—All arrangee,mts for the Montreal Horse Show were cancelled by the directors on Saturday as a result of the death of the King. There is a remote poossibility of the show being held in the autumn. A number of the exhibitors from outside points having intimated their willingness to come to Montreal if the management favorably considered such a proposal, but the question has not been discussed by the directors and for the present the show is regarded as being definitely off.

Practically all arrangements for the 1910 show were complete and a brilliant opening was promised for Tuesday evening. The decorators were just finishing the work of transforming the arena from the bare skating rink to the bright show ring, the catalogue had been printed and a number of the horses were already here when the decision to cancel the show was made at noon on Saturday.

It was felt that while it would be possible to carry through the show to a financial success, the gloom cast by the death of the King would completely mar the social side of the event. His Excellency, the Governor-General, would, of course, be unable to attend. Then most of the box holders would similarly not be present. All the social events which run concurrently with the show would be cancelled and the society end of the show would be dull and colorless. Further, the military classes, which were to be a feature among the ring events and the Hunt Club classes, would have to be cancelled. The management had expended between $3,000 and $3,500 and this will be a total loss. To-morrow the secretary's office will start refunding the entry fees to the exhibitors and money subscribed for boxes and tickets.

AUBURN WOOLEN MILLS LOSE ABOUT $1,000

PETERBOROUGH CITIZEN 101 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

The oldest citizen of Peterborough, Mr. Mantel, to-day celebrates his hundred and first birthday. When seen to-day by a Review representative, Mr. Mantel was busily at work in his garden at 470 Downie street, and conversed as intelligently and interestingly as a young man. Mr. Mantel plainly remembers Halley's comet and was amiddle-aged man when it last appeared. He is an honorary member of the Tilsonburg Masonic Lodge and gave a short speech at the session of Masonic Lodge of Instruction held here last month.

He went to London last July to attend a Masonic meeting and felt no ill effects of the trip. Mr. Mantel came to this country in the year 1837, and his passage across on the "Brightman" occupied eleven weeks.

DISEASES OF THE EGG ORGANS.

The egg factory turns out a product far more remarkable than a watch or an automobile, for these become junk, while an egg contains a germ of life that is perpetuated in generations to come.

The majority of hens go through life without accident to their egg machinery; others have their reproductive organs deranged or destroyed, mainly by the maladies here mentioned.

Ovarian diseases are seldom known till revealed by a postmortem.

If ovules cannot enter oviduct they form a cluster of hard yellow tumors,

THE EGG ORGANS.

[1 to 2, ovary, where yolk is formed; 2 to 3, infundibulum, where white is formed; 3 to 4, uterus, where shell is formed; 4 to 5, cloaca, the end.]

or they do not mature and become watery cysts.

Such incurable diseases are caused by overfat, which crowds the egg organs so they cannot perform their functions.

A hen that is egg bound is generally known by her frequent attempts to lay.

The egg may be felt in the cloaca.

This condition is generally caused by a very large egg, irritation that causes a swelling in oviduct, drying of mucous membrane, a tumor or fat crowding the oviduct, a soft shelled egg blocking the exit of a normal egg or the faeces of constipation closing the cloaca.

If treated early, hen is often saved by injecting sweet oil into parts, laying her on back and pressing egg toward outlet.

A large egg may have to be punctured, its contents spilled outside and fragments of shell removed piece by piece.

Much force to remove egg results fatally, and if cloaca is black hen should be killed.

When egg contains no yolk, ovary is deranged; if without white, the infundibulum is inflamed; if without shell, the uterus is affected.

Inflammation of the oviduct is caused by a very large egg, egg tonics, too steady laying, rupture of an egg in oviduct or constipation.

Administer a tablespoonful of castor oil; inject weak solution of tannic acid (1 to 100), to which add chlorate of potash (3 to 100).

A hen may so strain in laying that oviduct will turn inside out and protrude, and if long exposed to air gangrene results.

Quickly examine organ for an egg or tumor within and note color.

Remove egg if present; if there is a tumor or organ is black or dark purple (gangrene), kill the hen.

If membrane is red, wash off any filth in warm water, grease with vaseline and press organ back to place.

If it again protrudes, place within it a piece of ice, press the organ back, and it will generally stay.

Place such patients in a quiet place and feed them sparingly a cool, nonstimulating diet.

DON'TS.

Don't growl because you think your show birds should have a better position. "There are others."

Don't write or buttonhole the judge about your exhibit before the awards. You'll get into contempt.

Don't shower compliments on the judge if you win. He will laugh at such chaff.

Don't knock if you don't win the cup. Put up the five dollar forfeit and appeal or shut up.

ALMOST AN AWFUL TRAGEDY.

Oh, who could wonder that she'd weep
When she heard Bill say in his sleep:
"You are a peach, a darling, too.
Come here, sweetheart, and I'll hug you."

"Oh, how I wish I had never wed!
I'll kill myself!" she sadly said.
"And then perhaps when I am dead
He'll think of me and some tears shed."

And so when morning light had come
She quickly to the orchard run
To hunt a limb both strong and high
Where she might hang herself and die.

When through the trees she heard once more
Those words that her poor heartstrings tore:
"You are a peach, a darling too.
Come here, sweetheart, and I'll hug you."

"Ah, ha! I'll kill that woman now
Before I hang on this high bough!
I wonder if it is the cook
That Bill's affections from me took.

"I'll murder her! I'll kill her quick
For playing such a low, mean trick!"
And so she crept among the trees,
Determined vengeance to appease.

But, lo, when near the chicken pen
She saw Bill hugging a fat hen,
While on his shoulders there perched two,
And near him the old rooster crew.

They were all eating from his hand
And cackling, too, to beat the band,
While in his basket right near by
Fresh eggs were piled away up nigh.

And when Bill saw her spying there
He cried: "Ah, there, my own true love, so fair!
You are a peach, a darling too.
Come here, sweetheart, and I'll hug you."

FRENZIED FINANCE.

If some European writers who "do" this country in a few days and return posthaste to describe us Yanks as mercenary, miserly, almighty dollar chasers would just overhaul our garbage barrels and follow the carts to the dumps they would find over $1,000,000 thrown away.

"Oh, that can't be!"

"Yes, a million in feathers."

Every night we take our snore on 13,000,000 tons of feathers, and this doesn't include feather bed lightning preservers, boil protectors and rooster tails that bob up and down on milady's thirty dollar bonnet.

Every twenty years all this feather paraphernalia must be renewed, and every year we buy 10,000,000 pounds from foreign feather firms. And it has been estimated that we throw more than this amount on the dump.

My friend, are you one of these frenzied feather financiers?

Save the feathers, and the dollars will take care of themselves and you.

DON'T BE UNREASONABLE.

A correspondent offered $1 for a pure bred standard weight Barred Rock cock weighing nine and one-half pounds when the meat only was worth 16 cents per pound.

But he wasn't just a market chicken, for his owner had spent money and time to make him a pure bred beauty, a prolific breeder of fine stock.

The same with eggs.

Eggs are not "jest aigs" when they come from pure bred, bon ton, beautiful Biddies, and they can't be bought for a song either. Take the advice of one who has bought and sold lots of eggs and stock:

Allow a fancier a reasonable profit. Be satisfied to pay a good price for a good article.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

In some parts of Pennsylvania the shooting matches and raffles made fowls scarce in the winter months. Fifty turkeys were disposed of at York, Pa., at one raffle. Raffles are unlawful, and fortune wheels, booze and betting that are found at nearly all shoots make them little better.

Hatfield, Pa., is becoming famous for its annual turkey auction. They are gathered there by one dealer and auctioned off at highest prices to dealers. This year there were 6,000 turkeys and 4,000 chickens and ducks, all sold at fair prices. They are mostly gathered from Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

As a solution of the cotton boll weevil it has been proved in Texas that a drove of turkeys cleans them up and waxes fat. Now watch for a big revival of the turkey industry in Dixie.

Those who use corrosive sublimate for mites should be warned of its very poisonous nature. A little of the spray in the eye will often destroy the sight.

Do not perform a postmortem on a fowl if your hands have cuts or sores. Poultry often dies from the worst forms of blood poison. Handling a case of fowl diphtheria has resulted in deep sores on the hands and body.

White Indian Runner ducks and White Leghorns are the go in California. White eggs are all the call in her market as in New York, but Boston still pays extra for brown—Browning, of course.

The rage for brown shelled eggs in English markets is so great that other colors are hard to sell. To meet the fads they dye the shells, just as some orange growers put on that stylish russet tinge.

Two men in Ashland, Pa., had a war of words, and the one accused the other of stealing all the chickens in Mahantongo valley. He at once sued for $2,000 damages, won a verdict of 6 cents and had to pay $125 costs. Not much to crow over!

In Alaska they call a mallard duck an anas puyrayuchose. In the swell restaurant they call a cooked guinea a mallard duck.

Many fanciers were so beaten by the express companies on shipments of show birds to the Alaska exposition that they swore that was their last. When you ship market fowls be sure to demand their rate or they'll charge for fancy stock.

JERMYN NEWS

Jermyn, May 9—Miss Mary Fife has returned home, having spent the past month in Toronto.

Miss J. Pengelly, West Toronto, is the guest of Miss M. Fife.

Miss C. Cummings, of Norwood, is the guest of Miss Carrie Pallin.

Mr. R. Knox, of South Dummer, Mr. Atchison, of Warkworth, visited in the vicinity Sunday.

Miss N. Shearer, of Rochester, is home for her holidays.

Miss Shearer was the guest of Mrs. S. Patterson Sunday afternoon.

Mr. F. Kidd was the guest of Mr. J. Pallins, Sunday.

The quarterly meeting of the Bethel Young Men's A. B. Class, was held at the home of Mr. S. Armstrong Thursday evening. The officers of the class for the coming six months were elected as follows: President, Frederick Fife; vice-president, Norman Patterson; secretary, Henry Borland; treasurer, P. P. Armstrong. The officers elected take up their duties July 1st.

Mr. S. Nelson has left for Alberta, where he intends spending the summer.

The Glee Club concert was not held Monday night, May 2nd, as announced, owing to bad weather, but was given before a rather slim crowd on Friday evening. Although the audience was small the programme rendered was excellent in its originality. Mr. J. Pallin occupied the chair, and in his adddress laughingly suggested that the club adopt a new name the "Matrimonial Club." The programme rendered was as follows: Misses C. Pallin and R. Borland parody on "O You Kid"; reading by Mr. K. Eason, "Episodes of My Recent Trip to Toronto and Vicinity"; comic solo by Geo. W. M. Fife, "Kay No Good"; dialogue, "A Matrimonial Mixup"; instrumental, Miss C. Cummings and Miss H. Fife; solo, Geo. Patterson, "It's Almost Here"; solo, Miss I. Pengelly, "We're Off, We're Off." Miss P. Dorland gave a parody on "Whistle and I'll Come to You, My Lad," entitled "Whistle and I'll Come to You, Buggie," and as an encore rendered an instrumental on the fife. The National Anthem brought the evening to a close.

WIDOWED QUEEN THANKS BRITONS FOR SYMPATHY

She Expresses Her Gratitude From the Depth of Her "Poor Broken Heart" for Their Messages of Condolence.

London, May 11.—While the rulers and representatives of foreign nations are assembling here for the obsequies of the dead sovereign, the various necessary formalities incident to the sad event are being gradually completed. The widowed Queen has sent a touching personal message to the nation, written in unassuming style and recalling similar intimate messages which Queen Victoria was in the habit of addressing to her people.

King George has addressed messages to the army and navy and to the Indian princes and people.

"From the depth of my poor broken heart I wish to express to the whole nation, and our own kind people we love so well, my deep felt thanks for all their touching sympathy in my overwhelming sorrow and unspeakable anguish.

"Not alone have I lost everything in him, my beloved husband, but the nation, too, have suffered an irreparable loss by their best friend, father and sovereign thus suddenly called away. May God give us all His divine help to bear this heaviest of crosses, which He has seen fit to lay upon us. His will be done!

"Give to me a thought in your prayers, which will comfort and sustain me in all that I have to go through. Let me take this opportunity of expressing my heartfelt thanks for all the touching letters and tokens of sympathy I have received from all classes, high and low, rich and poor, which are so numerous that I fear it would be impossible for me ever to thank everybody individually.

"I confide my dear son to your care, who, I know, will follow in his dear father's footsteps, begging you to show him the same loyalty and devotion you showed his father. I know that both my dear son and daughter-in-law will do their utmost to merit and keep it."

One of the first messages issued by King George, who has long been known as "the Sailor Prince," was addressed to the navy. In it the King says:—

"It is my earnest wish on succeeding to the throne to make known to the navy how deeply grateful I am for its faithful and distinguished services, rendered to the late King, my beloved father, who ever showed the greatest solicitude for its welfare and efficiency.

"Educated and trained in that profession, which I love so dearly, retirement from active duty has in no sense diminished my feelings of affection for it.

"For 33 years I have had the honor of serving in the navy, and such intimate participation in its life and work enables me to know how thoroughly I can depend upon that spirit of loyalty and zealous devotion to duty, of which the glorious history of our navy is the outcome.

"That you will ever continue to be as in the past the foremost defender of your country's honor, I know full well, and your fortunes will always be followed by me with deep feelings of pride, affection and interest.

"George R."

Late last night the body of King Edward, enclosed in an oaken casket, was transferred to the throne room of Buckingham Palace, where it rests on a catafalque covered with the same purple pall which enshrouded the coffin of Queen Victoria.

Contrary to the original intention that the body of King Edward should be quietly and privately removed from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall, on next Tuesday, it now has been decided that the removal shall be accomplished with considerable ceremony and the cortege will be an imposing military spectacle.

MEETING OF THE PRESBYTERIANS

Synods of Montreal and Ottawa Gather at Cornwall.

Cornwall, May 11.—In St. John's Church last evening the Presbyterian Synod of Montreal and Ottawa was opened by Rev. John Hay, B.D., of Renfrew, who occupied the chair in the absence of the moderator elected at the last synod, Rev. Charles Tanner of Windsor Mills, Que., who died in January, 1910. Dr. Hay conducted the opening service and made a very touching reference to the late King. He hoped that his successor would walk in his footsteps. Out of respect to his late Majesty and the late moderator, the choir loft and pulpit were draped in purple and black.

The opening meeting was public and Rev. Dr. R. P. McKay of Toronto delivered an eloquent address from Isaiah xxi., 11: "Watchman, what of the night?" He pointed out the growth of Christianity and the spread of education in the countries of the near and far east, and expressed the opinion that the time was opportune for all Christian churches to join hand in hand for the conversion and education of the eastern races.

The synod was then formally opened and almost the first business was the election of a moderator. There were three nominations: Rev. D. Currie, Perth, Ont.; Rev. Dr. Love, St. Andrew's Church, Quebec City, and Rev. Mr. McDougall, Spencerville, Ont.

On the first ballot Rev. Mr. McDougall defeated Rev. Dr. Love and on the second Rev. Mr. Currie defeated Rev. Mr. McDougall and was escorted to the chair, which he will occupy for the ensuing year.

Rev. Dr. Campbell of Montreal and Rev. Dr. Love of Quebec City moved the following resolution: "To His Excellency the Governor-General, Ottawa: We, the ministers and elders constituting the Synod of Montreal and Ottawa of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in annual meeting assembled, respectfully request Your Excellency to convey to our new sovereign, King George V., and his royal consort, the assurance of our local attachment to Their Majesties' persons and throne."

The synod adjourned till 10 a.m. on Wednesday.

ROUND UP OF HOTELMEN

Owen Sound, May 11.—The biggest round-up in the history of local option in Owen Sound has been made, resulting in 23 charges of illegal sale against five local hotelkeepers.

The Patterson House, the leading hotel here, has no less than nine charges laid against it. There are seven charges against the Central Hotel, three against the Pacific Hotel, two against the Comely House and two against the Coulson House. Further charges may be laid.

Jurors Challenged by Defence.

Ottawa, May 11.—The trial of Michael Murphy and his wife, the former charged with the recent murder of Dale and Howes, two young men at Shawville, and the latter with aiding and abetting in the crime, opened yesterday, but the panel was exhausted with the selection of only four jurors. Nearly all were challenged by the defence.

BLOODSTAINED AUTO FOUND

Believed to be Car That Ran Down Mrs. Albert Behr.

Chicago, May 11.—An automobile with bloodstains on the wheels, found abandoned in an alley here yesterday, is believed to be the machine which caused the death of Mrs. Albert Behr Monday night. Mrs. Behr and her husband, a carpenter, were about to cross the street, when the car is said to have swerved into Mrs. Behr, who was almost decapitated before the eyes of her husband.

The chauffeur did not stop, it is said, and quickly disappeared into Lincoln Park. The alley in which the machine was found by detectives yesterday is several miles from the scene of the accident.

A police captain, whose son is believed to have been one of the five men in the car, is active in conducting the search. Three saloonkeepers and the driver are said to have been the other occupants.

SHERIFF'S MEN IN CUSTODY

Greensburg, Pa., May 11.—Thirty-eight deputy sheriffs at the mines of the Westmoreland Coal Co. at Yukon, have been arrested and are being held here to await the grand jury's action relative to the rioting of Sunday, which resulted in the death of a miner and the probably fatal wounding of two others.

Admitted Purchase of Poison.

Kansas City, May 11.—In concluding his testimony in his own behalf, Dr. Hyde, who has been on trial several weeks, charged with poisoning to death Col. J. H. Swope, yesterday admitting purchasing the cyanide, which caused the colonel's death, but declared that he only used it to kill vermin.

PERU MAKING PREPARATIONS

Lima, Peru, May 11.—Active preparations for a possible war with Ecuador continue. Volunteers are enlisting daily, and the war fund is being constantly increased by private donations. In this city and its immediate vicinity, 24,000 soldiers are quartered, while 10,000 additional troops are stationed near the frontier.

The Peruvian Government believes that it has reliable information that an effort is being made by Ecuador to obtain an alliance with Bolivia, as against Peru. To this end it is asserted, a member of the Eucadorian cabinet left Guayaquil yesterday for Lapaz, Bolivia, under instructions to negotiate with the Bolivian Government and the Chilian Minister at that capital.

GEN. FRENCH'S VISIT DELAYED

Ottawa, May 11.—While no intimation has yet been received, it is anticipated that the visit of Gen. French will at least be postponed by King Edward's death. He was to have reached Canada about the time now fixed for the royal funeral, which he will probably wish to attend.

HOW LONDON CARES FOR STRAY INJURED PETS

DINNER TIME — BRINGING IN THE PETS

Several institutions are supported by humane residents of London for the care of lost and suffering animals. One of these, known as the Home for Lost and Starving Cats, is in Ferdinand street, Camden Town, and has done a very good work in preventing suffering among the cats. Scenes in this home are given in the accompanying photographs.

HULL WOMAN SUES AS A RESULT OF THE EXPLOSION

First Damage Action Arising Out of Tragedy is Filed in Courts—Minister of Labor Promises an Investigation—Death List Reaches Nine.

Ottawa, May 11.—The first action for damages resulting from the explosion in Hull on Sunday was entered in the Hull Court yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Leamy of "The Elms," Chelsea road, through her lawyers, Aylen and Duclos, of this city. Miss Leamy is suing for $1,200.

The house, which is a splendid brick building, is situated three-quarters of a mile from the site of the demolished factory. There is not a door left in the building, not a window, the framework is all broken to matchwood, the wallpaper is torn and useless, the plaster is a powder, the furniture has all been sent for repairs, and the occupants of the house only escaped with their lives.

Scores of houses were wrecked on Chelsea road and owners are expected to follow the lead taken by Miss Leamy. The relatives of the dead have not yet taken action, nor have the injured.

It was announced yesterday by the Minister of Labor that an investigation will be held and legislation be brought in to regulate the handling of explosives.

Several generous subscriptions have been received by Mayor Fontaine in aid of the sufferers, all of whom are workingmen and little able to stand the financial loss or property damage.

Only nine persons are dead, the figures being wrongly sent as 10 or 11. The dead are:

Donat Fabien, aged 12 years; Louis McCann, aged 17; Ferdinand Laurin, Antoine Servant, aged 12; Rosalie Carriere, aged 17; Laurentia Carriere, Theodore Gagne, W. Salsourin, aged 24; Patrick Blanchfield, aged 49. All belong to Hull.

The funeral of the Hull victims was held this morning to Notre Dame Church at eight o'clock. There were nine hearses.

The majority of the dead were communicants of the St. Redempteur Church, where the funeral should have been held, but this could not be, as the church is practically wrecked and considered unsafe. The windows in the church are broken, the roof was wrecked by a large rock which was hurled into the church.

It is said that the assistant priest in charge has wired to Father Carriere, who is in Rome with the apostolic delegate, to come home at once.

CURIOUS CASE OF ASSAULT

Brampton, May 11.—W. H. Adamson, a juror on a case here, entering into conversation with Station Agent Hall at Streetsville, was told that he had no right to make any comment on the case, and also that as he was a friend of the family and paying attention to the plaintiff's daughter, he had no right to be on the jury at all, whereupon he knocked the agent down.

The latter drew a revolver and ordered him out of the station.

Adamson left the train at the Streetsville Junction and made complaint to the agent there as to the treatment he had received from Hall. The latter entered an action for assault, and the case was heard yesterday. Adamson was fined $5 and costs.

The case will be appealed.

The jury in the original case was dismissed and a new trial will be necessary.

BUSH FIRES ON THE C.N.R.

Port Arthur, May 11.—Bush fires are raging in the district surrounding Nolatu, on the Duluth extension of the C.N.R. Word to this effect received by telephone message last night to Crown Timber Agent Oliver, with a request for help. The fire is reported to be making considerable headway, and though there is no damage to settlers yet, it is seriously threatened.

Other bush fires less serious are reported from other parts of the district, and heavy smoke can be seen from the city over the western horizon. The season so far has been very dry and characterized by much wind, being conducive to fires.

Two years ago bush fires in this district did hundreds of thousands of dollars' damage.

BEST WILL BE FREED

Nineteen Year Old Husband Not to be Extradited,

Windsor, Ont., May 11.—Arthur J. Best, the nineteen-year-old husband of Alice Best, his month-old bride, who was drowned in the Detroit River last winter under mysterious circumstances, will not face the murder charge preferred by the Detroit authorities. Late yesterday afternoon Judge McHugh, extradition commissioner, decided that the evidence submitted by the Detroit authorities for the extradition of Best was not sufficient, and the prisoner was immediately discharged.

Judge McHugh's decision was the culmination of a bitter legal battle in which Prosecutor Van Zile of Detroit, backed by the Detroit police, opposed Mayor J. W. Hanna of Windsor, counsel for Best. A. R. Bartlett of this city represented the state of Michigan. Fifteen witnesses were called by the Detroit authorities. The Detroit police failed to prove a prima facia case against Best, who will likely leave for the Canadian west.

Judge McHugh in dismissing Best severely reprimanded him for cruelty to his dead wife. "Your conduct should be a warning to yourself and others," said the judge. The release of Best is the grand finale of one of the most sensational cases in Detroit or Essex County.

Mrs. Best was discovered one Saturday night last winter floating down the river clinging to a cake of ice screaming for help. Best, from the dock of the ferry boat, watched the whole scene. The finding of the woman's body a short time ago resulted in an inquest, at which the jury blamed Best for his wife's death. His arrest followed, which brought on the extradition proceedings just finished.

REFUSED USE OF ARMOURIES

Belleville, May 11.—The Masonic Grand Lodge is scheduled to meet here in July, but it is rumored that the convention may go elsewhere because the Government refuses the Masons the use of the armories during the convention. There is much feeling on the matter here.

W. F. W. Fisher, of Burlington, was elected president of Halton Liberals.

TORONTO TO HAVE BIG MEET OF AVIATORS IN JULY

Bird Men Are Coming—Plans Shaping for an Aerial Tournament—Bleriot Says He May Come—Representative of Ontario Motor League Has Gone to England to See White and Paulhan

Toronto, May 11.—Hurrah, an airship tournament for Toronto!

A committee was appointed by the Ontario Motor League yesterday to further arrangements which have been quietly under consideration for some little time to have an aviation meeting. It is intended to make the meet international in scope, open to the world, for competition of all kinds of dirigible air craft, and as huge an undertaking as anything that has yet taken place in the world.

The promoters have even gone so far as to send a man across the Atlantic to negotiate with Graham White and Paulhan, participants in the ever-exciting race from London to Manchester for a $50,000 prize, and they have already received favorable intimation from Bleriot, who flew across the channel to Dover, and the famous Wright brothers. The latter, however, are rather uncertain as yet, because they have no protection on their patents in Canada, and the people behind them are canny.

Working in conjunction with the motor league is a New York syndicate which controls several of the most successful machines in the United States.

Two suggestions for an aviation field have been considered—one being the Woodbine and the other some large open field about 15 miles from Toronto, on a railroad. The latter idea, thus far, has met with the most favor, it being argued that coupon tickets could be arranged for with the railroad company, to ensure a large crowd of paid admissions. In addition there is necessity for a large open space. As air navigators prefer flying over water it is not improbable that some spot between Toronto and Hamilton, on the lake shore, will be chosen. The alternative to this is out the Kingston road.

One merchant has offered $20,000 off his own bat, believing that it will be the greatest boost Toronto has ever had. Conducted on international lines, it will do more to advertise Toronto and Canada than anything heretofore.

It is said that a similar, though smaller meet in Los Angeles, Cal., drew six times the city's population during its progress.

It is calculated to make this air motor tournament extend over a period of six days, with an average of four flight a day. These "trips" will, of course, be governed and arranged according to atmospheric conditions. Some days will be better adapted to low flights and some to high.

A. E. Chatterson, vice-president of the committee, has just returned from England and declares there is no sport on the face of the earth equal to aviation to create interest and arouse excitement. Europe is now ablaze with it, he says.

He and Mr. Bennett of Montreal are going to New York on Friday to further arrange with the American syndicate. A similar movement is on in Montreal, and it is fully anticipated that the meet will go to the Canadian metropolis from here.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Forest fires are raging in the copper region of Michigan.

The funeral of the late E. J. B. Pense took place at Kingston.

The wheat in southern Alberta is said to be dying for want of rain.

Col. Roosevelt and the Emperor of Germany met at Potsdam yesterday.

It has been decided to hold a motor boat race from New York to Paris next year.

The safe in A. Harder's store at Plum Coulee, Man., was robbed of seven or eight hundred dollars.

London, Ont., cigarmakers says they will strike next Monday, their demand for increased pay having been refused.

Prof. Jenks of Trinity University has been elected professor of ecclesiastical history at the General Seminary at New York.

The Dominion Government has ordered every public building in Canada to be draped in mourning, and will proclaim a public holiday on the King's funeral.

NAILED HIMSELF TO A CROSS

Halley's Comet Has Effect of Putting Man Crazy.

San Bernardino, Cal., May 11.—While brooding over possible ill-effects of the comet's visit, Paul Hemmerton, a sheepman and prospector, became insane and crucified himself, according to mining men who arrived here with him Monday.

Hammerton was found where he had nailed his feet and one hand to a rude cross which he had erected. Although he was suffering intense agony Hammerton pleaded with his rescuers to let him remain in his spiked imprisonment. Since the visit of the comet Hammerton has been much alarmed, and when he learned that the earth was scheduled to pass through the tail of Halley's comet he believed the end of the world was at hand.

BORDEN WILL TOUR ONTARIO

Ottawa, May 11.—R. L. Borden will hold a series of public meetings at picnics in Ontario during the second half of June. The details have not been fully worked out, but it is known that nine or ten meetings will be held and that the province will be covered from the Ottawa River to the tip of the western peninsula.

The special object in making this tour will be to enable the leader of the Opposition to get into touch with the agricultural voters, and, so far as his itinerary has been worked out, special pains have been taken to give the electors of rural constituencies an opportunity of hearing him.

Killed by Carelessness.

Montreal, May 11.—At the saloon known as French Mary's, on Commissioner street, a girl named Bertha Seers, was accidentally killed yesterday evening by the careless handling of a revolver by a friend.

Lynching Threatened.

Montgomery, Ala., May 11.—Four of the negroes charged with the murder of Cleve Houlditch, near Maplesville, are in jail at Clinton, where they were hurried to avoid threatened lynching.

WOULD CHANGE CORONATION OATH

John Redmond Says it is Offensive to Roman Catholics.

London, May 11.—John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Parliamentary party, has written to Premier Asquith, reminding him of the favorable expressions, when recently the question was raised in Parliament by the Duke of Norfolk, the foremost Catholic in England, of abolishing from the declaration which the monarch must make before a new Parliament, the ancient words, "abjuring the Church of Rome," which, Mr. Redmond declares, are most offensive to all Catholics.

The Cabinet yesterday decided to introduce a bill, amending the declaration of the King, wherein he asserts his disbelief in the substantiation and adoration of the Virgin and saints, and that he makes declaration without mental reservation or dispensation from the Pope or other authorities.

For the declaration that the foregoing doctrines and the mass "are superstitious and idolatrous," it is proposed to substitute the words "are contrary to my belief," and to omit reference to the Pope.

JURY RETURNS A TRUE BILL

Whitby, May 11.—A true bill was returned charging murder, against Archie MacLachlan, yesterday afternoon after the grand jury had deliberated upon the evidence for several hours. The majority favored a true bill, but a few stuck out for more evidence.

The trial commenced at nine o'clock this morning. Justice Teetzel has decided to hold morning, afternoon and evening sessions in the hope of clearing the case off the boards at least in two days.

MacLachlan has become weak and nervous. For the past few days it is said he has scarcely eaten a thing, and Monday night, while preparing to retire, fell over upon his cell mate in a slight faint.

BOY SCOUTS IN NEW YORK

New York, May 11.—The American boy scout movement was formally inaugurated at a meeting of representative citizens held at the Waldorf-Astoria. The meeting was called by request of W. R. Hearst. The purpose of the movement is to discipline American lads mentally, morally and physically, basing the work upon the boy's innate love of the military, and through it engendering in him a generous patriotism and chivalry, a love of nature through outdoor and athletic exercises, and inculcating in him a higher morality and honor, through love of country, obedience to his superiors and fealty to the constitution and the flag. Patrols will be established in the schools.

CONFESSED TO MURDER

Montreal, May 11.—Thomas Candy, the murderer of Constables Fortin and O'Connell, made a full confession yesterday to Chief Carpenter. He said he had stolen the rubber boots and tried to sell them to Cowan, who told him that there were policemen near and asked Candy to come back. The prisoner says that when caught by the officers he shot at them and bolted for all he was worth. He will most likely plead guilty before the magistrate to-day.

COAL RESULTS

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact, and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel

MISTAKE OF ENGLISH HERALDS

A cable despatch says that by a gigantic blunder in the proclamation ceremony at St. James' Palace King George was not declared "King of the British Dominions beyond the seas."

This term was first used in the proclamation of King Edward, and was in effect an acknowledgement that he bore precisely the same relation to the Dominions of Canada, Australia and New Zealand as to the United Kingdom.

Canadians need lose no sleep over the unintentional omission. A proclamation was issued at Ottawa immediately after his accession to the throne, acknowledging him as King of Canada, and no omission of the English heralds can alter his legal status in Canada.

RECIPROCITY WITH THE UNITED STATES

Reciprocity sentiment may be expected to grow in the United States. As the American manufacturers watch the flow of population to Canadian farm lands they naturally wish to supply the settlers with manufactured goods. The success of the movement would seriously interfere with the development of Canadian manufacturing industries and retard the growth of Canadian towns and cities. It would be most injurious to Peterborough. On the other hand a general increase in the tariff on American goods coming into Canada would cause many American manufacturers to establish branch factories in Canada, and Peterborough would get its share of them.

EITHER BLIND OR DISHONEST

"A decaying economic faith" is what the Toronto Globe calls protection. It is difficult to understand how the Toronto Globe can honestly take such a view of the political situation. In every country of the civilized world, except Britain, protection prevails. There is not the slightest indication of any country abandoning the protective system in the near future, but it is a well-known fact that when the Unionist party wins in the United Kingdom British free trade will be abandoned. A few years ago advocates of protection in England could almost be counted on the fingers. Now a great political party is committed to the policy and protectionist sentiment is growing wonderfully throughout the United Kingdom. It is generally admitted that if Lloyd-George had not introduced the Budget issue to divert attention from the Tariff Reform movement the Unionists would have won in the last general election.

It is true that a cry is going up for a lower tariff in some quarters of the United States, but no one there is advocating free trade. It must be remembered that the United States tariff might be greatly lowered and still be much higher than the Canadian tariff. Moreover, the agitation for lower tariff in the United States is due to the rise in prices in recent years which many people attribute to the tariff, although a similar increase in prices has taken place in Canada under a low tariff.

The Globe's own party has abandoned its old-time advocacy of free trade and accepted the principle of protection, although by means of the intermediate tariff, the French treaty, the German compact and the tariff agreement with the United States the value of the protective system has been considerably impaired.

Taking these facts into consideration, the Review would like to know what reasons the Globe can give for its statement that protection is "a decaying economic faith." The Globe is either blind or dishonest.

DAMMING THE ST. LAWRENCE

It will be remembered that during the recent session of Parliament the Liberals, led by Mr. Pugsley, made strenuous efforts to rush through Parliament a bill designed to give to foreigner capitalists control of the St. Lawrence water power. The bill was not introduced as a Government measure, as it was thought it would slip through more easily as a private bill and that the odium of it would not attach to the Laurier Government, but it was introduced by the Liberal whip; the Minister of Public Works took it directly under his charge and he was backed by all the strength of the Liberal party in the House of Commons, four members of the Laurier Cabinet sitting up all night in the effort to get it passed. Mr. Borden and his supporters fought it with all their might and finally it became so evident to Sir Wilfrid Laurier that public sentiment throughout the country was against it that he called off his followers and an amendment proposed by Mr. Borden was finally accepted by which the plans of the company must be submitted to Parliament and cannot be carried out without the consent of Parliament. If Mr. Borden had accomplished nothing but this during the session his services to the nation would have been invaluable.

Now the Canadian Commission of Conservation has issued the following bulletin regarding the matter:—

"A group of American capitalists are asking the Canadian and the United States' governments for a very valuable privilege on the St. Lawrence river. They want the right to generate approximately 600,000 h.p. of electric energy by damming that river at the Long Sault Rapids near Cornwall. It is a somewhat difficult matter to realize at once just what that means; but when we are told that it would take pretty nearly one-half of the yearly output of all the coal mines in Canada to produce the same amount of 24-hour horse-power, it can readily be seen how valuable such a privilege would be—to the capitalists at least. To Eastern Ontario, corporation control of that enormous energy might not be so advantageous. Large corporations with monopoly privileges have ever been noted for their strict adherence to the law of monopoly price, i.e. exacting as high a price as is compatible with the greatest possible profit. With them the interests of the consuming public are but incidental to corporation profits. But there are other more serious objections to the scheme. These have been concisely set forth by the Commission of Conservation in a report on the project made last February before the International Waterways Commission—the tribunal that is to report upon the advisability of the proposed dam. The report of the Commission of Conservation stated that Canadian interests are given a minimum consideration in the company's plans. Of the total proposed development only a small portion (one-sixth) would be developed on the Canadian side of the river. The Canadian market, it states, cannot at present absorb its half of the proposed development and, should power be exported to the United States, the vested interests it would create there would prevent its subsequent withdrawal to meet the future needs of Canadian industry. Moreover, the company proposes a new channel for navigation on the American side of the river, the approach to which would be beset with dangerous currents. Thus, if permission were given to build the dam, not only would it be exceedingly difficult for Canada to proceed with the deepening of the navigable channel of the St. Lawrence, but an all-Canadian route from Lake Superior to the ocean would become a dream of the past."

NASAL CATARRH

Wm. Madill Sells the Great Remedy That Cured B. W. Squires

Here is a very simple yet wholly sincere statement of a Norwood, Ont., man who was cured by using Hyomei—the no cure no pay remedy for catarrh, asthma, hay fever, croup, coughs and colds.

"I feel that I can conscientiously recommend Hyomei for the reason that I had suffered for years with catarrh and nothing gave me the same relief as Hyomei. There was a constant [illegible] throat, pains across my eyes were almost constant and at times there was much difficulty in breathing. The glands were swollen, causing a soreness and stiffness in my neck. I cannot speak too highly of Hyomei and there is nothing that will give quicker relief for catarrh."—B. W. Squires, Norwood, Ont.

Thousands of just such letters are in existence, and thousands more would be but for the desire to avoid publicity.

If you have catarrh, bestire yourself, and drive it out of your system. Kill the germs. You can do that easily if you use Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

It is a dry, antiseptic and very pleasant air, that when inhaled, quickly relives all forms of catarrhal inflammation, stops snuffles, hawking and blowing. The price for a complete outfit, including inhaler, is only $1.00, at Wm. Madill's.

MI-O-NA Cures Dyspepsia.

Your money back if it don't. Gives immediate relief from heartburn, sour stomach, stomach distress and sick headache. 50 cents a box [illegible]

"GIVE US A PARCELS POST."

There is a whole lot of talk about a parcels post for this country, but it will never come without hard work.

Poultrymen are fighting all along the line for this convenience and for deliverance from the express companies.

The following communication was sent President Taft and to each United States senator and congressman by the National Poultry association:

Washington.

To the President and Congress:

Dear Sirs—Are you aware that the hustling hen represents big money—that she is of much greater importance to the people of America than Aldrich and the Standard Oil company, than Cannon and his bargains, than Smoot and the Mormons, than Penrose and the Pennsylvania railroad, than Peary and the pole, than Roosevelt and 1912?

Well, she is!

Do you know that she produces more value than wheat, corn or cotton?

Well, she does!

Are you aware that every man who voted for you and who may vote for the other fellow wants the hen or her fruit far more than he wants to see the express boodlers pile up more dollars through a corrupt plunderbund?

Well, he does!

Don't you know that the people of this country do things when their patience is worn out?

Well, they do!

Now, get busy.

Omit the talk and promises. We are tired of froth.

Do things.

Strangle the express robbers!

Give us a parcels post system!

Very truly yours,

THE NATIONAL POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

CRUELTY TO POULTRY.

The day may come yet when poultry buyers will be arrested for cruelty to animals for carrying a rooster upside down from market.

It's just the same as to take a man by the legs and stand him on his head.

Wouldn't there be a hubbub if a mother should carry her baby in that style?

She would be called "a cruel, inhuman monster," be sent to an institution and her child be given to a society.

But to the Almighty cruelty is cruelty, whether to man, beast, fowl or other living creature, and when he says "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy," he does not mean that if a man is kind to his child he may go out and kick old Fan, starve Rover or mistreat Biddy.

A woman bought a chicken at market and when she had carried it upside down for a block found it was dead. She rushed back and charged the dealer with selling her a sick fowl.

They were having an awful fuss when we passed, and our opinion was at once demanded by the market master. By simply pressing out the fowl's tongue we showed the entrance to the windpipe closed with feed that had run from the crop when she carried the fowl head down.

That is why a fowl struggles to get a natural position and curls its head and neck up against its breast when carried thus.

The blood not only rushes to its head, but it is in danger of strangling.

Think, too, of carrying a duck in this manner. A Pekin, for instance, often weighs ten or twelve pounds, and its short legs aren't made to carry such a weight.

Pekins are weak and very sensitive and easily crippled, and think what torture it must be for them to be carried head downward.

Better carry your fowls head up under your arm or resting in the hollow of your arm.

In a line with this is crowding live poultry into crates, tying them with sharp, cutting twine, exposing them to cold, frosty winds on the way to market, haggling them in killing, scalding them while yet alive and other practices that are really barbarous and not appropriate to our profession of Christianity and civilization.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Those who find difficulty in getting newly hatched chicks to warm up in a fireless brooder should place a jug of real warm water in the center and watch the little fellows take to it.

The demand for medium sized turkeys was again evident at Thanksgiving and Christmastide. They roast better, are more tender and fit the family and the family purse better. For this weight use medium size toms in mating.

There is a law in Australia that offers 2,400 acres of land to every owner of 250 ostriches. The first company to receive land now owns 1,100 ostriches and is worth $100,000.

A wild turkey gobbler, "big as an ostrich," for the last six years has given the "go-by" to hunters on Warrior's ridge, Pennsylvania. They have now organized a club to catch him. We will notify you when they do.

Guineas purchased at $1 to $1.50 per pair are substituted in the city restaurants for mallards, costing $3.50 per pair, and quail at $6 per dozen. What a profit! Their wild taste is just sufficient to make them popular and to fool customers.

Alfalfa bids to be the best crop in Kansas. It covered 992,003 acres the last year, an increase of 114,380 acres. It's great for poultry, and this explains why Kansas is advancing to the front rank in poultry products.

A newspaper editor advises his readers that the freshest eggs in the market are the "dirties." What about the half bushel we gathered under grandpap's hogpen, where hens had laid and "sot" since the first ages of man?

More and more Germany has been becoming independent in her poultry supplies until at present very little is imported. At one time she imported $100,000,000 worth.

Utilizing the Waste Product.

A parish in the highlands had been cut off from communication with the nearest town owing to a severe storm. Supplies began to give out, and the minister was much perturbed in mind, as his snuffbox was quite empty. The Sabbath came round. How was he to get through his discourse without the aid of his usual stimulant? He appealed to his faithful henchman, the sexton. Alas, he was in a similar unsatisfactory predicament! How was it to be remedied? Andrew shook his head, thought long and suddenly disappeared. Presently he returned with something resembling snuff wrapped carefully in paper. The minister took a hearty pinch or two and then asked:

"Where did you get it, Andrew?"

"Please, sir, I just went and sweepit the pulpit oout," was the reply.—Dundee Advertiser.

Spoke Too Soon.

Alexandre Dumas was one day the guest of Dr. Gistal, a leading practitioner in Marseilles. After dinner, while the coffee was being handed round, the host requested the great novelist to enrich his album with one of his witty improvisations.

"Certainly," replied Dumas, with a smile, and, drawing out a pencil, he wrote under the eyes of his entertainer the following lines:

Since Dr. Gistal came to our town
To cure diseases casual and hereditary
The hospital has been pulled down—

"You flatterer!" here exclaimed the doctor, mightily pleased, but the poet went on:

And we have made a larger cemetery.

BUSINESS houses solicit telephone trade. They realize its importance. It is the consumer's most convenient way of reaching the shop or the store.

When the larder runs low, when the fuel gives out, when an article of furniture is needed—the Bell telephone is a ready help to the housewife. It reaches the sources of supply.

Telephone trade is not confined to consumers and retailers in one locality. The Local and Long Distance Bell Telephone reaches all localities and brings together widely separated merchants and customers.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"But, then, I am working for them now to pay for the years they supported me when I was too little to work."

"Och, Eunice, you was always wonderful dumm! There ain't no time since you was five years old a'ready that you ain't earnt all it cost to keep you, and them couple years before that when you was too little—well," he said mysteriously, "I could tell you somepin if I wanted—somepin where would make you say to mom and pop pretty quick, 'I don't have to.' They had ought to be payin' you wages. It ain't right they don't."

"Tell me what you mean about those two years of my childhood."

Abe hesitated. "Pop would jaw me somepin turrible if I tole you. You just wait. Some time I'll tell you mebbe. But now," he urged, "if you're got any spunk you up and tell 'em you're goin' along with me to the circus in. Ain't you will, Eunice? Och, go on!"

He attempted a clumsy caress, but she drew back. Abe scowled angrily.

"Look at here, Eunice. You might be glad I wanted to keep comp'ny with you!"

"Why?" she asked, with a childlike wonder, as though the proposition were a curious one.

"Ain't I goin' to be well fixed till pop's deceased a'ready?" he demanded. "And look at the good times you could have off of me, buggy ridin' Sundays and goin' to circuses and all. When does a girl ever get any fun without a gen'man friend to run with her? And it ain't everybody fixed like me would want to keep comp'ny with you, neither—with pop and mom so down on my runnin' with a girl where won't have no aussteuer. You won't bring me nothin'," he said ruefully. "Nothin' but my pop's and mom's spite! Yes, you might be glad, anyhow, I want you!"

Eunice regarded him thoughtfully, but made no answer.

"Can't you see it that there way?" he persisted.

"But I could not let any man sacrifice so much for me, even if I did want to marry him."

"There you go ag'in!" he exclaimed indignantly. "Even if you did want, you say! I can't see why you don't want. Say!" he said, his discouraged tone changing to hopeful, "is it mebbe because you don't like to get pop and mom down on me? But," he reasoned, "you see, all I'd be givin' up fur you don't weigh ag'in what I'd be gettin'. And, you see, I'd reason with pop and mom like this—I'd say, 'Eunice, she ain't been raised to go much or spend any at the cloes like some, and she's used to hard work and in the end she'd mebbe save me more'n if I married another one where had money, but where wasn't contented not to be spendin' and goin'.' I've spoke them argyments to myself, still, a'ready, when I thought of your not bringin' me any aussteuer—and them same reasonings would weigh with pop and mom, Eunice," he urged coaxingly.

"I do not doubt it, Abe."

"Then you'll go with—to the circus?" he pleaded. "Ain't?"

"No."

"I'll take your part ag'in pop and mom. Ain't you got any spunk? Or don't you like circuses—or what?"

"I'm not afraid of your mother and father, though your mother's loud complainings often weary me—when I listen to them; but, Abe, I can't let you spend money taking me pleasure seeking when I don't intend to marry you."

According to the Pennsylvania Dutch social standards, such a course on the part of the girl would have been perfidious, inasmuch as acceptance of an invitation to go with one's "gent'man friend" to a circus was tantamount to accepting a proposal of marriage.

"I'd like to know," said Abe sullenly, "how you expec' to do any better."

"Would you, Abe? I'll tell you," she said gently. "I'd do better by lying down across the railroad tracks and letting the cars run over me."

She made another quick move to pass him, for Mrs. Morningstar's shrill tones were shrieking angry commands to the girl to stop dawdling there with her Abe and come in with them "witties."

For any least attention paid to her by the son of her foster parents Eunice was always made to suffer, it being assumed gratuitously that the penniless girl and not the prospectively rich youth did the love making.

But Abe was so spellbound with amazement at such startling speech from the usually meek and submissive girl that he did not hear or at least did not heed his mother's voice. As Eunice forced her way past him the close contact of her body sent the fire through his veins, and he seized her about the waist and pressed his lips to her cheek—just as his mother, in a rage, strode to the spring house door and as Dr. Kinross, with his books concealed in an old basket, was surreptitiously returning by a back way from his morning's outing.

"You little hussy!" cried Mrs. Morningstar. "Go in and tend to the dinner and leave our Abe be!"

"You leave me be, mom," retorted Abe, looking shamefaced, but his mother, not stopping to discuss the matter with him, walked after Eunice into the house, her angry upbraidings following the girl into the kitchen.

"Now, what a spiritless creature the damsel is not to turn on that woman and resent her abuse!" Dr. Kinross thought, with mingled compassion and impatience, as he slowly followed them up the path to the house.

Meantime Abe, still tingling from the joy of his stolen embrace, was hastily examining something that he had found in the spring house which had excited his jealous suspicion. While he had been waiting for Eunice to come to the spring he had accidentally discovered, sticking under the door sill, an envelope addressed to Miss Eunice Morningstar. Now, judging from his own feelings toward the girl, he did not see how any man's eyes could rest upon her and not desire her, and he had therefore leaped to the instant conclusion that this was a love letter to Eunice from "that dude towner," as he privately characterized Kinross.

A rage of hot jealousy had swept over him and he had been about to tear the envelope into bits when the sudden appearance of Eunice in the doorway had caused him quickly to conceal it in his pocket, to be examined or destroyed later.

So, while his mother was driving the girl into the house with her reproaches, he, lingering in the spring house, was tearing open, with hands that shook, the letter addressed to another.

His jaw dropped in amazement as he saw the name subscribed at the end of the sheet. Henny Mucklehenny. His sister Ollie's beau! What could he be writing to Eunice for? Did he want to be a bigamist? With a curiosity equal to his jealousy Abe read the brief epistle.

Dear Eunice.—There's a misunderstanding. I don't mean Ollie; I mean you. But when I begun to come Sundays, Ollie she took it for herself. But it ain't her. It's you. It don't come easy to explain her I don't mean her. She'd take it some hard, I can see it at her how she favers me a good bit, me bein' so wellfixed and could be a good purvider. I wanted to keep company with you ever since I seen you on church children's day, six weeks back already. Well, that Sunday you was on church once, ain't? When you come in church, some one says to me, that's Eunice Morningstar. I says to myself, of course not out loud, I know it is and sha looks so pretty. I believe I love her. Anyhow you can write to me and tell me about it. I praid one night to find out if you was the right one. I gave a quarter in the collection when you was in church. God loves a chearful givver. Well, I haf to stop now. You will write to me now, ain't? If I spell diffrunt, I'm spelling simplified. Cordially your lover,

HENNY MUCKLEHENNY.

A look of cunning settled about Abe's mouth as he finished his surreptitious reading. It was no slight shock to discover that he had so strong a rival as Hen Mucklehenny. Nevertheless he felt quite equal to coping with him.

Without an instant's hesitation he tore the sheet and the envelope into tiny bits. "She won't never see that! And when he comes Sunday and she ain't round he'll think she's discouragin' him and he'll lose heart. And then mebbe he'll take to Ollie fur all if he keeps on comin' and settin' up with her, because he ain't got cheek enough to tell her it ain't her he means."

A few moments later Kinross, at the ringing of the dinner bell, ostentatiously joined the other men at the pump to wash his face and hands and comb his hair before coming to the table. This performance was part of his disguise as a farmhand, but today it defeated its own ends, for the two young ladies, coming into the kitchen from the front porch, where they had spent the morning in hammocks and rockers, made note of the fact that when Pete took his turn at the kitchen pump he did not use the family towel on the roller, but carried his own towel on his arm and combed his hair with his own pocket comb instead of using the family comb which always lay on the window ledge, convenient for the use of every one.

kitchen to the dinner table, "and make things on the table quick. Och," she threw a remark to the young ladies who waited on the settee, "till we're done the breakfast cooking, it's time fur dinner a'ready. And it's so hard to know what to cook all, too, fur yous towners. And today it was everything now scarce. The lard was all and the pies was run out and the bread stale. And here this morning I gev Doc fur his breakfast fat cakes with coffee over and he sayed, now that he certainly don't want. So he eat balony, where I bought off of Jake Eckstein's meat car. That there balony I don't like—they say Jake he puts most anything in it! But Doc he eat it."

"Och," said Mrs. Morningstar in confusion, "I don't mean to say he's just a towner. But he's near as sneaky about his wittles as if he was one."

Daisy at once seized her notebook. "'Sneaky?' Does that mean choicy? How perfectly killing!"

"Eunice," Mrs. Morningstar again shrieked, "fetch them pie out of the oven! Och," she volubly continued to her boarders, "I couldn't get that donkey of a new stove to work today and them pie ain't good baked all. I have only twelve fur over Sunday, too, and that ain't enough for the size of pie we eat."

"I'm sorry you find it so troublesome to cater for us, Mrs. Morningstar," said Georgiana. "But take comfort—there are some essentials of diet that one can never find so good in town as on a farm—butter, for instance."

"Yes, well, but," Mrs. Morningstar shook her head doubtfully, "the butter ain't good on the farms all. Not like ourn. Eunice," she called shrilly to the outer kitchen, "make over the coffee now and put an extry spoonful yet in and use the big pot—the little one is yet so soon full. Yous towners," she explained to the young ladies, "like your coffee so strong that way. Well, I like it when it tastes good, too—coffee—especially by the such cold winter weather. But," shaking her head, "not so strong like yous take it. Yes, it makes me a difference, too, if my wittles don't suit me. Now here one day," she related as she placed a white crusted pie on either end of the table, "we had a boarder here fur a week from out west, and she sayed how they fried their sauerkraut. Well, I says, that would be a big surprise to me to eat fried sauerkraut yet! Eunice," she again called, "take watch oncet when the meat car comes; Doc—Pete—he says he'd now like steak oncet."

"You are very indulgent to your farmhand," remarked Georgiana as Peter at that moment walked into the room and sat down in a huge painted rocking chair directly in front of the settee.

"Och, Doc," warned Mrs. Morningstar, "that chair 'll fall together if you set on it before Mister makes it new rockers at."

Pete removed himself to the edge of the settee beside Miss Ellery, who, with apparent willingness, made room for him by drawing away the skirt of her remarkably pretty pink summer gown. Kinross liked her taste in dress; her costumes were simple to the point of distinction and, he thought, exactly suited her style of beauty.

"I guess yous think such a old chair would as soon be throwed on the wood pile," said Mrs. Morningstar, "but I'm used to it some thirty years, and I'd have homesick fur it if it went."

"By the way, Mrs. Morningstar," said Daisy plaintively, "would you mind having the porch chairs moved to the side of the house which doesn't overlook the cemetery? We're here for our health."

Mrs. Morningstar looked at her in surprise. "But I don't think," she said reassuringly, "any of 'em would come over."

The entrance of Ollie at the kitchen door carrying a basket of apples checked Daisy's answer.

"Ollie," her mother turned to her complainingly, "where was you at? Come, hurry and help make the dinner on the table. What you waste time pickin' them apples fur? I got apples plenty."

Ollie pouted as she removed her sunbonnet and hung it on a nail. "I like to be out, too, by this nice weather," she said, with a resentful glance at the two young ladies of leisure on the settee.

"Well, don't leave pop know you throwed away your time," warned her mother. "You know how it unpleases him—that there. Here, Eunice, dish up the cornstarch in these here saucers," she ordered as the girl came in with two steaming dishes. "Use the common saucers fur all, only Doc and the two ladies not. Do you hear?" she said threateningly, looking at the girl's absent countenance. "I want to have it right done!"

Daisy took up her notebook. "A Pennsylvania Dutch farmhand," she repeated as she wrote, "is treated as an honored guest. Curious custom. Peter, you have a cinch of it here, haven't you? Now, if you married Ollie and became one of the family"—

"Daisy!" Georgiana protested.

"I was only going to say, Georgiana, he'd be up against it then. He couldn't lay off when he had headaches, and he wouldn't have his evidently dainty and fastidious appetite catered to. So I wouldn't advise you, Peter, to marry Ollie. And," she added, lowering her voice for Peter's ear alone, "she has an awful figure, hasn't she? She looks like a yard of pump water! But why Ollie isn't gone on you, Peter, I can't understand, for you're certainly the least woozy looking"—

She was checked by the entrance of Abe and his father, who now came into the kitchen and took their places at the table, where the boarders joined them. Abe looked half sullen, half shamefaced, with a scowl for his mother's overtures to him and furtive glances at Eunice as she moved about the table setting cups of coffee and saucers of cornstarch at each place.

Kinross looked on at this little byplay with sympathetic interest.

"The fellow will marry that dowerless girl," he confidently thought. "Trust a quiet girl like that to play her cards cleverly! She has Abe where she wants him! No doubt she's a cat, like all other women, and is working that youth as much to 'spite' his mother as to make a good market for herself. Women are all alike fundamentally."

CHAPTER IX.

IT was Sunday evening, "beau night" in the social circle of the Morningstars, and Ollie, dressed in her best furbelows, was seated in the front room, which was never opened except on the Sabbath. Ollie was awaiting the arrival of her "follower." She was looking very complacent as she rocked herself in the big, stuffed rocking chair. She had been slower than most of the girls in the neighborhood in attracting a suitor, and now that a young man of means who owned his own farm clear had begun to wait upon her with significant regularity every Sunday night she was feeling encouraged.

Eunice was seated near her at one of the windows, an open Bible on her lap.

She was not like Ollie, dressed in her Sunday clothes. The truth was Eunice did not have any Sunday clothes. But the fresh gingham kitchen gown of dark blue which she wore, with a bit of cheap lace around her neck, threw out the fairness of her face and hair and did for her what all Ollie's finery could not do for that young woman's fat, round visage.

A few feet away, in the open doorway leading out to the porch, Dr. Kinross sat smoking a pipe and reading a Sunday paper. Unlike Mr. Morningstar and Abe, he did not celebrate the day of rest by sitting about in a toilet consisting of Sunday pants, a white shirt without a collar and no vest or coat. He wore his overalls as usual.

His reading of his newspaper was varied with speculations as to why Eunice so industrially read the Bible. Was she devout? He had always believed that he had a constitutional dislike of devout people—unless they were Roman Catholics, in which case they were rather picturesque. But evangelical devoutness, even in the illiterate, from whom one expected no better, was generally nauseating. Or was it the girl's mental hunger which led her to read the only book permitted on the Sabbath to any one over whom Mr. Morningstar had any authority?

Ollie Morningstar was regarding with pride the furnishings of the best front room. Her parlor boasted of some elegancies that no other parlor in the township possessed, for besides the inevitable plaster of paris cat and crazy jug (the latter consisting of a large sized bottle covered with putty and stuccoed with various objects such as buttons, beans, pieces of glass, and so forth, and the whole gilded over to produce a wonderful effect) there was the large, elegant colored picture—Swift & Co.'s advertisement of lard—portraying two great, fat, oval hogs leaning drowsily against a fence, with a lurid sunset in the background. Ollie thought it lovely, though of course not so beautiful as "Rock of Ages" framed in red plush and gilt, representing a young lady in a nightgown hanging to a cross, the angry billows dashing against the rocks on which she kneels and her long and remarkably abundant hair flowing in ripples far down her back. These things were among the compensations of Ollie's sordid lot.

Presently her complacent expectation and the reading of Kinross and Eunice were interrupted by Georgiana and Daisy, who strolled into the parlor and seated themselves, Daisy on the front doorstep near Peter and Georgiana on the window sill beside Eunice. Georgiana carried over her arm the skirt and waist of a pretty white gown. She and Daisy, having held counsel and reasoned that the girl Eunice must feel her shabbiness in contrast with Ollie's gorgeousness, had decided to offer her a few of their own garments, beginning with this white dress of Georgiana's.

"It may serve to develop the girl's latent aesthetic sense to give her some pretty clothes," Georgiana had suggested. "Tasteful clothing is often really educative."

"Yes," Daisy had gravely agreed, "and I can imagine that Eunice might look awfully fetching if she sported up. But," she added rather fretfully, "I suppose she feels there isn't any inducement to sport up out here—with not a man about the place that isn't as woozy—excuse me, Georgiana—but that Eunice is too nice looking to care for Abe. Have you noticed how stuck on her he is? She'd be an awful goose to throw herself away—as nice looking as she is—on a fellow as tight across the chest as he is—as any one can see he is! Ugh!" Daisy shook her shoulders with a shudder. "If I had to marry a man with a nature like that—close and mean, you know—I'd get up some night and gently lay a wet towel over his nose and mouth. Then, you know, he'd be dead next morning. To be sure," she went on, "there's Pete—she might sport up for him—but he's such an indifferent thing! Give him his meals and that's all he wants. He doesn't look at girls. Not even at me—after I stooped to condescend to jolly him a little!"

"You entirely miss my point, Daisy, dear," Georgiana had returned gravely. "My object in offering Eunice a pretty gown is to try to awaken in her a sense of the beautiful on a much higher plane than that you talk about."

Seated on the window sill beside the object of her benevolent intentions, Georgiana led up tactfully to the matter of her gift.

"Eunice," she began earnestly, her eyes on the distant horizon which was just beginning to deepen its evening hues, "do you ever feel, in your nearness to nature here, how really we ourselves are a part of all this wonderful beauty? It seems to me that this environment," she added, without waiting for Eunice to reply, "ought to make us sensitive to beauty in every detail of life."

THE REAL ESTATE OUTLOOK GOOD IN THIS CITY

Judging from the enthusiastic tone in which a prominent real estate dealer spoke to-day when interviewed by a Review reporter, things are booming in the real estate line now as perhaps never before. On Saturday alonr Mr. C. M. Blewett, whose office is on George street, disposed of three houses, and stated that during the entire week the business done was eminently satisfactory. He also stated that many people are contemplating buying, and some property in the western part of the city has been taken off the real estate market for a time as prices of land in that vicinity are bound to rise.

PROGRESS MADE IN ALL DEPARTMENTS OF Y.W.C.A.

Reports Read and Adopted at Annual Meeting—Interesting Review of the Work Accomplished in the Past Year.

Splendid reports evidencing the great progress made in all branches of the Young Women's Christian association was an interesting feature of the annual meeting held last night in the parlors, and the success of the year just closed will act as an incentive to officers and members alike to put forth greater efforts in the year to come. For the splendid management of the association, much credit is due the General Secretary, Miss McCalla and those associated with her. The work of these officers is appreciated, but there are many of the members, who could by their co-operation, help to bring about greater accomplishments. At the meeting Miss Rogers, the president, occupied the chair, and Rev. H. R. Trumpour, rector of All Saints' church, conducted the devotional exercises. During the reading of the reports a programme of musical numbers was given and each was heartily received.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT.

With an incredible rapidity have the past twelve months sped by—the 19th year in the life of our Association, and as its successes and failures are being reviewed, there is uppermost in the thought of all a sincere desire to make the coming year a more fruitful one. We see the weak places, the opportunities missed, but over and about it all we watch the vision of the vast field of work. For our desire and purpose is that we may become a very real source of helpfulness in the lives of all the girls of our city.

Our work is four-fold. The church is the only organization that can adequately care for the religious life of a people. The Association is a supplementary agency and we would ever be reminded that our strength depends upon its unswerving loyalty to the church and to the standards of Jesus Christ, that unitedly we may work for the extension of the Kingdom. It was that there might be a better understanding as to how we might supplement the church's work among the young people, and that they might see just how much we needed their help—indeed, how impossible it would be for us to carry on the educational, physical and social work without their co-operation that lead us to invite the different Young People's Societies in, on as many different Monday evenings to hold their regular meeting in our parlors. The "meeting" hour was always followed by a bright social hour over a cup of cocoa, with perhaps a game in the gymnasium. These evenings have been mutually pleasant, and in this way some four hundred young people have been brought into sympathy and interest with our work.

Through the fall and early winter weekly meetings were held in the Auburn Union school, and were well attended.

The fortnightly song services held at the Protestant Home have continued throughout the year, and have been appreciated by the old people and enjoyed by us. The hospital bedside calling has also been a pleasure and source of blessing.

The weekly Social Bible Club has met every Friday at 6.30 throughout the calendar year. During the summer a picnic tea was enjoyed in the park, and since supper has been served in our Domestic Science room, the girls coming in directly from business. The study hour follows at 7.30. There is not a happier hour in the week, for me at least. The average attendance is 10—total approximate attendance 406.

The Sabbath afternoon praise service, held immediately after dinner, is a very bright hour in our home life, and one which grows encouragingly helpful. The average attendance has been 21—total approximate attendance, 639. We would express our appreciation to all who have come in to assist in this service. Personally I would like to thank the home girls for their helpful sympathy and co-operation. The house girls are organized and united that they may render better service in the social and physical work of the Association.

In November the World's Week of Prayer was observed, and $65.00 was contributed to our foreign work. In February the Normal girls were invited over, when Miss Little and Miss Anderson addressed the girls in the interests of the foreign work, the Normal girls subscribing $40.00 for the Association foreign work, which is carried on in Tokio and Bombay by our representatives, Miss McDonald and Miss Cook.

MEMBERSHIP.

While our membership has not been raised to the figures we have worked for, we feel that an increased interest and many new faces have been the encouraging outcome of our efforts. We hope to make another definite effort in the early fall. Our book stands now—sustaining members, 37; active, 156; juniors, 81.

PHYSICAL.

Your committee is glad to report a very successful year. The gymnasium class has doubled, but we will not be satisfied until we have again doubled the membership. One feels this is reasonable, as we have one of the best equipped gymnasiums in the province, and a teacher whose superior qualifications are at once recognized. The total number of pupils registered is 131; juniors, 25; boys, 20; intermediates, 50; seniors, 30; with a total attendance of 1,607. In addition to these, the Collegiate girls' basketball team played one afternoon each week. We close our gymnasium season and open our outdoor athletic season. Our lawn is being prepared for tennis and croquet. The schedule of games will be announced within a few days. The athletic ticket is 25 cents for Association members and 50 cents for non-members. We shall be very glad to receive the names of those girls who wish to join.

Two open gymnasium exhibition nights have been given. The Christmas exhibition being given at the Y. W. C.A., when in addition to the drills and exciting basket ball game was played between our two girls teams, closing exhibition was held at the Collegiate Institute on April 29th, and was in every way most successful, reflecting great credit on both teachers and pupils.

SOCIAL.

The social life has been most happy and helpful. We trust to the lives of individual girls as well as to the life of our association. Many a merry evening has been enjoyed by both juniors and seniors.

Our season opened last June with a lawn social and was followed by a delightful moonlight excursion. In September a most successful "At Home" was given by the board members. Our next effort was the house girls' welcome to the large number of Normal students who accepted the invitation to spend a jolly evening with us. Two weeks later 100 girls participated in the merry masquerade Hallowe'en party, when the witches and ghosts held high carnival. The good St. Valentine's memory was honored by no fewer than three parties, nor was St. Patrick overlooked. An appropriate programme was well planned and carried out on March 17th. Many smaller social evenings and afternoons have also been enjoyed.

With gratitude in our hearts do we mention the last evening so successfully carried through by the energy and enthusiasm of the board members, viz., the burning of the mortgage, and feel that we are now in a position to work on a much more progressive policy.

We would pause to thank all who have so kindly and generously assisted us in our work during the year. Our friends of talent have willingly and ungrudgingly helped us in our cheerful work of entertainment, and in spite of numerous demands on our part for cake and coffee, etc., we have met with a generous response from all especially the members of the board. The importance of the refreshment part of the programme at each gathering must not be under-estimated, for we are all sufficiently human to realize that although a liberal "feast of soul" may be in evidence, yet certainly a want, even an "aching void" would be felt were the customary cocoa and cake conspicuous for its absence.

JUNIOR.

We are pleased to again refer to our Saturday afternoon junior class of little girls not members of the association. The children may come as soon after dinner as they wish, play in the gymnasium until order is called. After short devotional exercises a half hour is spent with needles, and bright material, or else in the domestic science kitchen, when all must "help" in the development of the cookie, though without question the most interesting moment is when all are invited to sample the results of the hour.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

We wish that the disparity between the number of calls for help and of workers had not been so great, yet we have been brought into touch with many young women whom otherwise we could not have reached, and all have appreciated help given. We are only sorry to be obliged too often to disappoint those who look to us to supply them with help in their homes.

Our reading room and library is open to the public each and every day from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., and many have taken advantage to peruse the magazines found here.

The association desires to express its thanks to the Examiner, Review and Times for kindly supplying the reading room with a copy of their respective papers.

Though this report is already too long very little of the actual life and work of your secretary has been even suggested. But we are glad that this is so.

Faithfully submitted,
MARY D. McCALLA,
Gen. Sec.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

Madam President, Members of the Board and Ladies and Gentlemen,—It affords me much pleasure to submit a report of the results of my first year's work as superintendent of the Young Woman's Christian Association of Peterborough. My aim for the year has been to make the boarding home one of the best in the province. It was my privilege to visit other homes in Toronto last year, and I might state that I think our boarding home is the equal and the superior of many that I visited.

As far as the interior of our boarding home goes, I believe we now have it in very good condition, and the equipment most adequate for our wants. The home keeps well filled, showing our people find it congenial and our board good. A considerable supply of fresh vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes and radishes were also grown in our own garden last year. A fine flower bed which kept our tables supplied with fresh flowers all summer was a new venture and much appreciated by all.

Our attendance varies during the year, running from as high as 80, which number we had for some time last September, to as low as 8 and 10, during July and August, when nearly all the girls are away. It is necessary to have a constant family of 35 to make the house a paying proposition.

Improvements of all kinds	$ 500 00
Wood and coal	467 00
Water rates	53 56
Food and wages	6069 11
Total expenditure for year	$7297 51

The receipts for the different months since I became superintendent are as follows:—

From Mealers	186 85
From transients	129 95
May 8 till May 31, 1909	434 62
June, 1909	595 48
July, 1909	289 63
August, 1909	245 61
September, 1909	800 78
October, 1909	715 77
November, 1909	713 81
December, 1909	621 82
January, 1910	727 59
February, 1910	643 73
March, 1910	716 46
April, 1910	792 15
Total receipts	$7,297 51

There are no liabilities except a coal bill of $117.84.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MRS. W. J. READ,
Superintendent.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The 19th annual report of the Board of Management of the Y.W.C.A.:—

During the year 1909-10 the Board has held nine regular meetings, the average attendance being 12. A year ago the number of Board members was reduced from 36 to 24. The change seems to have had the effect of improving the attendance, the average being ahead of last year's. We regret that Mrs. Thompson found it necessary to resign from the board. Through the death of Mrs. Kilgour in December last, we lost one of our most faithful members. We would here place on record our appreciation of her life service and kind character.

In June, 1909, the Board found itself confronted with a large deficit in connection with the boarding home. This deficit has been entirely wiped out, chiefly owing to several friends of the association having come to our aid with special contributions for the purpose.

For the past year the boarding home has been under the efficient management of Mrs. Read. Upon Mrs. Read's suggestion a house treasurer was appointed. This appointment has proved beneficial to both the house and finance committees.

Last autumn the building was redecorated throughout, and a concert-social was given in October which helped very materially to defray the expenses of this work.

Miss Coventry has just completed her third year in charge of our gymnasium, the closing exhibition of which took place in the Collegiate Institute Hall on April 29th. The work done by these classes was excellent and Miss Coventry is to be congratulated upon the result of her labors. Miss Coventry has not confined her efforts to class work, but has at all times been a support to Miss McCalla in extending the influence of the association.

Our general secretary, Miss McCalla, will be with us another year. It is the desire of the board to express to her their appreciation of her work. She has won the affection and respect of all with whom she has come in contact.

We wish to thank Miss Nicholls, Dr. Malcolm McColloch and Mr. Mowat for having given instruction during the past year to our members. We would also thank Mr. Pearson and His Honor Judge Huycke for lectures delivered in the interest of the class.

On April 12th last, sufficient money having been raised, the mortgage on this building was burned. Paying off the mortgage, while relieving the association of one great responsibility, has placed another of a different character upon it. Our efforts must be used for the greater extension of association work, both at home and in the foreign field.

We cannot close this report without expressing our sorrow over the death of our Sovereign, Edward VII., and our hearts go out in sympathy to his sorrowing Queen.

We pray that our present King George V., may be given grace and courage to wisely fill the kingly office.

G. M. E. STEVENSON.

EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE.

The Educational Committee beg leave to report that during the year 1909-10 they have endeavored to meet the wants of the young women of the city who desired assistance along educational lines. With this end in view a number of classes were arranged for in October, most of which were well attended.

A most helpful series of lectures on "Home Nursing," including training in practical work, was given by Dr. Malcolm McCullough. For this series of 12 lectures 20 were enrolled with an average attendance of 15.

Miss Nicholls throughout the year most kindly and faithfully taught a class in elocutionary English and mathematics. In this class 8 were enrolled, the average attendance being 4. The committee feel that were the advantages of such a class generally known, many more self-supporting young women in the city would be glad to join it.

Classes in Domestic Science were conducted in the fall term by Miss Steinhoff, of the staff of the Normal School. In this class there was an enrollment of 19, with an average attendance of 14. The regret was general that it was impossible for Miss Steinhoff to continue the work after Christmas.

Mr. Mowat's series of 5 lectures upon Browning, although not beginning until late was most helpful. The late average attendance from this class was about 25.

In all 47 classes were taught, with an aggregate attendance of 551.

Besides this entrancing travel talks and lectures have been given by Miss Dickson, Rev. Mr. Pearson and Judge Huycke.

The committee wish to express their heartfelt graittude to the teachers who have so faithfully labored throughout the year; to the Musical Committee for their arrangement of the musical parts of our lecure programmes and to those who lectured or in any way helped us throughout the year, and especially to Miss McCalla for her untiring efforts in arranging and generally supervising, etc., the classes.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ANNIE WEIR,
Secretary.

The musical programme was as follows:—

Piano Duet—Misses Tully and Dawson.
Vocal Solo—Miss Dawson.
Remarks—Mrs. Roger.
Violin Solo—Miss Irwin.
Piano Duet—Misses Morse and Hawkey.
Piano Solo—Miss McCaw.

The National Anthem was heartily sung and the meeting was brought to a close after the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Trumpour.

CHORAL SOCIETY'S SELECTIONS

Would be Pretentious—The Programme for the Festival

Among the choral compositions that will be taken up by the Choral Society proposed for Peterborough, if its organization is effected, will be included Elgar's stirring choral ballad, "The Banner of St. George," and the music for this has been ordered in England and is now on the ocean en route to Peterborough.

Another composition will be "Scenes from Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," by Coleridge Taylor, another English composer, a companion genius to Sir Edward Elgar.

The enlarged chorus will work in co-operation with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, an organization that has made great strides in orchestral artistry, and has advanced almost to the plane, in musical merit, if not in numbers, of the larger United States orchestras. Of late the Toronto Symphony Orchestra has completed with great success and applause, a cicle of six or eight concerts in Toronto. The chorus and orchestra will be supplemented by Canadian soloists, male and female, of especial eminence in musical standing.

Thus, two days at the festival are accounted for. The character of the third day's programme has not been definitely arranged, but it is proposed to bring in some of the larger and finer Canadian bands, to perform singly and as massed bands. This feature is still under advisement, pending the outcome of correspondence with the bands in question.

There is no doubt that, from a musical point of view, the festival can be made a striking success. Its general success depends upon the hearty co-operation of the citizens, and musical people of the city. It is proposed to enlist our foremost musicians and citizens to this end.

It is to be clearly understood that in the proposal for a choral festival for Peterborough there is no idea of individual aggrandizement, or personal profit. The sole object is to advance the musical interests of Peterborough and to make a sufficient musical success of the festival to bring credit and renown to Peterborough, and make it known as a musical centre, and emphasize the advantages for musical and other culture it offers, and so make it a desirable home, not only for money making, but presenting the advantages that money can buy.

It may be here explained for the benefit of those who were disappointed in the Madrigal Club not bringing the Earl Grey trophy to Peterborough, that that might have been done if the competing choral club had not unfairly strengthened itself by the addition of several professional singers, whereas the Madrigal Club was composed exclusively of amateurs, and whatever credit they won, was honestly gained.

TRIPPED AND FELL OFF CEREAL DAM TO HIS DEATH

Vernon Valois, Eleven Years of Age, The Victim of This Year's First Drowning, as He Was on His Way to Work This Morning--Man Working on Dam Couldn't Save the Boy.

As Vernon Valois, the eleven year old son of Mr. Mitchell Valois, 236 Woodbine avenue, was walking across the cereal dam this morning, he tripped and fell headlong down through a space where the stop-logs of one chute are taken up or put down, and was carried by the swift water down over the chute and to his death.

The young lad had left his home about 6.30 to go to work at the Lock Co., where he was employed in the lock room. About ten minutes later he was crossing the dam and Mr. Mat Young, who was working at the stop-logs at the time, told a Review reporter that Valois was walking along carrying his dinner pail and with his head down. "He passed me," said Mr. Young, "but I did not pay any particular attention and as I looked up a minute later I saw his two feet pass from view. When I next saw him he was in the water below the dam and trying to swim for an old pier. I hurried with a pikepole, but before reaching the pier, he had been drawn out into the eddy and out of view.

The father and mother of the boy were notified of the accident and steps were taken to try and recover the body, but up to three o'clock no success had been met with.

This is the first local drowning accident of the season.

PETERBOROUGH BOY WRITES FROM WILDS OF ALASKA

Jack Gibson, V.S., formerly a student with Dr. Johnson, and who was very popular with his numerous friends when he was a resident of this city, writes interestingly to the Review from Cordova, Alaska, where he is on the veterinary staff of the new railroad being constructed from Cordova to the Bonanza mines.

"I am on the line that is being built from Cordova to the Bonanza Mines," he writes. "It will cost millions, but when there are thirty millions staring at you out of the ground it's a good prospect.

"Now, this is no boy's task putting the road through, as it is a long and hard pass. It is 198 miles inland, of which 132 miles follow the Copper River. At the present time we are still freighting with the horses, getting in the season's supplies to the various camps ahead for the summer's work and the river is a bad and dangerous one. We lost a team through the ice a day ago, and will probably lose ten to fifteen more if it keeps up the way it has lately. The ice is breaking and the river is rising.

"It's a grand sight to see the army of horses and sleighs pulling out for the different camps. We had one hundred and fifty to start with, but lost the two mentioned above, and three others that dropped on the trail. I have been kept busy and have been very successful.

"It's funny how many Ontario boys you see up here and all holding good positions. The contractor has superintendents and bridge men, and 'vets' also are from Ontario. I guess it takes the Canucks to do things.

"A busy summer is looked forward to, for there is lots of track to be laid. Where we are the winter was not as cold as I have seen it in Ontario—that is the cold was not so penetrating. A few times it was 40 below, but now it is around 15 or 20. But one thing it can do out here—it can blow. It's nothing to have a 60 to 80 mile an hour north wind blowing, in fact the wind will often blow you off your feet. At times it gets as high as 90 and 100 miles an hour."

WILL CONSIDER PURCHASE OF NEW AGRICULTURAL GROUNDS

A joint meeting of the Peterborough Fair directors and the Board of Trade was held at the City Council chambers last night, at which the securing of new fair grounds was considered. Four properties, the Holmes property, the Morgan property, the Leary property and the Hilliard farm. The Morgan property of twenty acres, which is a short distance from the present agricultural grounds, was most favorably looked upon. It was thought that this property, with the addition of ten acres adjoining, making a total of thirty acres, would make an ideal fair grounds. The Hilliard farm was not favorably considered, as it is small and the ground hard and uneven. It would be impossible, it was the opinion of the meeting, to make a track on it.

On motion of Ald. Gillespie, chairman of the Board of Trade, seconded by Mr. George E. Elliott, of the fair directorate, the matter of the purchase was left to a meeting of the Fair and Board of Trade Committees and the committee of the whole council.

FIERCE FOREST FIRES ENDANGER MANY LIVES

Special to the Review.

Milwaukee, May 11.—Fierce forest fires are raging in Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and the peninsula of Michigan. Herculean efforts are being made to combat the progress of the flames. Hundreds of lives are endangered, and many small towns are threatened with destruction. The entire northwestern part of Minnesota is smoking and smoldering and a dense pall of smoke covers the country for miles. Reports of vessel captains entering the port of Superior, Wis., indicate that the fires are scattered over an area of at least 500 miles. The densest pall of years is hanging over the lake, making navigation dangerous.

INTERESTING FEATURES FOR THE PETERBOROUGH FAIR

A meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Fair Society was held last evening and considerable business was transacted. Several good attractions are billed for the exhibition this year two of which will be an extremely clever troupe of Japanese acrobats and another group of five acrobats.

Some complaints were brought up regarding the use of the grounds of late. Some private clubs and societies are making use of the grounds for their amusement without paying for them, and if this is not discontinued at once, proceedings will be taken.

Damage amounting to a considerable sum has also been caused by fire to the fences, and the cause of the blaze is thought to have been incendiarism.

The horse races are bound to be good this year. The entries for the annual field crop competition must be in by the 25th of May, and are open to all. It has been decided by the directors that white oats shall be the competition crop, and five prizes will be given of $15, $12, $10, $8 and $5. It is to be hoped that the farmers of this district will be encouraged by the prospects of the competitions. It will also give them an opportunity of showing what quality of oats can be grown in this part of the province.

Arrangements for paying the prizes awarded to the winners of the recent stallion and bull show were made at the meeting. A protest was entered at the time of the show against Paddy B, owned by Mr. Jacob Brown, on the grounds that the horse had not a pedigree. The pedigree was produced last night and the protest dropped.

Meetings Arouse Interest

Interest in the subjects treated by Mr. McMurdo at Gospel Hall is intensifying and the attendance increasing.

Christians of every denomination are being enlightened by the power of the Holy Ghost in him. To-night he will deal with Penticostal Power and Blessing by the Holy Spirit Given at Penticost.

Hamilton has paid $297,000 interest on a loan of $165,000 floated in 1889.

WEDDING BELLS

MOTION—LANGFORD.

The Daily News of Nelson, B.C., of May 5th, has the following report of the wedding of Miss Gussie C. Langford, a former Peterborough young lady. The bride resided here some nine years ago, and is a niece of Mr. Wm. Langford, Water street:

A very pretty wedding took place last evening, when Miss Gussie C. Langford was married to George F. Motion, Rev. Fred H. Graham, rector of St. Saviour's church, officiating. The ceremony was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. I. M. Langford, on Edgewood avenue. About 30 guests, mostly relatives of the contracting parties, were present. The house was artistically decorated with evergreens and flowers, an altar of green moss covered with tulips and Easter lilies which intervened between the bridal couple and the officiating minister was particularly admired.

The bride looked very handsome in a creation of silk crepe-de-chene which would have done credit to a Parisian artiste, and carried a bouquet of white carnations and asparagus fern. Her going away suit was rhubarb green, with hat to match. The groom wore a costume a la mode, and a broad smile of expanding happiness. The couple were supported by Master Gordon Motion and Miss Georgie Motion, the little son and daughter of the groom, Miss Georgie wearing pale blue silk, trimmed with blue lace. The bride was given away by E. Ferguson.

The bride, who is a graduate of Peterborough Commercial College, has filled the position of accountant in the office of E. Ferguson & Co. for the past eight years. She is a prominent member of the Daughters of Rebekah, and has hosts of friends. The groom is the proprietor of the West Transfer Company business, the largest concern of the kind in the city and is one of the most popular business men in the city.

After the ceremony the company sat down to a recherche wedding breakfast. The tables were a work of art, reflecting great credit upon the ladies who so tastefully decorated them without flowers, smilax and ferns.

Mr. and Mrs. Motion left, accompanied by the usual parting salute of old slippers and rice by the coast train, for an extended trip to Vancouver, Seattle and other coast cities. The groom's present to the bride was a coral bracelet set in gold, to Miss Georgie, a locket and chain, and to Master Gordon, a locket.

On their return in about a month Mr. and Mrs. Motion will be "at home" in their beautiful residence on East Baker street.

The Ladies' Aid of the George street church, will hold a birthday party at Mrs. Jas. Long's, 561 Reid-st., on Friday May 13th, from 4 to 7 o'clock Admission 15 cents.

IS DISPOSING OF GROCERY STOCK

Mr. A. L. Talbot Will Devote His Entire Attention to Meat Business

Owing to the great increase in his meat business Mr. A. L. Talbot has decided that it will be necessary for him to give up his grocery business and devote his time exclusively to his meat stores in the future. To effect a quick clearance he is having a special ten days' sale of groceries at his grocery store, George street ,and is selling out his entire stock at remarkably reduced prices.

In the future Mr. Talbot will continue to conduct his meat markets at 410 George street, and 235 George street.

DIRECTORS OF Y.M.C.A. MEET

Toronto Campaign Was Enthusiastically Endorsed

A very interesting meeting of the Board of Directors of the local Y.M.C.A. was held last evening in the board room. In the absence of the president, Mr. J. C. Shook, who is out of the city, the duties of chairman were capably performed by the first vice-president, Mr. J. J. Turner, jr. This was the first meeting of the board with the new general secretary and one of the features of the evening's work was a brief resume of the present conditions of the association's several departments made by him.

Reports were received and other important business transacted. During the progress of the meeting several directors took advantage of the opportunity to refer enthusiastically to the recent successful campaign for funds in the city of Toronto, expressing the conviction that the city of Peterborough possesses within its own corporation self-healing powers proportionately as great as those of Toronto in this particular line of work, and that all that is necessary to prove this is that there should be a similar devotion to service on the part of the young business and professional men. The vice-president expressed himself as willing to devote more of his time and interest to the development of the association's work in future. In this resolve he was heartily seconded by other members of the board.

OBITUARY

MARY MARGARET COUGHLIN.

The Daily Ontario, Belleville, of Monday, May 9th, has the following:

The many friends of Dr. Coughlin, Superintendent of the institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and Mrs. Coughlin, will extend heartfelt sympathy to them in the death of their only surviving child, Miss Mary Margaret, who passed away this morning at the early age of seven years and six months. Two weeks ago she became ill from measles, and later scarlet fever, which proved fatal, intervened. She was a bright child and was beloved by all who knew her.

HELEN ELIZABETH WHITE

Smypathy will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White, of North Monaghan, in the bereavement they have been called upon to bear by the death of their infant daughter, Helen Elizabeth, which occurred at three o'clock this morning.

SCHOOL BASEBALL RESULTS

Two games opened the junior series of the City Baseball League yesterday afternoon, but there was a Jonah in the air and the class of ball was not of a very high order. At Boswell's field the South Centrals went down to defeat at the hands of the King Edward nine. The score was 23—7. The losers used three twirlers, who were not in the best of form, being wild. The batteries were: Wise and Taylor; Smith, Huycke, Bennett and Brown. Umpire, F. D. Craig.

The teams of the East City and Queen Alexandra schools met at the former's grounds, and the result was a victory for the Ashburnham team by the score of 12—8.

FOOTBALL

A full turnout of players of the C. G. E. team is requested at the exhibition grounds this evening at 6.30. Havelock comes here next Saturday and it is necessary that the local players be in the best of shape.

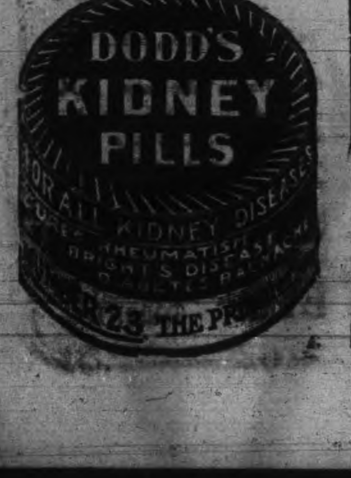
The C.G.E.-Havelock game will be played at Brinton's Meadows, and Bethany will play at home with Bintons.

Y.M.C.A. Sports

Things are moving in the line of outdoor athletics at the Y. M. C. A. Now that the tennis tournament is ready to start the physical director has his hands full looking after the men who want to get into shape for the approaching athletic competitions. There was a goodly number of athletes at Riverside Park last evening and a series of stunts worked out under Mr. Thompson's competent leadership.

On the 20th, bicycle races will be run off, and on June 4th the boys will be ready for the Lakefield relay.

Every Tuesday and Thursday evening there will be something doing of an interesting character at the park, and those who are interested in outdoor athletics ought to get their names in at once for membership in the association.



BASEBALL

DISTRICT I.

May 10—Queen Alexandra vs. East City.
May 12—East City vs. Central.
May 17—Central vs. Queen Alexandra
May 26—Central vs. East City.
May 31—Queen Alexandra vs Central.

DISTRICT II.

May 10—South Central vs. King Edward.
May 12—King Edward vs. St. Peter's.
May 17—St. Peter's vs. South Central.
May 19—King Edward vs. South Central.
May 26—St. Peter's vs. King Edward.
May 31—South Central vs. St. Peter's.

The first named in each case will be the home team.

The games for May 10th were played last night and a report is given in another column.

HITLETS

Up to the present the name of Harry Burridge has not appeared on the Edmonton ball club lineup.

The Strathconas will practice this evening at the Oval.

Toronto took the low figure in the 5—3 score yesterday, Baltimore winning out in the ninth. Jimmy Frick had a lot to do with the downfall of his former team mates.

Chicago batted Mathewson and Omes off the rubber. The Cubs had seven errors and thirteen hits.

Mrs. J. H. Finley, of Wingham, was accidentally shot and killed by a lad who was taking down a rifle during housecleaning.

Give Twenty-Four Hours' Notice.

Toronto, May 11.—A seven-year-old from Maple Grove, Middlesex County, was admitted to the Sick Children's Hospital yesterday to take the provincial Pasteur treatment. She was bitten at her home by a dog which gave positive evidence of rabies. In all cases of patients desiring to take the provincial treatment Dr. C. A. Hodgetts, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, urges that twenty-four hours' notice of their coming be given in order to have the serum at hand.

Tragedy at Schenectady.

Schenectady, N.Y., May 11.—Because Mrs. Josephine Lippielle refused to consent to the marriage of her 16-year-old daughter Angeline, to Lucano Milano, Milano pulled a revolver from his pocket yesterday and shot the girl through the temple, shot the mother through the throat and then, after futile attempts to cut his throat with a razor, took poison. The mother and Milano will probably recover. Both are in the hospital.

Editor Forced to Eat His Words.

Quitman, Miss., May 11.—R. L. Page, jr., who edits a weekly paper, several days ago published an editorial on a dance of society folks. He called the dancing "public hugging" and intimated that no virtuous woman would indulge in such practices. Page, after an absence of several days returned and was met by citizens and forced to eat a clipping of the editorial. Page escaped his assailants and left town.

Blown to Atoms.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 11.—The explosion of a large quantity of nitro-glycerine stored in a magazine at Burgettstown, 14 miles from here, caused the death yesterday of an oil well shooter, Frank McCullough, who was literally blown to atoms. Not even a fragment of his body has been found as yet. A team of horses driven by McCullough were also blown to bits.

Ignorance.

Mrs. Wayback—And are the city people as smart as they say, Ezra?

Mr. Wayback (lately returned from the city)—Well, I should say not. Talk about ignorance. They've even got to have signs in their subways telling them which way is up and which is down.—Brooklyn Life.

SHEEDY AND THE SHARPS.

The King Gambler Taught the Small Fry a Lesson.

Some years ago, when St. Louis was wide open, Pat Sheedy, king of gamblers, was sitting in the corridor of the Planters' hotel with a friend. Two strangers took seats alongside of Sheedy and very shortly turned the conversation to poker hands. They had never seen Sheedy before and did not know him, but he looked the part of a prosperous "sport" and at the same time appeared like "easy money."

"It's too bad," one of the strangers said, "that we haven't another man here. We might get up a little game of draw poker."

"Wouldn't mind sitting in myself," said Sheedy, with a nudge to his friend. "I haven't played poker for some time."

"Suppose we play a little showdown —$1 or $5 limit?" one of the strangers said.

"I'm agreeable," Sheedy replied, "and I guess my friend is. Make it a five dollar limit for an hour or two."

Introductions under fictitious names on both sides followed, and the four men went to Sheedy's suit. On the cut for the first deal the speaking stranger received the honor. The way he handled the cards showed that he was used to that careless abandon method that can only come from years of practice by a professional gambler.

The suspicions of Sheedy and his friend were verified by the first hand shown. Sheedy received three kings, his friend a small full house, the dealer's friend a pair of tens and the dealer an ace full. The betting was very light on the part of Sheedy and his friend.

The next deal was Sheedy's. He took a long while arranging the cards. When they were dealt every one in the party had fours, Sheedy's hand, of course, being the highest. The betting was fast, and when the hands were shown the speaking gambler suddenly remembered a long distance telephone call for himself and friend was awaiting them. They departed hurriedly, and Pat Sheedy, turning to his friend, said:

"My boy, it's been twenty years since I had to do that for a living."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A GREWSOME PRISON.

The Famous and Terrible Russian Fortress of Schluesselburg.

In the middle of the river Neva, where it flows out of Lake Ladoga, there lies a tiny island surrounded on three sides by the mighty, turbulent waters of the river and hemmed in upon the fourth by the cold and stormy lake. Upon this island stands a very ancient fortress inclosed by high walls more than twenty feet in thickness. This is the Fortress of Schluesselburg. Day and night sentinels relieved every two hours pace around the top of these walls, keeping a vigilant lookout on every hand. No one from within the fortress, not even the soldiers or gendarmes, is allowed to communicate with the people who dwell upon the banks of the river. If the unwary fisherman chances to drift in his boat too near to the walls of the fortress he is greeted by the shout of a sentinel, aiming his rifle:

"Away, or I shoot!"

Not even the Dead sea in the deserts of Asia is so utterly isolated and cut off from the living world as is this Fortress of Schluesselburg, which lies within forty miles of St. Petersburg.

They are very ancient, the high walls of the fortress. In many places they are cracked from old age, and in the cracks little trees have taken root. The lower part of the wall has gradually become covered with thick dark moss, just as the face of a very old man becomes covered all over with hair. They look sullen and ominously silent as if they hid dark and grewsome secrets. And, in truth, in the whole world there are no other walls that have witnessed so many and such terrible human tragedies as the Fortress of Schluesselburg.—David Soskice in McClure's Magazine.

When Fashions Lasted For Years.

In times past a fashion lasted with slight modifications for years. Much the same fashion continued through the long reign of Louis XIV. and another through that of Louis XV., while the ladies of the middle ages never thought of varying their costumes. As for the Greeks and the Romans, generation succeeded generation with little change in female dress, and yet all these ladies of the past were more artistically dressed than those of today. Many no doubt spent more than they could afford, but when they had a costly dress they kept it and did not throw it away to replace it with another.—London Truth.

Going Some.

Inebriated One—Shay, mishter, did you she me beat out that friend of mine? Stranger—I saw you running down the street, but I didn't observe any competitor. Inebriated One—You didn't? Why, I went by that lamppost back there's if it was standing still!—Puck.

Trying Work.

Thin Haired Man—What! A shilling for cutting my hair? That's outrageous! Barber—But, my dear sir, the hairs on your head are so far apart that I had to cut each one by itself.—London Tit-Bits.

The Play.

It is remarkable how virtuous and generously disposed every one is at a play. We uniformly applaud what is right and condemn what is wrong when it costs us nothing but the sentiment.—Hazlitt.

Premier Murray, of Nova Scotia, had his left leg amputated on Saturday.

EPIGRAMS OF THE SHOP.

Weekly Bulletin Issued by a Cynical Manager Who Thinks He's Funny.

The office manager of a wholesale house, who has something like 300 men under his supervision, each week issues a set of business epigrams to his assistants and department heads. This is what he said last week:

"In hiring a man ask him if he ever worked for any of our competitors. If he has take him on. You can get out of him in a week all he knows about the other fellow and fire him in two weeks if he isn't any good.

"Don't let past performances weigh too heavy in judging an applicant. Look at his eyes and chin. There's more to be learned in two minutes in a man's face than in ten years of his past record.

"If you think that one of your men has outlived his usefulness with us ask him if he can get another job. If he says 'Sure' and means it keep him with you. His slackness probably is your fault, not his. Stir him up.

"Don't for a minute let your men see that you know there is anything more important in the world than getting out the day's work. I knew a man once who disorganized a whole department by talking ancient history during lunchtime.

"Don't overlook your office boys. The man who owns this business was once one himself.

"Remember, the growth of this firm and the increase of competition demand that this week's work be just a little better than last.

"Think it over now!"—Chicago Tribune.

Holiday Visitors.

An appalling case of deafness was that of an old lady who lived just across the street from the navy yard. On Washington's birthday they fired a salute of twenty-one guns. The old lady was observed to start and listen as the last gun was fired; then, adjusting her cap and smoothing her dress, she exclaimed, "Come in!"—Success Magazine.

Allan Liner Runs Aground.

Montreal, May 11.—The Allan liner Grampian, inward bound, ran aground at noon yesterday at a place called Cap a la Roche, some 30 miles above Quebec, and remained there for three hours. When, however, the tide rose the steamer was relieved and proceeded up the river under her own steam. She will probably reach Montreal this afternoon. It is not expected that any damage was done to the steamer.

Want to Arbitrate.

Sydney Mines, May 11.—The men employed by the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. have forwarded a petition to the Minister of Labor for an arbitration board under the Conciliation Act. They ask for three things: First, recognition of the U.M.W.; second, collection of dues; third, an advance of twenty per cent. in some sections of the mines.

Aviation In Montreal.

Montreal, May 11.—Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, the famous telephone inventor, and laterly an enthusiastic worker in the realm of aerial navigation, is in the city, accompanied by his two assistants, Messrs. J. A. D. McCurdy and F. W. Baldwin.

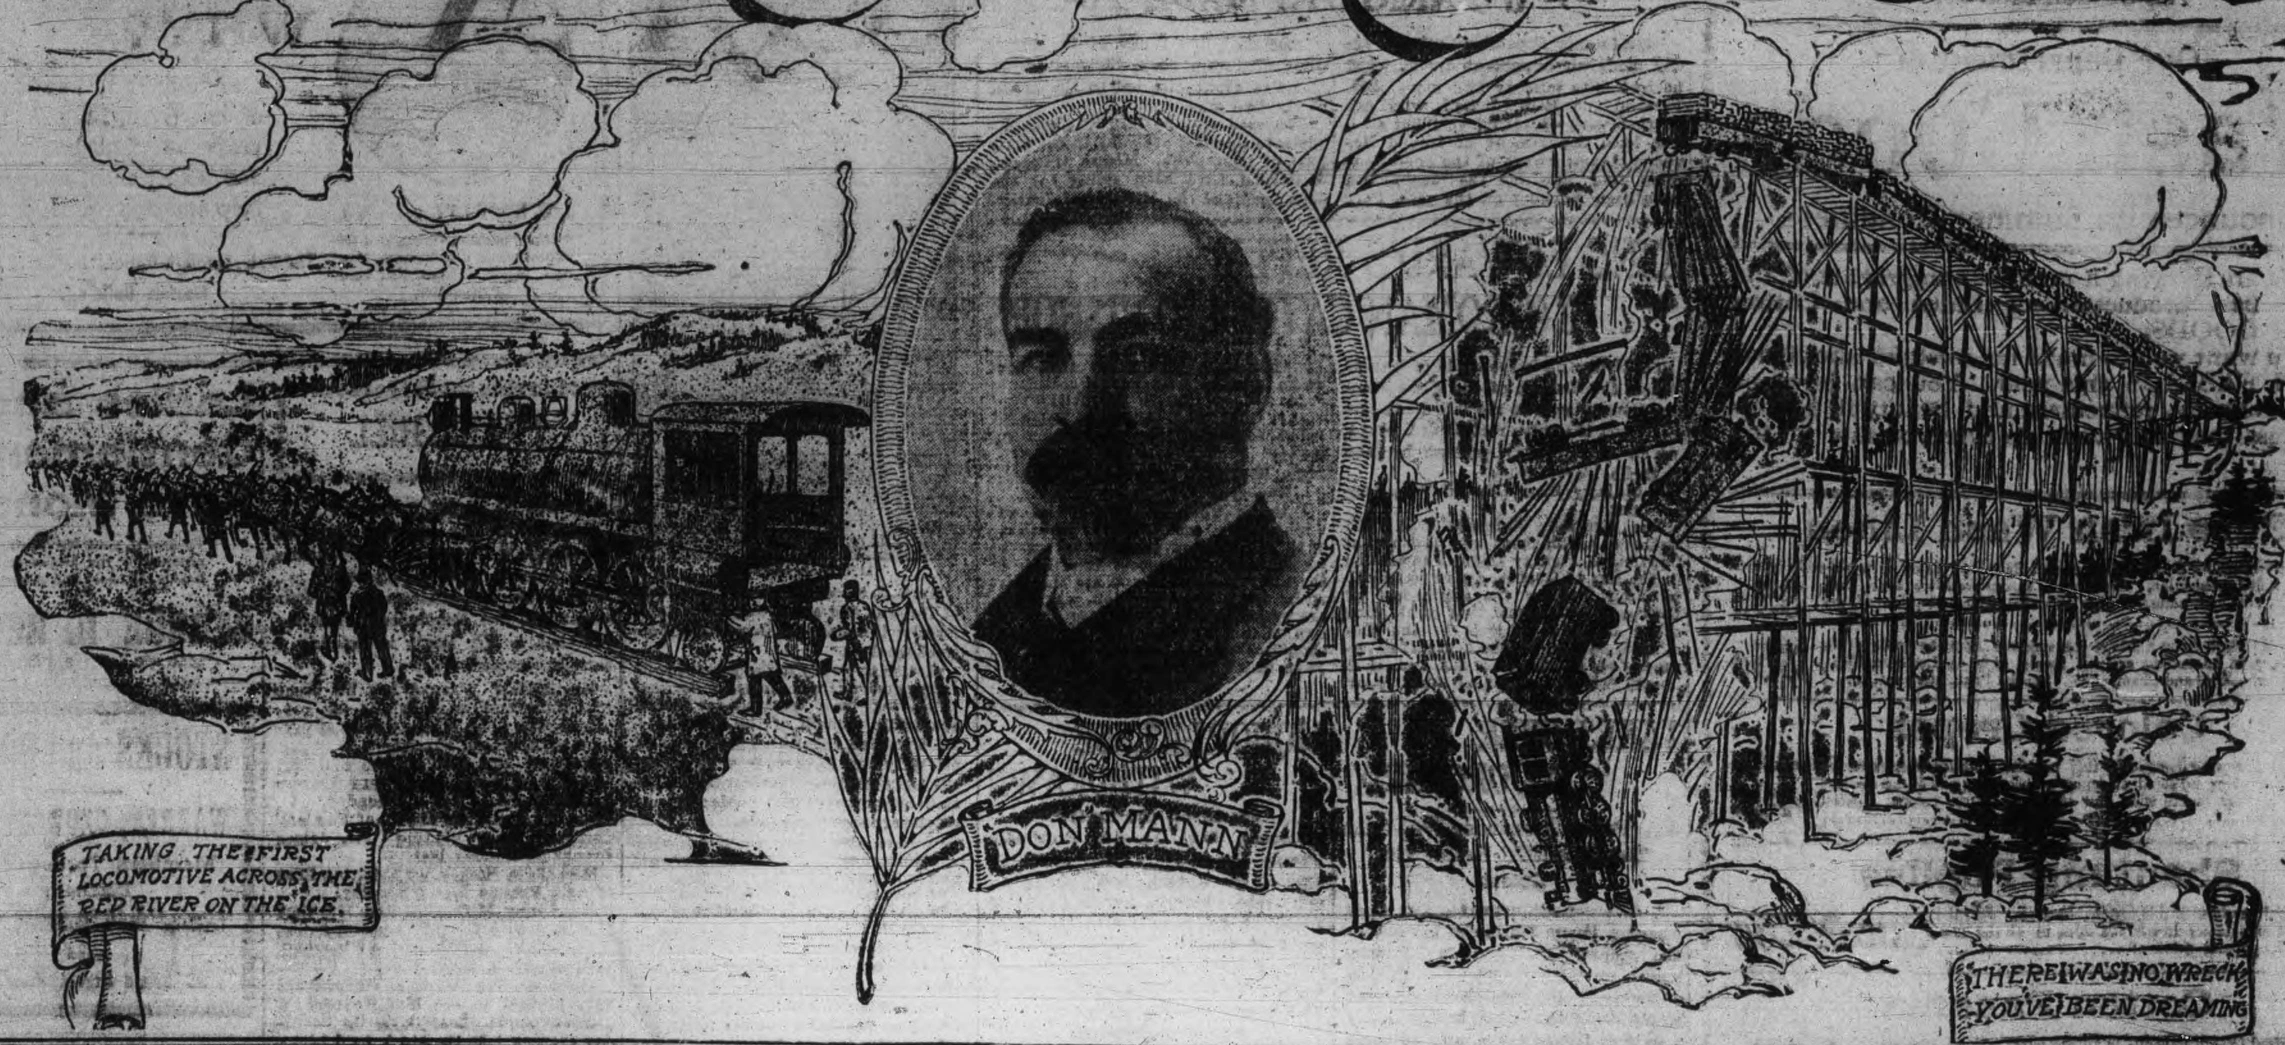
The FIRST PRODUCER



THE FIRST PRODUCER

By P. Connelly.

[illegible] at "The West from a car window" along any one of the many western lines which help to link the Atlantic with the Pacific, will convince the most casual observer that the railway is a producer. Where yesterday there was only a desert waste of sage and silence in the south west and a wilderness of waving wild grass in the Northwest, there are to-day scores of cities, thousands of towns, hundreds of thousands of homes and millions of prosperous men and women, red clover, and children playing under the apple trees. All this the railway has produced.

Probably nowhere on the continent has the railway done more for the development of the west than it has done in Canada, and none of the railways has done so much from so small a beginning as has been accomplished by the Canadian Northern.

Thirteen years ago the railway contracting firm of Mackenzie & Mann acquired a charter for a railway in the Western Province of Manitoba. The charter carried a grant of many thousand acres of land, worth all the way from fifty cents to one dollar per acre. These men knew that by building a railway and providing transportation they could "create" a value, a new and permanent value for these lands.

So they began building. As fast as a short section was completed they began operating, and an interesting fact is that each and every mile completed earned operating expenses and something more. In this way the two shrewd builders laid the foundation of a fortune.

Mr. William Mackenzie, the president, and Donald Mann, vice-president, made a team that has never been passed on the road to success in the history of the Dominion. For some reason not quite clear, Donald Mann has been called "Dan," just as Wilbur D. Nesbit, the Chicago poet is called "Bill." Mackenzie concerned himself chiefly with securing the sinews, which General Mann employed to the best advantage in his war on the "Silent Places" where, for centuries, "the Honorable Governor and Company of Gentlemen Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay" had held undisputed sway to the exclusion of all other adventures

"Don" Mann was not only a master-builder of railways, but soon developed a line of diplomacy that has been the wonder and envy of his opponents in the Dominion, as well as in the Provincial Parliaments for the past ten years. He makes and holds friends from the Premier down to the doorman, making absolutely no difference in the handshake.

Every day, for thirteen years, the Canadian Northern has either bought or built a mile of railway, building most of it.

The experience in building in the west, and the knowledge of the west, gained when contracting on the first Canadian Transcontinental line, enabled them to pick the best sections for their line. General Grenville M. Dodge has stated that the discovery of Sherman Pass was due to the fact that a band of bad Indians has chased him down a ridge which ran far out into the plain, and along which the Union Pacific was later built. Don. Mann tells an equally interesting story of the discovery of what is known as the "North Country" and the Great Saskatchewan Valley which has since come to be called "Britain's Bread basket."

About all Mr. Mann possessed at the time was his outfit. He was on the firing line grading the Canadian Pacific across a part of the Northwest Territories, when, rising early one morning he marked the absence of all his horses. Without waiting to wake the men he borrowed a sub-contractor's team and set out after the animals. There was no settlement for fifty or a hundred miles to the nearest Hudson's Bay post. He travelled for days before coming in sight of the horses. The wind was blowing steadily down from the north and he knew they would feed up wind to free themselves of mosquitoes and flies. Straight north for four whole days they led him, into a new country where the wild grass and peavine grew waist-high to him, and he's six feet something in the wild.

He found his horses, and kept them. Also he kept the secret of what he had seen. When he began building for himself, to be exact, for Mackenzie & Mann, he headed his pathfinders for the north country that had been overlooked or shunned by earlier builders who feared the latitude. This land he took over and across it and through it he sent fingers of steel. Along this line, in ten short years, prosperous towns have sprung up. The prairie wastes have been changed to waving fields. His railway has absorbed and taken over the Manitoba Government railway interests, and the history of the Intercolonial Railway of Canada proves that a Government railway is a white man's burden. The success of the Canadian Northern, the scores of young cities created by it and the wonderful industrial development along the line, has enabled Don. Mann and his interests to command the attention of the foreign investor, without whose cooperation Canadian resources cannot be developed as rapidly as they should be developed.

As indicated in the stray-horse story, the entire territory, now comprising the two great provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, was an empty empire ten years ago. In 1899 this vast area produced only 7,000,000 bushels of wheat. In 1909 the new Province of Saskatchewan alone produced 84,000,000 bushels of wheat, 102,000,000 bushels of oats, 8,000,000 bushels of barley and 3,000 bushels of flax. With a single exception the wheat yield of the Province of Saskatchewan exceeds the yield of any state in the Republic to the south, and the province is only four years old.

The simple story of the development that has taken place here since Don Mann's horses strayed north, the wonderful wakening of this last west, the real Empire building, in which this big, brainy Scotch-Canadian has played such an important part, reads like the veriest romance. Very early in his career he learned that, strong as his hands were and willing to work, his head must help. Having taken a contract to build some railway and snow-sheds in the heart of the Rockies, he harnessed the Columbia River, shot the wild rapids and rafted his material, outfit and supplies in, saving $25,000 in the cost of transportation. If, in the work of building, Mackenzie and Mann come in contact with iron ore, as they did on the Canadian Northern Ontario, they form a company for the development of the property. At Atikokan, in Western Ontario, they found a fabulous field of iron ore, and immediately created blast furnaces to prove to the world the value of their find. Finding that nearly all the large milling companies had established along the line of the pioneer western railway, they immediately formed a powerful milling company, caused modern mills to be erected along their lines, and the success of this subsidiary company is like the success of almost everything to which the firm of Mackenzie and Mann have turned their hands.

A few years ago a railway, some two hundred and fifty miles long, reaching from Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, to Prince Albert, at the far northern edge of the wheatfield and the southern shore of the fur-bearing and wood-producing wilderness of the North, was for sale. It had been operated indifferently under a lease for some years by one of the big systems and was not counted of much value. The names of stations were printed on small boards and tacked to the telegraph poles at the several side tracks. Mackenzie & Mann concluded one afternoon that they wanted this line to complete, or at least to form a part of the network of railways they were buildings in the Prairie provinces. In the twilight of that day they took up the matter seriously and when they retired, at one o'clock on the following morning, they owned the road. They were criticized at the time, for their speed and supposed recklessness; but that was two years ago. They had built this line and knew it better than the men who were operating its or those who were selling it. To-day the terminals at either end of the line and the station property in the heart of the growing city of Saskatoon, are worth many times—perhaps ten times—what they would have sold for three years ago. The side tracks have become towns, some of them cities.

From building and owning a large system of railways they have launched out in other directions. They are heavily interested in mineral development in Canada.

Not long ago they sought an entrance to a thriving city in the west. The city solicitor and the city fathers had laboured long and late to find a way to secure the entrance of the line and escape criticism. Finally, one afternoon the "Athabasca," Mr. Mann's private car, arrived, and that night there was a meeting. At least thirty minutes were wasted trying to make a start. Presently, as one of the Aldermen tells the story, Don Mann turned to the city clerk and asked for a stenographer. When the shorthand artist arrived the big builder asked the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen to "excuse his back."

Turning, he put his feet upon the window-sill and told the stenographer what he would do if the city would do certain things. When he had finished he read carefully the few typed pages and passed it over to the city clerk. He produced and lighted a large cigar. The mayor asked the clerk to read and he read what Don had dictated. Mr. Mann smoked. The Mayor asked the legal light to examine the document "for cause." Don smoked. The city solicitor read and re-read, and finally said it sounded all right to him. One Aldermen remarked that the document did not contain a single "whereas," "said," or "aforesaid," and asked the legal man how about it.

The legal adviser told the inquisitive councillor that these things were not really necessary.

"Then," said the Alderman: "Why the devil do you use them?"

The "dictator" smoked.

One man, bred in the open, rose to say if the proposition set forth in the document was what the city wanted and what Mr. Mann wanted he would move that the offer be accepted and the incident closed. There was some talk, pro and con, through which the Empire-opener smoked in silence and then came the vote, which was almost unanimous. And under this agreement the railway entered the city and is operating to this day.

When the vote was all in Don rose removed his cigar, looked the council over approvingly and uttered three simple words which, run together, sounded like one—"haveadrink?"

From the small begining made in Manitoba thirteen years ago the Canadian Northern has grown until the day of its completion from ocean to ocean is not far distant. Only a few gaps remain to be filled in in the East to make the chain complete from the Atlantic to Edmonton and beyond. Even at this writing the steel 's reaching up toward the Yellowhead Pass in the Canadian Rockies. Even at this moment the Premier of the Province of British Columbia is being returned to Victoria, which he left of his own accord, to see if the voters would approve of his railway policy, which means nothing more nor less than the fulfilment of a contract made with Mr. Mann to guarantee interest on the bonds to provide funds for the extension of the Canadian Northern to the coast, to give Vancouver and Victoria additional transportation facilities and competition, of which the coast country is in great need. One of the main reasons for guaranteeing the bonds is that the wheat from the Middle West must reach Liverpool via the Pacific Ocean and through the Panama Canal. The Canadian Northern needs to build only a little over 700 miles to take them to tidewater at Vancouver, already called the 'Frisco of Canada. This line will be completed within the next two or three years. Winnipeg is almost as near to the Pacific as it is to the Atlantic Ocean, and there are a thousand miles of wheatland west of Winnipeg. By the northern route through the Rockies, Mr. Mann proposes to reach tide water in the west on an almost level line. If he succeeds in finding a grade which shall not exceed four-tenths of one per cent., rising only 21 feet to the mile, his locomotives will be able to handle nearly one hundred thousand bushels of wheat per train, greatly facilitating the movement of the crops and reducing the rate materially.

The coming of the Canadian Northern to Manitoba reduced the rate on wheat from Brandon to the Lakes from 24 cents to 15 cents per 100 lbs. Here is a saving of 9 cents per hundred to the farmer. Naturally, there was a corresponding reduction throughout the Provinces. The rate from Edmonton is the same to-day

This year Minnesota, the greatest wheat State in the Union, yielded 16.5 bushels of wheat per acre. The total crop amounted to 94,562,000 bushels. The Province of Saskatchewan gave 19.4 to the acre. From 3,912,497 acres the farmers of this new province took 84,098,000 bushels of the best wheat in the world. Such is the story of the tall-grass country into which Don Mann's horses strayed more than 20 years ago. Few great enterprises have gone forward in the development of the Dominion in which Don Mann had no hand. His name is writ in large letters across the face of this Last West.

And now from building railways Mackenzie and Mann are to start building ships—not Dreadnoughts,—but great ocean liners to carry people to and from the Orient, to take wheat to the rice-eaters and bring back rice to the wheateaters, to couple up Canada and Australia, to forge yet another link in the chain that binds the far-flung and scattered states to the great Isle that guards the Empire.

Naturally many interesting anecdotes are told of this man who was hunting horses not so many years ago. Even now he is only begining to display a few iron-gray hairs. One of the best he told, quite as a matter of fact, to a party of friends in his car.

Two young women were scheduled to read papers on the rearing of children in connection with a mothers' meeting, their husbands being left at home to put the two children to bed. They lived in adjoining apartments.

The young women attended the meeting, read the papers and after the discussion on the care of infants adjourned to the home of a friend for refreshments. When they reached home at 11:30 the two husbands had joined forces and were frantically pacing the floor, each carrying a shrieking baby.

Stevenson Bad Speller.

One of the most polished and painstaking of English authors regarded correct spelling as a totally unnecessary accomplishment. In his introduction to R. L. Stevenson's letters, Sidney Colvin writes: "I have not held myself bound to reproduce all the author's minor eccentricities of spelling and the like. As all his friends are aware, to spell in a quite accurate and grown-up manner was a thing which this master of English letters was never able to learn."

THE WORLD'S RICHEST PEOPLE--THE OSAGE INDIANS

IF A POET of the Osage Indian Nation in Oklahoma should, in pitying mood, indite such a line as, "Lo, the poor Paleface!" he would be perfectly within bounds, for, no matter what nationalities or communities of Caucasians should take exception, they would be poor compared with this particular tribe of Indians.

Every one of the 1600 of them—man, woman and child—is worth $8610 in land and cash, and has a comfortable income besides. The words "every one" are used advisedly, for all the worldly goods of these people are held in common. Yet their possessions, reinforced by a present capitalization of their income, make every one of the tribe worth, it is estimated, about $50,000.

Their wealth at hand consists principally of $8,000,000 in cash held by the government and 1,500,000 acres of land, most of which they lease for grazing at a good rental.

The average per capita wealth of residents of the United States is about $1400; for the whole world, only about $10. Here is a tribe of Indians worth per capita almost a thousand times as much as the average citizen of the world!

TWO pictures of the Osages have been painted by writers who have visited them—the one depicting them as uncivilized and unsusceptible to civilizing influences; the other presenting them as owners of fine homes, with modern conveniences, anxious to improve their condition and sending their children to Eastern colleges.

As a matter of fact, a visitor to the Osage country could find both these types, and it is a question of which is in the majority.

It was through the sale of their land in Kansas several years ago that the Osages were started on the highway to their great wealth. For this land they received a sum total of $8,000,000, which the government has since held for them in trust, paying to them quarterly the interest, amounting annually to $400,000, or $222 for each man, woman and child.

Of the 1,500,000 acres of land which they have retained, they lease 800,000 acres for grazing, at an annual rental of $120,000, which, added to the interest on their money at

Much Wealthier than They Look

Chief Black Dog—A Magnate

Washington, makes a revenue of a little more than $[illegible] for each man, woman and child, or over $1600 a year for each family of five or more. One family of fifteen, for instance, receives $4500 a year without having to do a [illegible]

[illegible] an acre—a small valuation for land in that section—the Osage grounds are worth $7,500,000, or $41[illegible] per capita. This, added to the $4464 in cash, makes a total of $8610 owned by each individual; and those who [illegible] can grow constantly richer from the increment.

The fact that their revenue enables them to live in idleness has resulted in abuses in some quarters; intoxication is said to be on the increase, and many of the Indians are described as having retrograded to primeval conditions.

The wildest of the Osages live in the southwestern part of their domain, where they are said to closely observe all the ancient customs of their forefathers, such as burning their dead at the stake, going almost naked in summer, and eating dog.

An instance of their adherence to ancient custom was the election of a chief some time ago—a ceremony hardly to be reconciled with one's conception of the richest people on earth.

In the centre of a circle of tepees was a large fire. A fire dance and a tomahawk dance preceded the election. Then the voters were "tried by fire"; that is, a burning stick was held in front of each, and if the flames burned straight he was yet in the good graces of the Great Spirit, but if they flickered he was commanded to leave the medicine lodge. With painted faces and almost naked, the men danced until midnight. They joined hands and circled about singing:

> Our Father, make our new chief;
> Oh, make him a wise man;
> Let us live happy
> And have many feasts.

At the dog feast which followed the election no one dared refuse to eat; and two white men who were there out of curiosity were compelled to eat dog, too.

Thirty years ago, when their tribal form of government was organized, the Osages were the most powerful Indians in the West, but smallpox cut down their number two-thirds. Then they moved into a reservation south of Kansas, and have remained there peaceable since.

Their organization was effected by a wise chief, Claremore. There are a chief, assistant chief, secretary, treasurer and thirty councilmen. The chief is elected every four years, and he appoints the others.

The people live in little villages—some of them in segregated tepees, as their forefathers did [illegible]. For the advantages offered by a nearby civilization they have little use. Barring some degenerate exceptions, they adhere to the simple life-teachings of their aged chiefs.

The annual W.M.S. convention of the Methodist church will be held in Hastings on Thursday, May 19th.

The death occurred on Friday morning one of Norwood's most respected young citizens, in the person of Miss Cora L. Drain, youngest daughter of Mrs. J. Drain, Ridge street. The deceased was eighteen years of age, and until her serious illness about three months ago, attended the High school here. She leaves to mourn her loss three sisters and four brothers, namely, Minnie and Sina, who are living at home; Mrs. Darling, of Dummer; Clarence, at home; Wellington, of Dummer; John, of Stoney Lake, and David, at home. The funeral, which was held on Sunday afternoon, was largely attended, the Methodist Sunday school scholars marching in a body to the cemetery. The pall bearers were:—Messrs. H. Keefer, A. Dufffield, R. Nicoll, F. Kempt, A. Hathorne and Gordon Kidd. Among the many floral tributes was a beautiful wreath from the High school.

A serious fire occurred on Friday afternoon of last week, when the farm dwelling house belonging to Mr. Richard Heffernan, of Asphodel, was totally destroyed. Mr. Heffernan was unaware of the fire until apprised of it by one of his neighbors, and the fire had got such headway that very little of the contents of the house were saved. The dwelling was a frame structure, which burned very quickly. Mr. Heffernan will be a heavy loser, as his loss was only partially covered by insurance. The fire originated around the chimney. The property was formerly the estate of the late Jas. Harrison, who was drowned some years ago in the Trent river.

ILLICIT STILL FOUND TWO ARRESTS MADE TO-DAY

High County Constable Cochrane today made an important arrest when he took into custody two men, Nat. Pearson and Richard Bell, who are charged with operating an illicit still. The local department of Inland Revenue became aware of the operations some time ago and the authorities have been working on the case. Part of the still was found at the repair shop of Lewis Spry, Stewart street, and this eventually led to the arrest of the two men.

The case will be heard before Magistrate Dumble, probably in the early part of next week. Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon have been acting for the department of the Minister of Justice.

KING EDWARD'S REPLY TO ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS

The following is the cable of loyalty which the Bishops of the First Plenary Council sent to the late King last year, and the answer of King Edward, which is so highly praised by the Catholic hierarchy:—

His Majesty King Edward VII., London:

The Apostolic Delegate and the Catholic Archbishops and Bishops of Canada, in Plenary Council assembled in the city of Quebec, desire to convey to Your Majesty the expression of their own loyalty and that of all your other Catholic subjects in the Dominion, as well as their grateful appreciation of the religious and civil liberty which they enjoy under your gracious rule. All pray that your reign may be long and peaceful.

MGR. SBARRETTI,
Apostolic Delegate.

The following was received in reply:—

Mgr. Sbarretti, Apostolic Delegate, Quebec, Que.:

I thank Your Excellency and the Archbishops and Bishops associated with you for your telegram of loyalty, which is in all the best traditions of the Church of which you are the hierarchy and of the Dominion, where you are assembled. It is my constant desire that religious and civil liberty should always be enjoyed by my subjects in all parts of the Empire.

TAKES OVER "OAK ORCHARD"

Mr. Perry Alexander Will Open This Beautiful Resort This Season

A deal was consummated last week whereby Perry Alexander takes over the property on Gannon's Narrows, known as "Oak Orchard." This is undoubtedly the most beautiful spot on the Kawartha Lakes, having nearly a mile of frontage and over 65 acres of sturdy oak and pine trees.

Situated at the end of Gannon's Narrows bridge, it makes a pleasant motor run or drive from town of about sixteen miles. The roads in that vicinity are excellent.

Mr. Alexander has been asked by various interests to open "Oak Orchard" to the summer tourists, as the accommodation in that section is limited. It is an ideal spot for families to spend the summer months and very accessable either from Bobcaygeon or Peterborough. The fishing is unrivalled. There is none better than the "Narrows bass" which many an angler can testify.

The old-fashioned homestead is being renovated and undoubtedly "Oak Orchard" will grow into popular favor with our American tourists and Canadian visitors to the lakes.

TO PROTECT THE HOME FACTORIES

Binder Twine Firms Would Like Tariff Duty Put on American Twine

Ottawa, May 9.—Strong representations are being made to the Dominion Government to induce it to put a tariff duty upon binder twine. The Canadian companies at Welland, Brantford, Peterborough and other places, it is said, contend that the International Harvester Company is importing and selling binder twine at cost, or a trifle less.

Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P. for West Peterborough, had an interview to-day with the Minister of Customs, and representatives of other concerns have been here in conference with the Government. They claim that the International Harvester Company are now supplying about 85 per cent. of the binder twine sold in Canada, and the company can afford to treat this product as a side line, selling it virtually at cost.

No definite assurance has as yet been received from the Government.

LIQUOR LICENSE WITHDRAWN

Special to the Review.

Toronto, May 11.—The Provincial License Department, for the first time in its history, has refused to renew the wholesale liquor license of Turner & Co., convicted in the police court of sending liquor to a "blind pig" at Cochrane, in Northern Ontario, labelled unfermented wine. This is new Government policy.

AN OLD SUBJECT OF THE CROWN

Mr. Robert Hope, who is probably one of the oldest men in Otonabee, if not the oldest, has seen many changes in Canada, and incidentally in British history. Mr. Hope, who was born in 1812, has served as a loyal British subject under George III., George IV., William IV., Victoria, Edward VII., and now under King George V.

Very few people in the British Empire can claim such a record, and it is earnestly hoped that this old veteran may still continue in good health to serve the new British Sovereign, of whose Empire he feels so justly proud.

APSLEY

Special to the Review.

Apsley, May 10.—The drive of logs has passed through our village and the logs are en route some distance south. The drive this year has made good progress, there being very few jams of logs on the creek.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Mrs. Abner Windsor.

A number of our people who have been suffering from severe attacks of la grippe are able to be out again.

Mr. Thomas Wilson, of Exeter, who has been visiting friends in and around the village for the past week, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, Burleigh, are rejoicing over the birth of a daughter.

Mr. Jack Tucker and family, proprietors of the Wilson House for some time, have removed back to their farm in Anstruther. Mr. Benjamin Coones and family, of Burleigh, have taken possession of the house vacated. Mr. Coones will no doubt give good satisfaction, as he has become quite popular by his honorable and upright character in other lines of business in dealing with the public.

Mr. Michael Kennedy was calling on friends in the village last week.

Mr. Richard Lees, I.P.S., made an official visit through this part of the country recently. While in the village he held an educational meeting for the purpose of trying to organize a continuation class and have a school built for their use. Other school questions were also discussed.

Friday was observed as Arbor Day in the schools for the purpose of cleaning up the school grounds, planting trees, making flower beds, etc.

The cheese factory began operations on Monday last, and the rattling of milk cans is once more prevalent.

MOUNT PLEASANT

Mount Pleasant, May 10.—The services in the Presbyterian church here will commence at 7 p.m. during the next seven months, instead of 2 p.m.

Mount Pleasant Baseball Club have organized a team for the coming season. They have secured a nice tract of land and intend to practice at regular intervals, in order to prepare for the season's games.

The branch of the Bible Society intend holding their annual meeting without the services of an agent, in order to save expense to the society. They depend on the local minister to fill the place of a regular agent.

Mr. T. Boyd intends building a new house this coming summer.

Mr. Percy Stewart is busy completing arrangements for the erection of a new barn.

Marine underwriters have offered a reward for the location of the wrecked car ferry Bessemer No. 2, in Lake Erie.

Robert Patterson has been nominated by MacLeod farmers for the Alberta Legislature and he has no party affiliations.

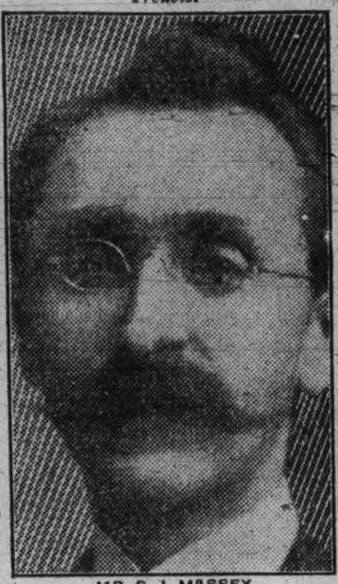
Moro pirates attacked a settlement in the Celebes and killed a number of traders and natives.

STOMACH INDIGESTION.

Pe-ru-na Strikes at the Root of the Trouble.



MR. S. J. MASSEY.

Mr. S. J. Massey, formerly a resident of Toronto, and a well-known business man, writes from 247 Guy street, Montreal, Quebec:

"I wish to testify to the good results I have derived from the use of Peruna.

"Having been troubled for several years with catarrh of the head, I decided to give Peruna a fair trial and I can truly say I have received great benefit from its use. It evidently strikes at the very root of the trouble and good results are soon noticeable.

"I have also found Peruna a very valuable remedy for stomach trouble and indigestion.

"I have no hesitancy whatever in recommending Peruna as a reliable catarrh remedy."

There are several kinds of indigestion. The trouble may be due to sluggishness of the liver, derangements of the bowels, enlargement of the pancreas, or it may be due to the stomach itself.

In nearly all cases of stomach indigestion catarrh of the stomach is the cause. The only permanent relief is to remove the catarrh.

Peruna has become well-known the world over as a remedy in such cases.

MILLBROOK NEWS

Special to the Review.

Millbrook, May 10.—A heavy rainstorm visited town on Monday, May 2nd. Residents of the town and surrounding country say it was the heaviest rain they have had in years. It succeeded in washing out a bridge on the main street, damaging it to the extent of two hundred dollars.

Dr. Turner has purchased a new automobile with a seating capacity of five. He intends using it in connection with his practice, which is an extensive one.

The Millbrook Lodge of Oddfellows attended service in the Presbyterian church on Sunday last. They were given a stirring address by their chaplain, Rev. W. Johnston. Mr. Mulligan, of Peterborough, sang two solos, which were well rendered. The wet day prevented a great many members from outside points being present. After the service the brethren repaired to the lodge rooms, where hearty thanks were extended to Rev. Mr. Johnston for his address; to the officers of the church for the privilege of worshipping therein; also to Mr. Gillett and Mr. G. S. Thorne, for the beautiful boquets sent in for the occasion.

Mr. Dinwoody, of Thorold, is down for the fishing season, the guest of neice, Mrs. C. Needler.

Mr. R. T. Adams was in Toronto last week representing the Millbrook grocers at the annual meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association. He was also present at the conference of the retail and wholesale grocers held at the King Edward Hotel.

Mr. J. H. McGill, of Centreville, sold a high priced team of horses to Mr. Williamson last week.

Reeve Kelly, of Cavan, claims the record this spring for a crop of lambs, having 46 lambs from 23 ewes, all alive and well.

Mrs. J. E. Needham received word last week of the death of her brother, Mr. C. Windrem, of Beaconsfield, Man., at the age of 76 years. Deceased was formerly a resident of Franklin.

Mrs. (Dr.) Martin, of Toronto, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Allen, of Millbrook.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the council room on Thursday. A very interesting paper on "Discouragements" was read by Mrs. Fred. Smith.

Mr. Wm. Needler, of Lindsay, was the guest of his brother, Mr. Geo. Needler, of Millbrook last Sunday remaining over Monday for the trout fishing.

Miss Reid, of Peterborough, is temporarily replacing Miss Sharpe at the telephone office, Miss Sharpe having been on the sick list of late.

Mr. Wm. Eakins left Monday for the west, where he intends to locate some land, with a view to settling there. Mrs. Eakins and Masters Harry and Jack, will remain with her father, Mr. Mulligan, for the summer.

Mrs. Deyell, Mrs. Steele and Mrs. (Rev.) Johnston are in Toronto this week attending the women's meeting of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Wm. Leith shipped a carload of horses to Toronto on Saturday.

Mr. C. Needler, of Millbrook, claims the record for large trout this season. He landed one weighing over three pounds the other day.

A concert was given by the Girls' Auxiliary of St. Thomas' Anglican church in the town hall, on Tuesday night. It consisted of a play, entitled "Miss Fearless & Co." It was brimful of wit and humor and was well acted. Mrs. Martin, Mrs. T. A. Campbell's mother as an old maid, was a decided success. Miss Baker handled a difficult part equally well. Miss C. McBride as an Irish girl, acted splendidly. The other performers consisted of Lila Clarke, Eva Clarke, Laura Croker, Helen Needler and Miss Fains, who all deserve great credit for their acting. There was a full house.

Mr. Charles Kingan, of Peterborough, was the guest of Mrs. A. T. Armstrong over Sunday.

FRANK HILL

Special to the Review.

Frank Hill, May 10.—Now that the weather is a little finer the farmers have renewed their spring work.

Mr. Frederick, stonemason, of Peterborough, has commenced work for Geo. Boate. Mr. Boate is building a very handsome house.

Mr. Arthur Franks has his stone wall built and is ready for the carpenter, Mr. Geo. Moore, who is at present at Mr. Geo. Franks.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lowes and Mr. and Mrs. Fred McBain were visitors to Mr. John Lowes on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Deyell, of Fowlers' Corners, were visiting Mr. James Franks on Sunday last.

Miss Clara Hickey was visiting Miss Maggie Franks last Thursday.

Mr. Penny McConnell and Mr. Bert McCarrol with their fair young belles, attended the shredded wheat banquet. They report a swell time.

The many friends of Mr. Perrit are very pleased to see him wearing a pleasant smile those days. On Saturday evening last the stork paid him a visit and on his departure left a bundle behind him, 'twas a baby boy.

Mr. N. Edmison, who resides near Peterborough, was the guest of one of Bethel's most popular young ladies, Miss Olive Switzer, Sunday last.

CAVANVILLE NEWS

Cavanville, May 10.—The Cavanville Young Men's Club met on Tuesday evening and wound up the business of the season. The club have had a very good season. They have had two oyster suppers and one basket social during the winter, all of which were well patronized. A grant of money was made to the baseball team to furnish them with supplies, etc., and the balance of the money in the treasury was placed in the bank to be used next fall when the club reopens. There are about fifty-four members altogether.

The Cavanville cheese factory commenced operations on Monday. The milk receipts have been light all week, but a steady increase from now on is looked for. The factory is under the management of Mr. Madill, of Fraserville.

Mr. J. Morton, butcher of Cavanville, has completed preparations for the season's business, which is an extensive one. He has one delivery waggon already on the road.

Mr. Lattimer, of Carmel, preached in Cavanville on Sunday night in the absence of Rev. Mr. Clarry, who was conducting quarterly services at Carmel church.

Loyal True Blue Meeting

Loyal True Blue Lodge, No. 277, met in the L.O.L. hall, Simcoe street, last evening.

Several applications for membership were presented.

In respect to the memory of the late King the meeting was not continued further than was really necessary.

POLITICS HAD MUCH TO DO WITH THE KING'S DEMISE

Physicians in Official Report Declare That the Unsettled State of Affairs in Britain Must be Considered as an Important Factor in the Causes of the Late King's Illness.

London, May 12.—Parliament paid a tribute to the memory of King Edward yesterday, adopting addresses of condolence and congratulations to the new King. Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons, and the Earl of Crewe, in the House of Lords, delivered eulogies on Edward VII., and both showed great emotion.

The day was chiefly devoted to recording the nation's official condolences to the royal family. King George and the Queen Mother received at Marlborough House and Buckingham Palace, respectively, deputations from the Lords and Commons, bearing the resolutions.

Numbers of beautiful wreaths are arriving at the palace, but, at the Queen Mother's special request, all flowers will be sent to Windsor Castle. The funeral will be of military character, and it is considered that carrying wreaths in procession would be incongruous.

Among the numerous functions abandoned or indefinitely postponed owing to the King's death, is the royal military tournament.

That King Edward's death was partly due to worry over the political situation is officially declared in a statement regarding his illness, which his physicians, Sir Francis Laking, Sir James Reid, and Sir Richard Douglas Powell, are publishing over their signatures in The Lancet to-day.

The statement says: "His Majesty had for some years suffered from emphysemt with attendant bronchial catarrh; signs of which were permanently present at the bases of the lungs. On several occasions digestive disturbances had caused his medical attendants to realize that His Majesty no longer had the reserve constitutional power which had stood him in such splendid stead after his serious operation in 1902, and that any intercurrent catarrhal of bronchitic attack of a serious kind would at once call upon both heart and lungs for their fullest effort.

"It must be here said that those around him knew how earnestly concerned he was at the present strained position of political affairs, and this fact should not be lost sight of in an all-round consideration of the King's health."

Parliament met yesterday afternoon to pay a national tribute to King Edward and to welcome his successor, King George.

A message from the monarch, in which he announced the death of his father and his own succession, was read in both Houses, which subsequently adopted addresses of condolence and congratulations to the new King.

The royal message was received in the House of Commons with solemnity, the members standing uncovered as it was read.

Upon a motion by Premier Asquith, seconded by A. J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, the House of Commons adopted unanimously an address to be presented to King George, in which His Majesty was assured of the heartfelt sympathy of the lower chamber in his grievous affliction, and in which also were expressed the congratulations of the House upon his accession.

The Premier then moved an expression of the House's condolence to the Queen Mother, Alexandra, on the irreparable loss which she had sustained, and assuring her that the House of Commons and the nation would ever preserve towards her sentiments of unalterable reverence and affection.

While he was speaking, Mr. Asquith was obviously deeply affected. When he expressed the sympathy which the House felt for the Queen Mother, he all but broke down.

Destructive Fire.

Sherbrooke, Que., May 12.—Fire destroyed the sash and door factory belonging to T. V. Reed, of North Hatley, yesterday morning. Aid was summoned from Sherbrooke, as there was danger of the fire spreading to dwelling houses. About 75,000 feet of lumber was destroyed besides buildings. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Drunk In Charge of Train.

St. John, N.B., May 12.—Engineer Wm. Johnson and Fireman Roy Craigie of Woodstock, N.B., have been arrested charged with being intoxicated while in charge of a freight locomotive. Their condition was discovered by a brakeman who found that the train was running wild.

KING GEORGE THE FIFTH

CONTRACT LET FOR "MISSING LINK"

Campbellford, May 12.—The contract for No. 6 section of the Trent Valley Canal has been let to the Bishop Construction Co. of Montreal and Toronto. This contract takes in the section of about four miles from Crowe Bay to Healy Falls, the "missing link" of navigation from Campbellford to Georgian Bay.

Another Railroad Line.

Soo, May 12.—The O'Boyle Construction Co. is awarded the contract for the construction of a 31-mile railroad from Hawk Lake to Hobon, which will connect the C.P.R. and A.C.R. Thus direct connection along the A.C.R. main line to Winnipeg can be secured.

EXTENDING THE SERVICE

London, May 12.—Referring to the cheapening of press telegrams to India, South Africa and Australia, Sir J. Barry announced at the meeting of the Eastern Telegraph Co. that as the result of arrangements with a news agency, 150,000 additional words of imperial news will be distributed by way of Aden.

No Explosion on Flagship.

Dover, Eng., May 12.—The flagship London, of the British Atlantic battleship fleet on which an explosion was reported to have occurred, arrived here last night.

Rumors yesterday of a fatal explosion on board are without foundation.

MAY NEED CONNAUGHT

Duke May Have to Stay Till the Prince is Older.

London, May 12.—The position in regard to the Governor-Generalship may be taken to be as follows. In fact King Edward expressed the wish that the Duke of Connaught should be the next Governor-General, but no appointment then or since has been made. The question of Earl Grey's successor has, up to the present, not been officially considered. The demise of the crown, however, may render the fulfillment of his late Majesty's wishes difficult.

At any rate the question is still unsettled, and will not be further discussed until the arrival of the duke in London. He is now coming home from East Africa.

In this connection it is suggested that concerning the appointment the fact must be taken into consideration that the presence of the duke in England may be deemed necessary until the Duke of Cornwall, the King's eldest son, is able to take part in high ceremonials of state.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Several heavy earthquakes have been felt in Costa Rica.

Commander Stewart, R.N., has been appointed to the command of the cruiser Rainbow.

Prof. T. B. Kilpatrick of Knox College addressed the New England Peace Congress yesterday.

Hon. Wm. Templeman is preparing a bill to provide for a Government test and examination of explosives.

The head of King George will not appear on the coins or postage stamps of Canada before the end of the year.

Mr. Silas Udell's seven-year-old daughter was fatally burned near Flesherton while starting a fire with coal oil.

There has been another rising in Hunan and the lives of missionaries and of native Christians are said to be in danger.

The Atlantic Transport liner Minnehaha has been released from where she went ashore on Bishop's Rock, Scilly Islands.

The council of the Montreal Board of Trade passed a resolution opposing reciprocal trade arrangements with the United States.

The Festival of Empire, which was to have been held in London this summer, has been postponed until 1911, owing to the King's death.

It develops that by general oversight B. W. Murray, accountant of the Supreme Court of Ontario since 1876, never took the oath of allegiance to the late King Edward.

Rev. Father Ruest, parish priest of Salmon River district, Nova Scotia, while in the act of cleaning a rifle yesterday afternoon, which he thought was unloaded, was shot and killed by the unexpected discharge of the weapon.

RESIGNED FROM HOSPITAL BOARD

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 12.—The City Council held a special session to pass a resolution of regret at King Edward's death. An illuminated resolution will be forwarded to King George.

After four years' service as a member of the general hospital board, Dr. Wilson yesterday tendered his resignation.

GRAMPIAN OFF SAND POINT

Montreal, May 12.—The Allan line Grampian, which grounded at Cap a la Roche Tuesday while on her way up the St. Lawrence, arrived in port yesterday morning, and is making water in holds Nos. 1 and 2. This will necessitate her going into dry dock.

The accident was due to the pilot losing his bearings for a few minutes during a squall and rainfall.

American Women Sympathize.

Atlantic City, N.J., May 12.—A resolution expressing the sorrow of the 5,000 women of the Daughters of the Revolution, because of the death of King Edward, was adopted at the final business session of the convention yesterday. A letter of condolence was also sent to Queen Alexandra, carrying the sympathy of American women in her bereavement.

REVIEWS GERMAN TROOPS

Berlin, May 12.—Col. Roosevelt, in the company of Emperor William, yesterday witnessed a mimic battle in which 12,000 men of the German military engaged in the vicinity of Doeberitz. His Majesty and Col. Roosevelt rode over the manoeuvring field of some twenty square miles and observed the working out of the army problem.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

COMMITTED SUICIDE NEAR BRAMPTON

Brampton, May 12.—J. K. Leslie, clerk of the third division court of the County of Peel, was found dead in the station at Terra Cotta Tuesday night.

Besides the body, which was lying in a pool of blood and was still warm, was a seven-chambered revolver, two chambers empty. Deceased, who was about 66 years of age, was a grain buyer in Caledon, and did a large business. He has been acting strangely of late and did not return to his home after attending the Peel Assizes in Brampton last week. This caused his relatives to make enquiries about him, but nothing was learned of his whereabouts until the body was found.

Coroner Lawson of Brampton decided to hold an inquest over the remains. The evidence will be taken on Monday next at Terra Cotta. Mr. Leslie leaves a widow but no family.

TROUBLE IN JEWRY

Montreal, May 12.—For two days now the Hebrew community has been minus any meat because the slaughterers have gone on a strike. There has been grave suspicion that some of the meat denominated as kosher was not what it seemed. A mass meeting of Jews will be held to investigate and demand explanation from the duly appointed slaughterers.

WOULD JOIN OUR MILITIA

Ottawa, May 12.—Andrew Belton, an Englishman, 28 years old, who commanded 42,000 Moroccan troops, and, through putting the present Sultan of Morocco on the throne, earned the title of "Kaid," or commander-in-chief, is here seeking a position on the Canadian forces. He fought through the South African war.

NEWSPAPER MAN DEAD

London, May 12.—Malcolm Graveme Bremner, for many years editor of The London Free Press, died suddenly at his home here yesterday. He was at the office writing editorials Tuesday night. Yesterday morning he was found dead in bed. Mr. Bremner, who was born in Newfoundland, in 1847, came to London in 1856. He was a practical printer and joined the reporting staff of The Free Press in 1865. In sixty years The Free Press has had but two editors-in-chief, J. P. Blackburn and Malcolm G. Bremner.

CRUELTY OF A YOUNG BOY

Ottawa, May 12.—A young lad was taken into the police station yesterday charged with a particularly heartless bit of cruelty. It was learned that he had placed a lighted firecracker down another young boy's back, and the explosion had so injured the boy that he was conveyed to the Protestant Hospital in great agony.

The perpetrator of the act was released on bail until Thursday, when he will be tried in the juvenile court.

Two Poisoned.

Ottawa, May 12.—At Rockingham, in Brudenell Township, Mrs. Kinder and Joseph E. Kinder, her son, aged respectively 75 and 30, took doses of what they supposed was Epsom salts, and died. The father bought it from a store in Ottawa, and it is thought some poison was given in mistake. The bottle has been sent to Toronto for analysis and an enquiry will be held.

Ideal Conditions In Alberta.

Calgary, May 12.—The report of the Government meteorological station here shows that the precipitation of Tuesday was .38 inches, which, with continuance of ideal weather conditions of yesterday must rapidly free the growing crops.

Picked up Live Wire.

Halifax, May 12.—John Ross, a Glace Bay miner, met a tragic death at No. 3 colliery yesterday. While on his way home he picked up a live wire and received a severe shock, dying instantly. He was 17 years of age.

GETS THREE WEEKS FOR MINING FRAUD

Montreal, May 12.—Charles Cresser, arrested a couple of weeks ago on a charge of fraudulently appropriating $10,000 worth of mining shares, was yesterday sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment, to date from the time of his arrest.

Roosevelt to Be Representative.

Washington, May 12.—Theodore Roosevelt yesterday accepted by cable the appointment by President Taft to be special ambassador to represent the United States at the funeral of King Edward in London on May 20.

Everything Is Lovely.

Belleville, May 12.—All difficulties have been overcome. The grand lodge will meet here as per arrangement, and the use of the armories as a place of meeting will be granted.

ARCHIE M'LACHLAN ON TRIAL ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER

Triple Tragedy in Which Foul Play is Alleged is Gone Over Again at Whitby—Crown's Contention is That it is a Deliberate Case of Poisoning and Arson on the Part of the Accused.

Whitby, May 12.—Is it natural that a man should forget in which bedroom his wife and two children were sleeping, after escaping from a burning house, with an infant in his arms? Is it natural for him to stay around while the firemen and neighbors were fighting the flames and make no effort to assist, even after it has been called to his attention that his "loved ones" may be perishing within? Is it natural that he should make no move toward removing the dead bodies when they have finally been located?

These are circumstances brought out yesterday in the trial of Archie McLachlan, charged with the murder of his wife and two little sons, Harold and Gordon, at Uxbridge about midnight Oct. 29 last.

The presence of strychnine in the woman's stomach is another suspicious circumstance, and on this point the crown will receive expert medical testimony from Dr. Arthur Jukes Johnston, chief coroner, Toronto, and Prof. Ellis of the provincial analysts' department.

The court room was packed yesterday when Justice Teetzel ascended to the bench. At the request of counsel for the defence, all witnesses were excluded. McLachlan, who looked pale and the lines of whose face was tensely drawn, took a keen interest in the proceedings and conferred with his lawyer several times during the selection of the jury.

Mr. Blackstock concluded his outline of the case to the jury by appealing for a fair trial for the prisoner. "But," he went on, "a fair trial is not hunting around by weak men to see if they can get rid of an unpleasant duty. If a crime has been committed, then it is the duty of everyone concerned to see that the perpetrator is brought to justice."

Mr. Blackstock outlined the case to the jury in an hour's address. After telling of McLachlan's marriage nine years ago, his family of two boys, aged three and four, and girl aged five, his employment at Uxbridge as bookkeeper for a year, and his discharge, to take effect the day the fire occurred, Mr. Blackstock told of the tragedy.

"People coming home from a party saw smoke coming from the house," said the counsel. "They shouted loud enough for anyone in the house to hear them, and when they went to the door the prisoner came out wheeling the little girl in a baby carriage. He did not pay any attention to them, but wheeled the carriage over to the fence. The neighbors asked him where his wife was, but he didn't answer them. They tried in vain to get from him any kind of knowledge as to where his wife and children were.

"The prisoner was asked for some explanation of this disaster. He said he found his wife up and little girl ill. He was looking after the girl. Now it will be shown to you she was not ill. The prisoner was fully dressed, with the exception of shoe laces untied."

The crown believed the woman was dead, but that, had McLachlan given any assistance, the children might have been saved, for the cry of a child had been heard.

"The household was not a happy one," said Mr. Blackstock, "and the responsibility for this rests entirely on the prisoner. The woman was an industrious, sweet-natured kindly woman. He, however, neglected her."

He referred to McLachlan's friendship for Miss Alma Nix, an attachment of which he had openly boasted. Letters had passed between them, and Miss Nix had written that she did not want to come between him and his wife. Evidence would be presented to show that McLachlan had wanted her to elope.

"Mrs. Watson, a relative, will tell you that apparently to annoy his wife he would refer to Miss Nix as his girl or sweetheart. At that time his wife treated this as a fit of bad manners, but the prisoner had formed a strong regard for that woman," said Mr. Blackstock.

Indications in the house were that something on the floor had been burning, not the floor itself. Pillars had been found which gave traces of coal oil. It should have been easy to rescue the woman from a shed roof close to the window. The bodies of the two boys were found beneath the bed. The wife, however, apparently had never moved. There was no sign of struggle, but the clothes on the bed were pulled up around her and her hands were folded on her breast.

The prisoner had been making remarks about town that he feared he might be poisoned, yet had bought strychnine the day before the fire, and strychnine had been found in the woman's stomach. McLachlan, it would be shown, had been talking, too, to friends that his wife might commit suicide, as she was a melancholy woman.

The jury is composed of: Charles Brown, W. Hepburn, Ed. Acton, J. F. H. Davis, M. Vipond, Geo. Burnett, E. Webber, D. McLean, Chas. Adams, Walter Annis, Chas. Chofield, and W. J. Stevenson. One man was rejected by the crown when he professed himself a Quaker.

Evidence given in the afternoon was mostly a repetition of that heard at the inquest and preliminary trial. Thomas Palmer, a bartender, said McLachlan had three or four drinks of beer and left the hotel about nine p.m. the night of the fire. On the next Sunday prisoner had said, "I wonder where I'll be next Sunday, in my grave or behind the bars." McLachlan had wished his wife and children were alive.

Dr. Walter Shier, who conducted the postmortem for the inquest, and who was the first witness last night, insisted that the death of the three victims resulted in each case from suffocation. To the crown prosecutor, George Tate Blackstock, K.C., Dr. Shier admitted last night that he did not know of the presence of strychnine in the woman's stomach at the time he made the autopsy, and that he had allowed the stomach to remain forgotten lying in a box in the undertaken's parlors over night. This is one of the points that it is believed prisoner's counsel, W. A. Henderson of Toronto, will rest his defence upon. In the preliminary trial, he hinted that the poison might have been placed in the stomach after death.

Rev. Alfred Bedford, Methodist parson of Uxbridge, testified that after the bodies were located and while they were being taken out, McLachlan, who was standing beside him, showed no emotion nor made any effort whatever towards assisting in their removal. He was positive that the fire made its first appearance in the centre of the dining-room, while others say it was at the foot of the stairs.

The prisoner's disposition at the inquest was verified by Coroner Bascom, and Mr. Blackstock read it. McLachlan said there were no difficulties between he and his wife. They certainly had not quarrelled on that day. His wife had kissed him good-night before retiring. The reason he did not attempt to rouse her when the fire woke him up was because he heard no sound upstairs, and thought she had got out. His wife had heard the stories concerning him and a certain young lady, but did not credit them.

OBSERVATIONS ON HALLEY'S COMET

Paris, May 12.—Astronomers in France are making observations on Halley's comet that are attracting the greatest interest. Maurice Hamy of the Paris Observatory, reports that the length of the tail has increased from five to ten degrees in three days. Prof. Deslandres of the University of Dijon finds a re-appearance in the spectroscope of cyanogen, the poisonous gas which was observed in January and February, but which disappeared in March. In his report he says that the hypothesis that the gas is liable to affect the terrestial atmosphere would not be at all absurd.

On the other hand, Camille Flammiron thinks that the tail of the comet is simply an optical phenomenon, produced by the flight through ether, similar to the wake of a ship at sea.

M. Marchaand maintains that the comet shows important variations from its predicted orbit, which pressage unexpected surprises.

Inquest to be Resumed

The Baillie inquest will be resumed at the County Council Chamber tomorrow night at eight o'clock.

L'Evenement Urges the Formation of a Third Party.

Montreal, May 12—L'Evenement, the one French Conservative daily in the province, commences a series of articles demanding the formation of a new party, composed of all races and creeds, to rid the country of the party in power.

The article intimates that the present Opposition has failed to live up to the compact of 1854, and that such men as Hon. Geo. E. Foster have spoiled the patriotic efforts of Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Mackenzie Bowell. "In fact," adds L'Evenement, "the cup is running over, and the one thing left us to do is to organize separately and march towards that future which our traditions impose. By this we do not wish to form a French-Canadian party, as we have no intention of isolating ourselves in the Confederation. We suggest the reunion under the same flag of men of all races, nationalities and religions who desire that the present regime shall end because it is dishonoring and ruining us."

FOUND GUILTY OF STABBING COMPATRIOT

Toronto, May 12—Guiseppe Sampia, an Italian, was found guilty in the sessions yesterday, before Judge Winchester, of stabbing with intent to maim, Donnato Pansene, on May 2 last, at Elm and Chestnut streets. Pansene was stabbed twice on the left arm and once in the left breast. When giving evidence Pansene said there had been no quarrel. The prisoner was very drunk. Pansene left his house and the prisoner, who was standing on the corner, quarrelling with somebody, asked where he was going. "I am going about my business," Pansene replied. Then Sampia attacked him.

Sampia claimed he did not do the stabbing. He said Pansene invited him to fight and they went at it with fists. He was knocked down several times. Then Pansene picked up a pail and struck him on the neck with it, felling him again. Then he ran away to a saloon and three or four men had followed, threatening to kill him.

COAL RESULTS

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact, and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

AMERICANS WOULD NOT TOLERATE IT

Is the Canadian sense of right and wrong in public matters less acute than that of Americans? A Chicago newspaper, referring to Mr. Fielding's acceptance of the gift of $120,000 says:—

"What would happen in this country if some one should conceive and try to realize the idea of getting up a subscription for the benefit of the Secretary of the Treasury or any other Cabinet officer? The 'roar,' the wrath and amazement of the public would beggar description—and would drive the official beneficiary of the scheme from office in 24 hours, even if he had merely given tacit consent thereto."

Is this true? We believe it is. We think if the editor of the Toronto Globe, which has so strongly commended the Fielding testimonial, and other newspaper editors who have tolerated it because they think Mr. Fielding is a pleasant fellow, will seriously consider how such a thing would be received in the United States they will agree that if any American Cabinet Minister were discovered to have accepted such a tip every newspaper in the United States would make a sensation of it and public opinion would soon drive the politician from office. And will any Canadian newspaper man say the Americans would be wrong in looking at the matter in that way?

THE SINGLE TAX

The single taxers have succeeded in getting Vancouver and Edmonton to adopt their system to the extent of freeing buildings from taxation and placing all real estate taxes on land. They are pointing to the rapid growth of these cities as proof that single tax makes cities grow. Vancouver grew at a marvellous rate before it adopted this system of taxation. Its position as the Pacific terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway assures rapid growth no matter what system of taxation is adopted. It is located on one of the most magnificent harbors in the world, which is open all the year around and it is practically certain that both the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways will have terminals there as well as at the far northern port of Prince Rupert. Vancouver is the commercial metropolis of the vast Province of British Columbia with its great timber and mineral resources, its fruit lands, its ranches and its grain farms. No doubt the single taxers will claim all the credit for its wonderful growth.

Edmonton has the advantage of being the capital of Alberta. The Provincial Parliament building has been erected there and the Provincial University is in Edmonton's suburb, Strathcona, just across the river. The Canadian Pacific Railway, the Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway all run through it and for some time past it has been the construction headquarters for the lines that these railways are pushing on towards the Pacific coast. There is a splendid farming country all around it. There is coal close at hand. In short the city has every natural advantage. The single taxers will claim all the credit for everything the three great railways do for Edmonton as well as for the prestige and prosperity due to its being chosen as capital of the great Province of Alberta and seat of the Provincial University.

We would suggest that Kingston, Ont., should try the single tax system and if, after adopting it, the good old town grows as fast as Vancouver or Edmonton, the single taxers will have something to boast of.

STAY IN PETERBOROUGH COUNTY

Secretary McHugh, of the Grain Exchange, Calgary, states that fully fifty per cent. of the winter wheat has been destroyed in the southern part of Alberta as a result of the extreme dry weather this spring. A majority of the farmers who sowed fall wheat are now engaged in plowing it up and making preparations for seeding spring wheat in its stead. Mr. McHugh says that unless Southern Alberta has more rain in a few days it will practically mean the total destruction of the fall wheat.

There was a time when the difficulties of farm life in the Canadian Northwest were exaggerated and the general attitude towards that great country was one of suspicion and lack of confidence. At the present time there is danger of going to the other extreme. Farmers in Ontario are inclined to look longingly towards the prairie provinces of the Canadian west and imagine that all their troubles would be over if they could sell their Ontario farms and get into the broad new west. But farmers out there have their troubles as well as farmers here. The summers are shorter, the winter cold is more severe, there is far more danger of summer frost and sometimes there is prolonged drought. And when the crop is safely harvested it must be hauled thousands of miles by land and sea to market.

The farmer of Ontario has many advantages and he is too ready to forsake them to join in the rush to the west. To any Ontario farmer who is thinking of selling out and moving to the west we would say, "Don't." The Canadian west is a good country, but Ontario is better. The crops are more certain and the markets for farm products are nearer at hand in Ontario than in the Northwest.

Take Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, a central point in the middle west, for example. It is 1,569 miles from Peterborough. Most of the farmers who now go west from Ontario go far beyond that. To get very cheap land in the west it is necessary to go farther than that. Probably the majority of farmers from Ontario who are now taking up land in the west have to send their products over 2,000 miles to ocean vessels at Montreal, when they wish to ship them to the British market. It costs a good deal to transport food for two thousand miles. The distance from Peterborough to Montreal is only 262 miles. Thus the farmers of Peterborough county have an immense advantage over the far western farmers in shipping grain, cheese, butter, eggs, poultry and meat to the British market. They have the still greater advantage of being near to the manufacturing towns of old Canada, whose people consume large quantities of everything the farmer produces.

A city the size of Peterborough is considered a place of great importance in any of the western provinces. Winnipeg is, of course, much larger than Peterborough, but there is no other city in Manitoba nearly as large as Peterborough. The vast province of Saskatchewan has not one city as populous as Peterborough. Calgary and Edmonton in Alberta are both somewhat larger than Peterborough, but no other town in that Province has as great a population. In British Columbia two cities surpass Peterborough in population, Vancouver and Victoria. Good farm land close to any city of the west having as large a population as Peterborough is very expensive. Farmers who take up land at a considerable distance from any town have no local market.

All these facts should be taken into consideration by farmers who think of abandoning comfortable homes in Peterborough county to undergo the hardships of pioneer life in the far Northwest.

TUNNEL OR BRIDGE?

Sir Robert Perks Thinks the Former Would Be Better at Quebec.

The question as to whether the ill-fated Quebec bridge should be replaced by a tunnel instead of by another overhead structure was discussed by Sir Robert Perks, Bart., in an interview with The Standard.

In view of the fact that tenders will be called early in May for the construction of a bridge the plans of which have been strongly condemned by The Scientific American, the question is one of great public importance. There are few men more competent than Sir Robert Perks to pronounce on the relative merits of bridge versus tunnel, for the firm of which he is the head has carried out some of the greatest engineering works of modern times, including the Manchester Ship Canal and the famous Severn Tunnel. His firm also prepared the plans for the now defunct scheme of building the Channel Tunnel between England and France, which scheme was killed by the War Office; while the firm is now completing the first tunnel through the Andes, to connect Argentina and Chile by railway.

"The proposal to construct a tunnel instead of the proposed Quebec bridge is a perfectly feasible one," said Sir Robert recently, "and undoubtedly in the long run a tunnel would prove far more satisfactory. The St. Lawrence River at that point is no wider than the Severn River at the point where we constructed the Severn Tunnel. That tunnel connecting England with South Wales, under what is really the Bristol Channel, is, with its approaches, about eight miles long, and took four years to build.

"I take it that a tunnel and approaches for the St. Lawrence River would have to be about the same length. One of the great difficulties to be encountered, however, in replacing the bridge by a tunnel, is the fact that the railways which would make use of it have all been built on the high level, and the grades would have to be changed for tremendous distances.

"As to the question of cost, the bridge would cost, I should say, $12,500,000, and you can safely put the cost of a tunnel at three times the cost of a bridge. The Severn Tunnel cost $25,000,000."

"How does the cost of maintenance compare?" Sir Robert was asked.

"The maintenance of a tunnel is very much less than the maintenance of a bridge," he replied. "With a bridge there is a very large annual sum to be spent for maintenance, and then you have to consider that a bridge shows continual deterioration. With a tunnel, these conditions apply to a much more modified extent, so that in the long run a tunnel is cheaper and more satisfactory than an enormous bridge of this kind. Another consideration is that while a bridge may possibly prove too low for the huge ships of the future to pass under, a tunnel offers no possibility of interfering with river traffic."

Asked how deep the tunnel would have to be below the bed of the river, Sir Robert replied that twenty feet would be ample.

Red River Funerals.

A funeral service in the early days on the Red River was usually conducted at the house of the deceased and, as a rule, only those attended who had received personal invitations. Either before or after the service refreshments were served to all present. The funeral service was lengthy and always included a long sermon, which is still the practice in many parts of the country. Hearses were unknown, and to have carried the coffin to the grave in any kind of a vehicle would have been considered as a mark of disrespect to the memory of the departed. The shrouded coffin was, therefore, borne on a bier by four men who every few minutes were relieved by another four, and so on until the grave was reached. It is related that on the death of Hugh Ross, a Hudson Bay factor, his body was carried in this manner for more than eighteen miles, from Little Britain to St. John's. The journey took a whole day. At noon the party halted where a cart containing provisions met them. Here they had dinner, after which they resumed their slow march, reaching the place of burial just as evening was coming on.

And thus the early Selkirk settlers lived and passed away, leaving their children to till the Red River farms and extend the bounds of the little settlement, to establish which Lord Selkirk gave the best years of his life and the greater part of his fortune. It came through many vicissitudes and it survived many dangers; and although it again saw dark days during the brief reign of anarchy under Riel in 1869-70, it outlived them all, and finally expanded into the Province of Manitoba. That Canada today has a Great West is in some measure due to the fact that the banks of the Red River had the Selkirk settlers.

Twelve Million Telephones.

It is reported that there are now in this country 12,000,000 telephones, or one for every two houses in the country. This does not mean that one-half of the residences in the country contain an instrument, since many business houses have a large number, but the figures are instructive and illuminating. Practically everybody who is anybody in the cities or towns and villages has a telephone, while those in the country districts are legion. The astonishing fact is that each of these phones is used on an average of six times a day. The total number of calls in a year runs up into the billions, and it is not appreciable by the human mind.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 11.—(Special.)—Altho ocean freight space for cattle from the Port of Montreal has probably never been offered so cheap for the months of May and June, and prices for cattle never so high as at present in the Liverpool and London markets at the opening of a Canadian export season, yet there seems to be little disposition on the part of American and Canadian exporters to do much business. The Manchester boat, which sailed last week, went out without any cattle, and the agents of other lines will only carry them on the main decks as at the rates being obtained it would not pay them to put up fittings on the spar decks. There is no change in rates to note, Liverpool, London and Glasgow space being offered freely at 20s per head. According to advices just received from the northwest there will be no ranch cattle for export until the grassers are ready to move, which will not be much before the middle of June. One of the leading live stock exporters has purchased within the past day or two 2000 head of distillery fed cattle. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning offerings were 650 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 1700 calves. Demand was fair and top quality steers were made at 7c, and the lower grades from that down to 5¾c per lb. Cows brought from 4½c to 5½c, and bulls from 5c to 6c per pound. Hog prices showed no actual advance. A fair number met with a good demand, at $10 to $10.25, and in one or two cases as high as $10.50. An active trade was done in calves, owing to large receipts and prices ruled low, sales being from $2.50 to $6 each. The demand for spring lambs was good at $4 to $8 each, and old sheep brought from 4½c to 6c per pound. At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the supply consisted of 300 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 2100 calves. The market for hogs was firm. Calves were plentiful, at from $2 to $5 each. Cattle were firm and prices unchanged.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

Kinross grinned behind his newspaper and settled himself to enjoy the conversation. He was finding Georgiana very diverting.

Eunice looked up from her book, her dark eyes dreamy and absent.

"Sensitive to beauty even to the point of feeling out of harmony with our environment if we are not tastefully dressed," Georgiana went on. "And so," she ended gracefully, laying the gown she held across Eunice's lap, "I want to give you this pretty white gown."

Eunice's eyes grew wide with a questioning surprise. "You want to give it to me?" she asked wonderingly. "But why?"

Kinross, from behind his newspaper, found himself listening intently to hear what Eunice would say.

"Because I feel," Georgiana smiled encouragingly, "that even so trifling a thing as our clothes can help us to get into right relations with life."

The girl's puzzled gaze seemed trying to make it out. But before she could reply Ollie leaned forward and, eagerly examining the embroidery and ruffles on the pretty dress lying across Eunice's lap, asked with undisguised covetousness, "Did you wear it fur nice or just fur so?"

"Oh, I wore it for 'nice,'" Georgiana smiled.

"Eunice she never did think at the cloes much like what I do," Ollie added insinuatingly.

"That is perhaps commendable to a certain point," said Georgiana gently. "But one should give just enough attention to outward adornments to let it express something of the inner life. The refinement of our thoughts and feelings or the lack of it is often symbolized by our dress. We should cultivate our natural inclinations for external harmonies—it is not right to be indifferent to them—they are a legitimate part of life."

She had addressed herself to Eunice, and the girl, still looking puzzled, answered uncertainly. "But when the lack of harmony with one's environment is fundamental mere external adjustment can't help things."

Georgiana looked nonplused. Daisy, fumbling the pages of a book she was not reading, dropped her lower lip in astonishment. Dr. Kinross put down his paper from before his face and took his pipe from his mouth. Even Ollie's face expressed surprise.

"We need not ever let our environment rule us," said Georgiana, looking as though she had lost her bearings, but making an effort to recover herself.

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul.

"And the great English poet Robert Browning," she continued instructively, "called environment 'machinery, just meant to give thy life its bent.' Emerson's whole gospel is man's spiritual mastery of circumstance. I am aware that most of us are slaves to it. But we can rise to a plane where instead of letting it control us we control it. Otherwise we go through life missing the true beauty, the perfect harmony of the universe. I feel sure that you can find that harmony if you will keep your mind open to it. For instance," she said, with a perfunctory playfulness, "begin by putting on this white gown—in which I feel you will give those about you a genuine aesthetic pleasure—and even help to educate them to a fine taste in the small things of life."

"I suppose you mean to do me a kindness," Eunice answered, her eyes downcast, "and so I thank you. But it would humiliate me to be a recipient of charity. I find more of the 'harmony' which you seem to value so highly in clothing myself only in these clothes which I myself have earned rather than in—other people's things, however beautiful they may be."

She gathered up the white gown as she spoke and laid it on Georgiana's lap.

Kinross saw that Georgiana in her chagrin at the girl's failure to appreciate her generous patronage almost lost sight of the astonishing language she had used.

"If that is the way you feel," she answered, "very well. I beg your pardon if I have offended. I did not mean to. The fact is I have misunderstood. I did not know that"— She broke off incoherently, unable to express herself in her new and confused impression of the farm girl.

"Stung again!" exclaimed Daisy.

"Please, Daisy!" protested Georgiana.

"But, indeed, Georgie," pleaded Daisy, "I can't blame Eunice for thinking it isn't worth while to wear glad rags out here when no one would see her anyway."

"That isn't the point at all," returned Georgiana, looking distressed.

"Are you givin' it back?" Ollie here demanded of Eunice incredulously. "Och, what makes you act so dumm? Mebbe," she said, turning to Georgiana, "it would fit me—if you don't want it."

"You are too stout and too short for it," Georgiana answered a little distantly. "It isn't that I want to get rid of the gown. I thought merely to encourage Eunice."

"Encourage me?" repeated Eunice, again puzzled.

"But I see that I was mistaken," she said hastily.

She half turned her back with a movement that closed the conversation. Eunice's eyes fell to her book again, and for a time no one spoke, though Ollie's look of disgust at the loss of the proffered gown was louder than words.

Kinross replaced his pipe in his mouth and drew on it vigorously. This girl, Eunice—the sort of language she used, the ideas she expressed—talking about the want of harmony with her environment being "fundamental!"

"For an unschooled Pennsylvania Dutch girl of the backwoods"—but his reflection was checked by a whispered remark from Daisy at his side.

"Imagine that yard of pump water, Ollie, in one of Georgiana's gowns! She looks as though she weighed 250 Fahrenheit!"

"Do you mean avoirdupois?"

"Now, Pete, you needn't be so smart!" she retorted resentfully. "What if I do mean avoirdupois? Oh, dear," she sighed, "I never seem to be cocksure of a fact. I almost wish I were clever instead of pretty."

"Now, if you was Georgie," he remarked, "you'd be both; ain't?"

"Peter," Daisy gently reproved him, "I wouldn't be shocked if you called me Daisy. (Sweet name, isn't it?) But to permit yourself the liberty of calling Miss Ellery 'Georgie'—that's the limit! So you think," she added, "that she's both clever and beautiful? And she thinks you, Peter," she confided to him, "have a latent fineness concealed somewhere about you"—

"A whatever?"

Daisy's answer was arrested by Georgiana's rising from the window sill and sitting down beside her on the front door step. Georgiana had evidently quite recovered her not easily disturbed equanimity.

"What are you reading?" she inquired of Daisy in the tone of gentle patronage she always used to her cousin and for which Daisy appeared humbly grateful. "Or, I should say, what is that book you are not reading? One of those that father made you pack?"

"Yes," sighed Daisy, "this one is to equip me for our European tour next summer. I'm on Switzerland now. It's perfectly dear!" she said, with perfunctory enthusiasm. "The author has so many pretty thoughts about the scenery."

Georgiana smiled indulgently. "Do you know, Daisy, what book you and I ought to have brought with us to read in this setting—with this background?" she asked, waving her hand abroad to indicate the farm at large.

"Imagine that yard of pump water in one of Georgiana's gowns!"

"Which?" inquired Daisy respectfully. "Please to break it to me gently, Georgiana."

"Izaak Walton's 'Compleat Angler.' It is remarkable that such an unpretentious work as 'The Compleat Angler' should have lived since the seventeenth century and be so very much alive still."

"Wait! I'd better make a note of that," said Daisy, gathering up her book and pencil.

"It lives," Georgiana went on thoughtfully, "because it so vividly exhales on every page nature's true message. Why, if anything could make me want to go a-fishing, Izaak Walton's picture of its delights would tempt me. And the famous passage about the worm—in which he recommends anglers to be merciful to it"—

"The worm?" It was Eunice's soft voice that spoke impulsively. "It was not to the worm, but to the frog that Izaak Walton recommended anglers to be merciful, wasn't it? 'Use him as though you loved him; that is, harm him as little as you may possibly that he may live the longer,'" she quoted.

Kinross leaned forward in his chair, his elbow on his knee, his chin on his hand. The two young ladies stared at the girl as though unable to credit the evidence of their ears.

"You have read 'The Compleat Angler?'" Georgiana's astonished tones inquired.

"Many times," the girl answered, then suddenly colored and shrank back a little. "I—have seen it—yes."

"You have seen it to some purpose since you are able to quote it so accurately."

Eunice looked down at the Bible on her knee and did not answer.

"But, Eunice, where did you get the book?" asked Georgiana.

"I—came by it—once."

"And you read it many times?" she persisted.

Eunice glanced up with a faint smile. "Not so much for its didactic instructions about fishing, but for the anecdotes scattered through it, the quotations and songs and poems."

"You have the book in the house?" asked Georgiana.

The girl looked uncomfortable. "I have not read it for more than a year," she said with evident evasion.

"If you are fond of reading—and of such reading—we shall be glad to let you have some of our books," said Georgiana in a tone of encouragement to struggling rural ambition.

"Offer her 'Some Facts About the Great Back Boned Family,'" advised Daisy earnestly. "It's so fearfully uninteresting that I'm sure it must be very instructive and beneficial."

"Thank you," Eunice replied. "But," she added, with an uneasy glance at Ollie, "I never have time to read except on Sunday, and Mr. Morningstar would not allow me to read anything but the Bible then."

"But I am so glad to find," said Georgiana graciously, "that when you do have an opportunity to read good literature you take advantage of it and that you read so appreciatively."

"I am glad to be a source of such happiness to you," said Eunice, speaking with a faint unconscious touch of irony that suddenly brought the color to Georgiana's cheeks. Eunice herself looked as though she scarcely understood the vague discomfort which possessed her under the almost affectionate patronage of Miss Ellery.

The sound of a step on the porch—which evidently announced the expected arrival of Ollie's "regular comp'ny"—led Eunice to quickly close her Bible and rise to go away.

But she was stopped on the threshold.

CHAPTER X.

EUNICE was about to pass Ollie's steady comp'ny with a nod, but the young man stopped directly in her way, and, holding out his hand with a shy awkwardness, flushed deeply as he looked at her.

"Och!" exclaimed Ollie, turning in her chair to welcome him, but not rising, "but I'm glad you're here oncet! I'm so tired listenin' to the big words they're spittin' at each other here—yes, even Eunice yet! I didn't know Eunice could speak such high language! She ain't never done it around us still."

"Nor around me, neither—I'd like, too, to hear her oncet," replied the young man, his bashful tones only just audible and his face and neck self consciously red as he retained Eunice's hand so that she could not pass on and looked at her with an ardor in his gaze that appeared quite irrelevant in view of the general understanding that he came to "set up" with Ollie. "Won't you stay settin' on the porch, Eunice?" he nervously begged the girl.

Eunice looked at him in surprise. To ask her to commit a breach like that, to violate the social code that no third person must be present at a Sunday night "setting up"—was he wandering in his wits? She tried to withdraw her hand, but could not—he held it tight—with Ollie, Dr. Kinross and the young ladies all looking on!

"This is the first time I have saw you—since I begun to come Sundays," he said with evidently gigantic effort to conquer his embarrassment at the acknowledgment he was making in Ollie's very presence. "Where was you at Sunday nights still when I come over?"

"Where was she at?" spoke up Ollie boisterously. "Out on the back porch settin'—with our Abe. That's where she'll be tonight, too, I guess, if mom didn't jaw her so fur it!"

"With Abe!" repeated Ollie's ostensible "friend" in a consternation that forgot the presence of others. "Her and Abe!"

Eunice dragged her fingers from his clasp and turned away before he could recover from the evident shock of Ollie's communication.

The three boarders, realizing that they were de trop, also rose and went away. Ollie and the young man were left in solitary possession of the field for the evening's campaign.

"How many dupes are there in this friendshaft, I wonder!" Kinross said to himself as he strolled out into the garden, his pulse bounding with a strange excitement. "The young ladies think I'm a country lout. Ollie thinks the young man, Hen Mucklehenny, comes to 'set up' with her when evidently he is fatally smitten with Eunice (let him lay low if Abe discovers it). As for me, have I, too, been a dupe about that girl, Eunice? Is she a disguised college professor or 'whatever,' as her conversation this evening might suggest? Her diction is certainly not the everyday tongue of the Morningstars. How the dickens does it happen?"

But too many circumstances—the Morningstars' selfish treatment of her, Abe's infatuation, her slavish work—these and other things rebutted the theory that she was anything else than what she pretended to be. How, then, account for that astonishing little revelation of herself this evening? He turned it over in every conceivable way, but could arrive at no conclusion concerning her. He decided that he must certainly make an opportunity for talking with her and investigate her thoroughly.

Meantime Hen Mucklehenny's hesitation in taking advantage of the clear field left to him and his slowness to seat himself in the rocker at Ollie's side were attributed by her to his well known bashfulness. It was thus that she had interpreted also his lack of ardor on every Sunday night that he had been with her. No amount of encouragement on her part had availed to warm him up to the sort of love making considered in that locality an essential preface to matrimony.

"Hen," began Ollie, when at last they were rocking monotonously side by side in their big wooden rockers on the porch, "you ain't got no need to trouble to make so polite to our Eunice, seein' she ain't my right sister that way. It makes me no difference if she likes you or if she don't, her bein' only 'dopted and not our own flesh and blood. It wouldn't unplease me if you didn't make over her any."

"But," began Hen uneasily, "I didn't make polite to her just fur to please you, Ollie—not just to say fur that exactly; I"— He stopped helplessly, looking distraught.

Ollie was slow to grasp a new idea. All she saw just now was that her bashful lover was more embarrassed than usual. "That's all right, Hen," she reassured him—quite irrelevantly the uncomfortable fellow thought.

They rocked in silence for a while. Pennsylvania Dutch courtships are wont to be punctuated by long periods of sepulchral silence. Hen's countenance, instead of expressing the ecstacies of a lover in the fair presence of his lady, looked as if he were sitting in a dentist's chair under the ordeal of an exposed nerve.

"Hen," said Ollie presently in a tone of heavy import, "I want to speak somepin to you."

Hen fidgeted and waited to hear it.

"If you wasn't keepin' comp'ny with me, Hen, do you know what I'd near up and do?"

"But that needn't hold you back, Ollie, from nothin', fur I ain't just to say"—

Hen floundered again and was silent.

"I'd take and go to town and hire out fur a girl. Pop he holds me so close at home to the work and won't leave me go none—and if I was hired I could mebbe go more'n I kin so. They anyhow kin have off in the evenings still—hired girls in town kin."

"You needn't mind me, Ollie," Hen hastened to reassure her; "you just go if you want."

But Ollie shook her head. "I thought at it, but I couldn't make my mind up to leave you, Hen."

Hen looked miserable.

"Or if I didn't hire out I thought at going to a factory. In a factory you kin set all the time—and if there's one thing I love to do it's settin'. And pop he has cross if ever he sees me settin'. To be sure, Sally Schnabel, she disheartened me fur hirin' out. She hired there fur a while in town at such a boardin' house where there was twenty-two comers and goers and she says she had to work wonderful hard. She says at home on the farm she had only six to cook and wash fur—and twenty-two towards six—that's a difference, too—ain't?"

"Yes, anyhow," Hen dully acquiesced.

"And Sally she sayed them towners they wanted a hired girl to be a fool fur 'em—to run in a room when they rung a bell like as if she was a dog and to hand 'em things round the table instead of doin' their own stretchin'. Them ways I wouldn't take to so good."

"I guess," Hen agreed.

"And Sally she sayed the missus wouldn't leave her have her reg'lar comp'ny come and set up with her—she tole Sally she didn't want no strange man comin' to her house. And Sally she tole her pretty quick, 'He ain't no strange man,' she says. 'I wouldn't go with no strange man. He's my reg'lar comp'ny.' Now, think, Hen! Accusin' Sally of travelin' with a strange man!"

"To think anyhow!" said Hen.

"But a body could go to the rooft garden now and agin if you was hired in town. Oncet Abe he took me to such a theater play at the rooft garden and if it wasn't grand yet! A man come on the stage named Mr. Montgomery. He was the willain. Now, if he wasn't somepin fierce! Honest to goodness, Hen, he was the worst man I ever seen!"

"Now!" exclaimed Hen with forced sympathy.

"But, then, to be sure, if I was in town stayin' me and you us we couldn't keep comp'ny Sunday evenings."

Hen's gloom deepened to despair.

"Ain't, Hen?" Ollie tried to rouse him to some ardor.

The fact was the girl was weary of her bondage to her father's mercenariness and longed for the freedom from it that marriage would give her, especially marriage with one so well fixed as Hen Mucklehenny, and she was hoping by this suggestion of going to town to stir her lover into some alarm at the thought of losing her and thus precipitate their betrothal and marriage. True, he had been coming to see her only a few months, but where was the use of indefinite delay?

"Ain't, Hen, it would be some lonesome fur you if I went off?" she urged.

Again Hen squirmed in his chair, but he made no answer.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause. Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute.

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT AMENDMENT BILL

Meeting in the Council Chamber on May 26th to Discuss It—Mr. A. B. Parker Here to Make Arrangements

Mr. Arthur B. Farmer, formerly secretary of the Toronto Single Tax Association, was in Peterborough yesterday to arrange for a meeting to discuss the proposed amendment to to the Assessment Act. He arranged for a public meeting to take place in the council chamber on the evening of May 26th at which to a Review reporter Mr. Farmer said:

"In view of the fact that a public meeting is to be held next week to discuss a proposed amendment to the Ontario Assessment Act, to allow municipalities to place a lower tax rate on buildings and improvements than on land value, your readers may be interested to know something of the progress of the Single Tax movement, so called, and of the individuals who are urging the adoption of the proposed amendment.

"It must be understood that the Fripp Bill, as it is called from Mr. Fripp, of Ottawa, who introduced it at the last session of the Legislature, is not the Single Tax. It is merely a measure giving municipal councils power to move in the direction of Single Tax. The adoption of the Single Tax would involve the immediate removal of all taxes except on land values alone, and it is very doubtful if many voters would wish to mak so radical a change all at once. But there are few who would oppose a measure of relief to the man of enterprise who wishes to build or improve his property, by placing a somewhat lower rate on improvements than on land values.

"In New Zealand, back nearly twenty years ago, a similar measure was adopted. Some sixty or more municipalities have taken advantage of it to the extent of abolishing taxes on improvements altogether, and the figures show that these municipalities are more prosperous, and have grown much more rapidly than those that have retained the old system. No municipality has yet gone back to the old system after trying the new.

"A somewhat soimilar measure is in force in New South Wales, with similar results.

"In British Columbia a similar measure was adopted ten years or more ago. Vancouver took advantage of it, by reducing the assessment on buildings and improvements to 50 per cent. A few years later, the assessment was reduced to 25 per cent, and this spring the council removed the final 25 per cent, so that to-day any man can make his home or place of business as attractive as he likes without fear of the tax collector. And apparently they do, for last year's building operations in Vancouver amounted to $92 per capita of population—fifty per cent more than Winnipeg's or Toronto's, and almost three times as much as Montreal's.

"Edmonton is another Canadian city that has abolished the tax on buildings, and Edmonton's building operations were last year almost equal to those of Vancouver.

"In Ontario Toronto has been the centre of activity in the agitation for reform of the tax laws. Some years ago a proposal was put to a vote of the electors that the council should ask for power to exempt $700 on the value of every house, and carried by an overwhelming majority. The council, however, declined to act at the time, but later unanimously endorsed the same principle when they petitioned the Legislature for the powers provided in the Fripp Bill. Other cites and towns followed, and at the present time over two hundred and seventy municipalities have petitioned for the measure.

"On the 31st of May a convention will be called in Toronto of delegates from the various municipalities to form a Provincial organization to promote the bill, and it is hoped that at the next session of the Legislature the bill will be passed.

"This question of taxation has been the main issue in the recent elections in Great Britain. And it is interesting to know that the man who first suggested this policy to Mr. David Lloyd George is the same man who is paying the expenses of the speakers here next week, Mr. Coulter and Mr. Newton.

"Joseph Fels is the maker of the well-known Naptha Soap. He is reputed to be a millionaire, and he says he made most of his money by taking advantage of unjust laws. Now he wants to set those laws right. He says he is not a philanthropist. He is merely doing what he wants to do, and is enjoying himself thoroughly. He is said to be giving upwards of $100,000 a year to the Single Tax movement in various parts of the world, his contributions assisting whereever there is a local movement to relieve industry from taxation and place the burden on land and franchise values."

"At the meeting in Peterborough Mr. F. E. Coulter, Secretary of the Ontario Single Tax Association, will explain the proposed bill to amend the Assessment Act, and Mr. Cyrus B. Newton, of California, will tell the results of a similar measure in New Zealand."

GEO. BALL GETS THE CONTRACT

For Firemen's Suits—Meeting of Fire, Water and Light Committee

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council met last night. There were present, Chairman Ald. Morgan, and Aldermen Graham, Metheral, Buller and Batten.

Mr. Came asked that a water pipe opposite his property, corner Aylmer and Wolfe streets, be removed. This will be referred to the Board of Works.

Changes having been made by the city solicitor in the proposed five years' agreement with the Bell Telephone Company for the maintenance of two fire alarm circuits, the draft form in its amended condition was read and found satisfactory to the committee.

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the chairman and Fire Chief Howard interview the Bell Company regarding the matter.—Carried.

FIREMEN'S UNIFORMS.

The following tenders for firemen's uniforms were received:—

O. J. Snyder	$354 00
George Ball	$308 65
Ed. Huff	$368 00

Ald. Metheral moved, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the tender of Mr. Geo. Ball be accepted, and that the chairman and fire chief see that the workmanship and material is up to the specifications.—Carried.

The Otonabee Power Company's request to erect additional poles was referred to the city engineer to report.

ADDITIONAL HYDRANTS.

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that two hydrants, Re'd, between London and Smith streets, be furnished.

The request for a hydrant on Sophia street, between Burnham and Mark streets, was laid over for investigation.

CHEMICAL ENGINE.

The proposition from the Brantford Fire Engine Company to supply a chemical engine was received.

NEW COLLARS AND TUGS.

Ald. Morgan reported that he had ordered a much needed new set of collars and tugs for the fire hall. The bretchens and lines also need renewing.

The chairman was authorized to order a new set of harness complete.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Buller, that Mr. Mein's account of $62.93, for laying brick, furnishing sand, mortar, coloring, etc., for the fire hall extension be paid.—Carried.

TO MOVE LIGHT.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the Peterborough Light and Power Company be requested to move the light on Hunter street at the bridge, six feet west of the new siding, and put the light in the centre of the street.—Carried.

The firemen asked that the perquisites that they sometimes get from large fires be left in their own hands, instead of those on the committee. The men have been in the habit of vesting such monies in a benefit fund to meet any possible contingency that may arise. The firemen have now $40 or $50 in the treasury.

The chief favored the men's request on the grounds that in case of an accident the cash would be available for aid to the afflicted.

The committee thought this fund should remain where it is, in the chairman's hands.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBT. CAMPBELL.

Word was received in the city this morning of the death of Mrs. Robert Campbell, of Campbellford, yesterday. The deceased, who was well known in this city, was the widow of the late Robert Campbell, who predeceased her twenty years ago. The late Mrs. Campbell was born in County Cavan, Ireland, 87 years ago and after coming to this country resided in the township of Cavan for a number of years. Two brothers, Messrs. Wm. Fair, of Millbrook, and George Fair, of Blaine, Michigan, survive. The sons are Messrs. John Campbell, of North Monaghan; William Campbell, of Campbellcroft, and the daughters Mrs. McMurtry, of Dakota; Mrs. George Patterson, Port Hope; Mrs. (Rev.) Hanna, Midland; Mrs. R. H. Wood and Miss Maria Campbell. The late Mrs. Campbell was the mother of the late Geo. Campbell, who represented East Durham for acouple of terms. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at two o'clock to the Union cemetery, Port Hope.

ORVILLE AUSBIN GRIFFIN.

The death took place yesterday afternoon of Orville Ausbin Griffin, the five-year-old son of Frederick Griffin, 474 Park street. Deceased was only a short time ill with pneumonia. The funeral took place this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery at 3 o'clock.

Louis Liew, a New York Jew, was sentenced at Winnipeg to five years for trafficking in white slaves.

OLD TIME DOCTOR SPEAKS PLAINLY TO THE PUBLIC

A friend, searching among some old papers left by his father, brings to the Review a small hand bill, which was issued by Dr. J. Allanby, who practised in Lindsay in the forties—over sixty years ago. He found that taking pay in cordwood and turnips was not likely a sure road to accumulating wealth, and grew tired of the practice. Then he exploded in the fly sheet, which is reprinted below. The attention of the medical profession in general, in this commercial age, is called to the offer that Dr. Allanby guarantees in 99 instances out of 100, to accomplish a cure or take no payment. It would be absolutely refreshing if the medical profession these days had the same confidence in their prescriptions and advice. It is also cheerful to contemplate that all are to be treated alike—that is both professionally and with regard to payment.

PUBLIC NOTICE, AND Medical Circular Extraordinary.

Partly to save the people disappointment and himself trouble, The Subscriber takes this means of having it well understood in Lindsay and surrounding country, that he has given up the more laborious part of the practice of the profession, such as night-visiting, or journeying to any accident or case of sudden illness—except on some very extraordinary occasion, at a time when he may feel in health to attend and can be furnished with a comfortable conveyance—and has determined to limit his business to the surgery and immediate vicinity, and on no other principle but cash at the time. In justice, however, to those old friends and patrons who have placed implicit confidence in his judgment and mode of doing business more or less during the 16 years he has been practicing in Lindsay, and who have paid him cheerfully and thankfully once a year, also persons to whom he may feel under any obligation, he begs, respectfully to say, at any time when capable of attending to them, he will be happy to make them exceptions, and still consider himself their humble servant.

All other persons, whether in silk or cotton, broadcloth or freize, will please conform to this new mode of doing business, or please to apply elsewhere.

Although following in Canada every branch of the profession more than a quarter of a century, and of course consulting and communicating with scores of the so-called regular faculty, he has never conformed to, and never will agree with, the rough and ready—hit or miss—unsympathising—smilingly flattering—or plausible yet mercenary practice common in the country; on the contrary, having been initiated into the profession in England, according to Act of Imperial Parliament, more than 38 years ago, and having seen hospital, town and country practice to become familiar with the true principles as taught in universities and medical schools, and always enforced by the most eminent physicians and surgeons in Britain, he will not, at his time of life, deviate therefrom. It will, therefore, be easily understood he has no desire to take part only in the treatment of any illness, but prefers having the sole management of it from beginning to end, and, when such is the case, he guarantees, in 99 instances out of 100, to accomplish a cure or take no payment for it. Parties applying, of course, understanding that the first visit and advice, or first consultation, &c., must be cash, whatever arrangements may afterward be entered into.

Infirmities and a determination to take advantage of every leisure hour, to complete the manuscript of a long-promised medical work, partly to expose the villainous practises of upstart M.D.'s and licensed quacks—the impositions and rascalities of nostrum and patent medicine compounders and vendors—the impulsive follies, errors, superstitions, &c., of the people—and how persons of common intelligence may avoid quacking themselves or others to death, &c., &c., will keep him very near or always at home, so that invalids or others coming many miles for consultation, advice or medicine, will seldom, if ever, be disappointed.

J. ALLANBY,
Surgeon, Accoucheur, &c
Lindsay, January, 1864.

BRITISH THEATRES TO OPEN BY ORDER OF KING GEORGE

They Are Only to be Closed on the Day of King Edward's Funeral—The Order is for the Benefit of Theatre Employees

London, May 9.—King George took the first step toward winning the hearts of his people to-day when he issued an order partially relieving the stress caused by the death of his father.

Through the Lord Chamberlain he gave to the theatre managers an order stating his wish that the playhouses be reopened, except upon the day of King Edward's funeral. This step, according to the command, was taken because of the number of persons who would suffer through prolonged unemployment as the result of the closing of the houses.

This order gave fresh heart to the large classes. It had been feared that formalities would be strictly insisted on to the detriment of the country's financial interests. The order, moreover, is a clever stroke on the part of the King in approaching the people who know so little of him. They want their amusements and the Royal order will win their appreciation.

The drapers—or dry goods dealers—have suffered heavily in some lines, but nearly every yard of black goods of all kinds in London has been purchased, and rush orders have been sent to the mills. Many of the latter can take no more orders. The Continental markets are being drawn on for their mourning goods.

Mr. Creelman added that he himself was still counsel of the C.P.R., and that he had heard nothing of any intention on the part of the company to relieve him of his duties.

LINDSAY MODEL SCHOOL WILL BE DISCONTINUED

Lindsay, May 11.—At last night's special meeting of the Board of Education it was unanimously decided by the members present to discontinue the model school in Lindsay.

A communication was received and read from the Deputy Minister of Education, stating that if the board desired to continue the model school in Lindsay they must decide and advise the Department not later than May 15th. If the board decided to continue the school they would receive a grant of $500 from the Department.

Dr. White and Mr. A. Jackson strongly opposed the continuation of the school, stating that they had no teacher for the position since Mr. Broderick had resigned, also that they did not think it in the best interests of our pupils to have the modelites practicing on the children of the schools. They were simply gaining experience at the expense of our pupils, as they were sent around the different schools to teach. Mr. Jackson also stated that the class of pupils that attended the model school in Lindsay during the past few years were not up to the standard, and came from far and wide to practise on Lindsay children. "Let them go to the Normal school in Peterborough," concluded Mr. Jackson.

THE BISHOP CO. GETS CONTRACT

For Construction of No. 6 Section of the Trent Canal

Campbellford, May 11.—The contract for No. 6 section of the Trent Canal has been let to the Bishop Construction Co., of Montreal and Toronto. This contract takes in the section of about four miles from Crowe Bay and Healey Falls, the "missing link" of navigation from Campbellford to Georgian Bay. The town of Campbellford expects to be materially benefitted by the letting of this contract, as well as contracts Nos. four and five. The route of the latter, which has just been decided, means the erection of a large number of new buildings to replace those destroyed along the line.

ARE MOVING TO THE NEW ROOMS

The work of moving the furniture and other effects belonging to the T.A.S. from their former rooms to the new building on Simcoe street, commenced yesterday and is being rapidly carried on. It will take some time to have everything in regular order and any member of the society who is willing to lend an assisting hand is asked to be present at seven o'clock Monday, when their help will be much appreciated.

The Ladies' Aid of the George street church, will hold a birthday party at Mrs. Jas. Long's, 561 Reid-st., on Friday May 13th, from 4 to 7 o'clock Admission 15 cents.

PERSONAL

Miss Seaman left to-day for St. Thomas where she is visiting friends.

Mr. D. B. MacRae, late city editor of the Review, has been appointed assistant city editor of the morning edition of the Free Press, Winnipeg.

Not To-night But Friday

The members of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church will go to Springville Friday night where they will be the guests of Rev. Dr. Marsh. Busses will leave the Postoffice at 7.30 o'clock. Only members are invited.

WHAT ABOUT A MOTOR BOAT CLUB?

Should be Very Little Difficulty in Organizing a Club for This City

Now that the bright and gladsome sunshine has come back to kiss the unfolding maple buds into life, and the ripples of the river sparkle like spun gold, the time is opportune to the many motor boat enthusiasts of this city to be up and doing.

There is no reason on earth or on water, either, why Peterborough should not have a motor boat club. There are lots of boats, lots of people who know how to manage them and lots of water in the river.

The work of forming such an organization cannot be begun too soon and every man who is so lucky as to own a motor boat should join heartily to make the club a success. An organized club will double the pleasures of what is universally recognized as one of Peterborough's healthiest and most enjoyable sports, and incidentally will help to advertise the town to more than an ordinary degree.

This should be a glorious summer for motor boats on the Otonabee. Let every enthusiast get busy.

Stopped on the Track

The auto owned by Mr. G. L. Stevens had a tire punctured this morning, and came to a stop right in the middle of the Grand Trunk Railway crossing. If a train had been passing at the time a bad collision might have occurred. Mr. Noyes, the G.T.R. trainman, and a couple of by-standers assisted Mr. Stevens in shoving it off the crossing and the machine was soon in running order again.

A Case of Hard Luck

A very unfortunate man is Thomas Davidson, a cripple, who has arrived in the city to endeavor to gain a livelihood. Davidson says that in riding from Toronto to St. Louis, eight years ago, at the time of the Pan-American Exposition, he fell from a freight train and lost one arm and one leg. Since then he has had to depend entirely upon charity. He spent several months in the Emergency Hospital, Toronto.

KING EDWARD'S FAVORITE HYMN

The Toronto World says:—The Rev. Dr. Robertson, preaching at St. James' Square Presbyterian church last Sunday evening, took for his theme the late King's favorite hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," as published in W. T. Stead's collection of "Hymns That Have Helped."

Dr. Robertson dwelt on the fact that it must not be conceded that men of the world, so called, were deprived of the means of grace that were generally claimed for the exclusive appropriation of church-going people, and said that men who occupied prominent and useful positions in the world, and whose characters and virtues we admired, drank of the same wine and ate of the same bread that was partaken of by church communicants, and whose lives were nourished and made effective thereby.

He urged his hearers to take note of the exact words the King used in stating his reasons for choosing this hymn—that it was one out of many helpful hymns that "touched the heart" and inspired devotion and hope. The hymn in question was the favorite not only of the King, but also of the late Queen Victoria.

THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE IN SHORT SESSION

Tenders for Isolation Hospital will be Advertised for—Other Business

The following business was transacted at a meeting of the Property Committee at the City Hall last night;

On motion of Ald. Graham and Batten, the chairman was authorized to advertise for tenders for the Isolation Hospital.

A request from C. McClelland, was read asking the committee to secure a 27 foot steel cable for striking and bell wire for the town clock. On motion of Ald. Graham and Batten, the chairman was instructed to secure the cable.

Ald. Duncan, the chairman, reported in regard to the park at the south end of the town on Romaine street, that the stumps had been removed and the park harrowed. He suggested that it be left eight or ten weeks before further treatment. Mr. Holly was appointed to look after the small park at Charlotte and Park streets at the remuneration of $10 a season, on motion of Ald. Batten and Morgan.

The chairman's action in the expenditure of $25 for the draping of the city buildings was approved of by the committee.

INSURANCE

EVERY person should have Life Assurance and desires a good investment as well. Then patronize the Sun Life Assurance Co'y of Canada.

Limited payment and Life policies on which the Reserved Dividend period has expired have been carried at an exceedingly low insurance cost—far below that of assessment, and have yielded from 5 to 10½ per cent. compound interest on every dollar of the balance of the premium, according to the plan taken and the age of the assured.

These results show insurance at the cheapest possible cost and carry with them an investment that cannot be obtained outside of Life Assurance.

HITLETS

The Strathconas opened Nicholls Oval last evening with a practice, at which a large turnout of players was present. "Bill" Shaw knocked out the first grounder, and "Dooley" Sheridan made the first pick up. The players out were: Kendrey, Sheridan, Shaw, Hickey, B. Craig, F. Craig, Leitch, Abbott, Turner, McMillan, Lech and Curtis.

Another meeting of the City Baseball League is called for Friday night in the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock sharp.

The centre of the baseball manufactured by the Reach Co. this season is of cork and not rubber, as was the case in other years.

The players in the senior and junior series of the City School Baseball League are greatly elated these days, and parents would be amply repaid for taking an hour off in watching the youthful ball tossers enjoy themselves.

Several local merchants have informed the secretary of the City Baseball League that they will be pleased to offer a prize to be competed for by the players

Jerry Edmunds is taking his turn at the back-stop position for the Winnipeg Maroons in the Western Canada Baseball League.

Dummy Taylor allowed only two to Providence yesterday, while the Bissons knocked the Grey's twirler to the bench in the first innings.

Russel Ford held the Tigers runless, while New York gathered two.

St. Louis, Mo., May 11.—Mrs. George E. ("Rube") Waddell is in New Orleans. "Rube" is in Boston with the Browns. This is as close as Mr. and Mrs. Waddell will be for some time to come, according to Mrs. Waddell, who was Miss Margaret McGuire, of New Orleans. She has returned to the parental roof in the Crescent City.

"'Rube' is too crazy for me, I have quit him cold," is all she would say to reporters. They were married three weeks ago at the home of friends in St. Louis, and rumors of their estrangement became rife two weeks later. The first confirmation was given Monday. This is "Rube's" second "strike out" in the matrimonial league. He was umpired out of the first marriage in the St. Louis Circuit Court when he got a divorce from his wife, living in Boston.

Australian Lads Coming.

A report from D. H. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner to the Australian Commonwealth, just received at Ottawa, announces the planning of an invasion of Canada and the United States by a party of Australian school boys in 1911. The trip will be made under the auspices of the Young Australian League of Western Australia. This league, which has a membership of over 400, recently sent a party on tour throughout their own continent.

Now it is proposed to send forty to Canada next year, with a view to carrying out the purpose of the organization—to broaden the outlook on life,—still further. The cost of the trip is estimated at £50 per head, and already districts are subscribing money for boys to be nominated locally.

"The movement is spreading," says Mr. Ross's report, "and instead of the forty boys from Western Australia, it is not considered a difficult matter to arrange for 400 boys from all parts of the Commonwealth, to leave in a steamer chartered for the purpose on a trip to the most important parts of the British Empire.

"The example of the young Australians might be emulated by Canadian lads in the interchange of visits from the coastal provinces to the interior and from the prairies to the seaside."

VARICOSE ULCERS

HEALED BY ZAM-BUK

Mrs. Alex. Young, Martin's River, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes as follows:—"I feel I must acquaint you with the great benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. For years I had been troubled with varicose veins and sores on my legs, and could get nothing to heal these. The family doctor treated me, but instead of getting better the trouble seemed to get worse. I then tried various remedies, but still to no avail, and I almost gave up in despair, thinking I would never get a cure. About three months ago I heard of Zam-Buk, and what a wonderful healer it was, so I laid in a supply and gave the Zam-Buk treatment a fair trial. It surpassed my highest expectations, and only a few boxes were needed to effect a complete cure.

"Not only in my own case, but in the case of a friend of mine, to whom I recommended Zam-Buk for the same trouble, Zam-Buk has done what everything else, previously tried, failed to do. I recommend Zam-Buk very strongly and I think it should have a place in every household."

For ulcers, abscesses, eczema, chaps, salt-rheum, ringworm, blood-poisoning, chronic sores, and all other skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. It also cures piles, festering sores, and inflamed patches. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. You are warned against harmful substitutes and cheap imitations.

SMUGGLING TALES.

Stories of the Evasion of the Officers at the Boundary.

The higher a dam is raised, increasing the quantity of water held back, the greater the liability of the water to overcome the obstruction either by sweeping it away or by cutting out for itself a new channel.

A tariff is a sort of dam to the natural current of commerce which would flow in upon a country were it not held back or at least obstructed by custom-houses.

Smuggling is the leakage around the tariff dam; and as with the water, so with trade, the more that is held out the greater its effort to break through.

For example, when the duty on tobacco was considerably increased a few years ago, it was stated in the House of Commons by members representing frontier constituencies that so far as the border country was concerned, the demand for tobacco would be supplied by means of smuggling.

It would be worth while to engage in the contraband trade either to supply individual needs, or for the purpose of making a profit.

All along the frontier, but especially the frontier bordering on the States of New York and Vermont, which has been long settled and where Canadian and United States territory is separated by only an imaginary line indicated by iron posts, set by the roadside at points where the highways cross the boundary, there is wrapped up with the local history many smuggling yarns.

Some of them may be worth spinning again just for the sake of old times—for of course there is no smuggling to-day (?).

On one occasion an officer seized an American buggy, on which no duties had been paid, at a village about ten miles distant from his office.

The seizure was made in the evening, and so he decided to spend the night at the village tavern, and in the morning tow the buggy home behind his own rig. Finding no place in which he could store the buggy over night under lock and key (probably because none of the village people wished to assist him), he had to leave it in an open shed in the hotel yard; but in order to guard against recapture he secretly tied a strong cord to the rear axle of the buggy, and passed it up through the window of his bedroom.

After spending the evening in the bar-room where, according to the custom of those times, he imbibed pretty freely, he went to his room.

Just as he was about to get into bed an idea entered his rather muddled brain. He would make his buggy safe by fastening the cord around one ankle. This done, he turned in and was soon fast asleep.

The owner of the buggy knew where it was housed, and planned recapture.

During the night he came to the shed with a harnessed horse, and hitching on as quietly as possible, jumped into the vehicle and drove smartly off. The cord suddenly tightened on the sleeping officer's ankle and awakened him with a start. He was dragged out of bed, across the floor, and almost out of the window, when the cord broke.

The crown never recovered the buggy.

A few years ago there was seized at St. Johns a considerable quantity of American cigarettes and cigars. The officers rightly suspected that the goods had been brought in by a farmer whose home was in the southern part of Missisquoi county, about a couple of miles from Alburgh, Vermont.

This farmer was something of a trader, one of his occupations being the buying of fat cattle and hogs from his neighbors throughout the parish, butchering them and carrying the meat to the St. Johns market.

Occasionally he picked up a part of his load from his neighbors in Alburgh, Vt., whom he visited after sundown, and whose local market at that time was not very good.

Mingled with the meat, his load often contained large boxes of American cigarettes for which he had regular customers in St. Johns. The profit on this portion of his freight was handsome.

Italians In Canada.

The emigration authorities in Rome have been for some time studying the possibility of encouraging emigration to Canada. With this object an attempt was recently made to discover how many Italians emigrated to the Dominion. At the present time the figures relating to the total number of foreign immigrants yearly entering Canada do not afford any indication regarding the nationality.

The Canadian authorities place immigrants in two categories—English-speaking and non-English-speaking. The former average about 75 per cent. of the total. Therefore, the number of Italian immigrants is very low. A majority of the Italians bound for Canada, however, pass through the United States, and are very often included in the category of English-speaking.

So far as the Italian authorities have ascertained, between 1900 and 1909 about 57,000 Italians emigrated to Canada. By comparing these figures with those of the last census in 1901, when the Italians in Canada numbered only 10,834, proof is afforded that Italian emigration to Canada is increasing.

Manitoba Cattle Scarce.

The report of the Manitoba Department of Agriculture contains some pertinent figures on the cattle industry. Last year there were 372,520 cattle in the province; in 1908 there were 415,483 cattle, and in 1907 there were 463,862. The decline of nearly one hundred thousand head in two years in the face of a rapidly increasing population is a serious matter. There is an even more marked decline in the sheep industry. As long ago as 1893 there were 35,400 sheep in Manitoba. The numbers have steadily decreased, until in 1909 there were but 17,922. The hog industry alone seems to be thriving; the numbers have been gradually increasing, jumping from 104,113 in 1905 to 135,541 last year."

Toronto Boy for South Pole.

One of the physicists who will accompany Capt. Scott on his British expedition in search of the South Pole this year is Mr. C. S. Wright, an old Toronto boy, who has been working the last two years in Cambridge under Prof. Sir J. J. Thomson in the famous Cavendish Laboratory. Mr. Wright was educated at Upper Canada College (head boy 1904) and the University of Toronto, where he took first-class honors each years, and finally won the 1851 exhibition scholarship. He is the second son of Mr. Alfred Wright, Canadian manager of the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Co. The work of the physicists, Dr. Simpson and Mr. Wright, will comprise the usual meteorological and magnetic work, and in addition a survey of the currents and conditions in the upper atmosphere will be attempted by sending up specially constructed balloons carrying instruments for registering the temperature, and height. Work on ocean currents, atmospheric electricity, radioactivity of the sea and air, salinity of sea water and analysis of the atmosphere will also be undertaken.

Another point to which Mr. Wright intends to devote considerable attention is the investigation of the crystal structure of ice from the point of view of its age and past history. Should any simple relation be found connecting the crystal structure and the age of ice considerable light would at once be thrown upon the origin of the great ice barrier—that vast floating ice sheet, 200 feet high, 200 miles long and of unknown width, which has so long puzzled the mind of the geologist.

Where Girls Marry Quickly.

On the prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta are hundreds of settlers who are eager to secure wives from the Old Country, but who, owing to the necessity of tending their farms, have been prevented from visiting the populous centres in search of marriageable girls.

To meet this requirement, the Salvation Army Emigration Department has established a marriage bureau, and Army parties are personally conducted by an official, who, while he does not act as matchmaker, gives valuable advice on matrimonial affairs. Out of a party of fifty recently sent out to British Columbia, more than half were wedded in a little over a year. The age of the lady emigrants ranges from eighteen to forty, and they are drawn from all classes—from the factory girl to the lady with a small private income.—London Answers.

Stopping Undesirables.

Since the beginning of the year 1910 75 persons have been picked up at the frontier as undesirables, according to the report of the Ontario police. The provincial authorities claim that many of the lowest crimes committed are the work of just such people, who are ejected from other countries. Two of these undesirables were wanted by the United States authorities for murder and another for rape.

A DAIRY COW'S GOOD POINTS AND HOW TO JUDGE THEM

The following suggestions for farmers have been sent out from the office of the Dominion Dairy Commissioner:—

A dairy cow is often judged by the scale of points of the breed to which she belongs. Another method is to rate her according to her general appearance and the external indications of milking powers; appearances are sometimes deceitful. Recently a farmer near Ormstown, Que., sold five cows at $25 each, saying they were no good as dairy cows. The purchaser found, to his great satisfaction, that one gave him 10,000 lbs. milk, and another 13,000 lbs. Sometimes a cow is valued because she is easy to keep, or she is a docile family pet. Coming nearer to the practical test, a farmer may judge his best cow to be the one that daily gives a couple of pails full of milk in June; though she may quickly decrease in flow, the remembrance of that big yield sticks in her owner's mind and she is undeservedly ranked too high. Or she may have earned a wide local reputation just by one isolated test for fat, very likely higher than normal. On the other hand a cow that gives only a moderate yield, but attends strictly to business for a reasonably long milking period will probably prove the most valuable. Again there may be some general idea of production, but totals that are only estimated are generally in excess of the actual yield.

The positive proof of value is certainty of the cow's ability to produce milk and fat economically, the generous minded, unselfish, real dairy cow, independent of strikes and lockouts, works full time, and returns a handsome margin of profit above the computed cost of feed. The one infallible test is a record of the production of each cow for the full period of lactation. Don't average up the herd, ascertain that each cow is a specialist.

GOT TO THE ROOT OF HIS TROUBLE

And Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Wright's Backache

He had suffered for several years but the old Reliable Kidney Remedy gave him quick relief.

Kelvington, Sask., May 11.—(Special) —"Yes, Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Backache, and I have recommended them to others who have also been cured." These are the words of William Wright, a farmer well known here! "I believe I inherited my trouble," Mr. Wright continues. "At times for several years it was very severe. I also suffered from Lumbago, and in the morning I had a bitter taste in my mouth and was troubled with dizziness and my skin was dry and harsh, and there was a sediment in my urine.

"No treatment I could find gave me any permanent relief till finally believing that my kidneys were the root of the trouble, I determined to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Four boxes cured me."

Mr. Wright went at his trouble sensibly. He examined his symptoms, and they showed him that Kidney Disease was his trouble. Do as much for yourself, and if your symptoms point to disordered or diseased kidneys the cure is easy. Dodd's Kidney Pills will do it. They never fail.

CAVAN NEWS

Special to the Review.

Cavan, May 8.—After the recent rain the weather has been very pleasant. Farmers have finished seeding.

Housecleaning has been the order of the day, but housewives report the work about completed.

The fishing season has opened and many come from long distances to fish in Cavanville creek.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Braithwaite is quite ill.

Mrs. Harkness, of Millbrook, spent Sunday under the parental roof.

Mrs. J. Vance, of Toronto, was the guest of her father-in-law, Mr. Robt. Vance, Ida.

Mrs. W. Eyres, of Peterborough, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. E. Wood.

Miss Mabel Whitfield, teacher, Loring, South Monaghan, spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. J. Whitfield.

An Ocean King.

If any man has earned the coveted title of "Ocean King" it is Lord Pirrie, who, it is announced, has purchased the numerous undertakings controlled by the late Sir Alfred Jones, with whom he was associated for many years. By this purchase Lord Pirrie becomes the greatest captain of the shipping industry. He is not only the premier builder of giant ships, but he has shown that he has the genius to sell as well as build. At present the great firm of Harland & Wolff, of which he is the head, is building for the White Star Line the Olympic and Titanic, which will be the largest merchant steamers in the world. Lord Pirrie's interest in ocean steamship companies is enormous, but when he takes control of the two undertakings with which Sir Alfred Jones was chiefly connected, namely, the Elder-Dempster Shipping Co., Ltd., and Elders and Fyffes, he will acquire a great measure of control over a combined fleet of 245 ocean steamships owned by companies possessing a total capital of about $150,000,000.

Prince of Cartoonists.

Sir John Tenniel, the famous Punch cartoonist, reached his ninetieth birthday just recently, when he received many congratulatory visits and messages at his pleasant home in West Kensington, London, where he lives with his sister, Miss Tenniel. The great artist enjoys good health. He hardly ever misses smoking his two or three cigars a day with those of his intimate associates who are permitted to see him. He has one great sorrow—he is blind.

It was in July, 1857, that there appeared in the pages of Punch the striking pictures, the 'British Lion's Vengeance on the Bengal Tiger," which some people regard as the finest of all his cartoons, not even second to "Dropping the Pilot," the cartoon which appeared when Bismarck retired to private life. Sir John's first cartoon was drawn in 1851. In his fifty years' connection with Punch Sir John has turned out 2,500 cartoons.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

BIRTH OF AN ICEBERG.

The Dramatic Experience of Two Antarctic Explorers.

C. E. Borchgrevink, commander of the antarctic expedition of 1898, nearly lost his life by an accident of a nature so peculiar that it is probable no other man could duplicate the experience. At the foot of Mount Terror in February, 1900, he landed from his ship with Captain Jensen and three other men. Then, wishing to take a picture of the shore, he sent his boat back to the vessel to get a camera, and he and Captain Jensen were left alone on the rough beach. Before the boat returned a strange and awful thing happened. Mr. Borchgrevink told the story in the Outlook:

A roar and a rush, with tremendous explosions, shook the beach. The thought came to us that the perpendicular rocks above us were falling. Then we realized what was taking place. The mighty glacier immediately to the west of us was giving birth to an iceberg.

Millions of tons of ice plunged into the ocean. We could see nothing beyond an immense cloud of rolling snow. The water rose from the plunge of this antarctic monarch. I sang out to Jensen, "Now we shall have to face the wave!"

We rushed to the highest point of our limited beach, four feet above the sea. We saw advancing on us a dark green ridge with a white crest. I called to Jensen to struggle for dear life. We clutched the uneven rocks, with our backs toward the advancing water. Although it could not have taken more than seven minutes, the time seemed long before the water closed over our heads.

Floating upward, scrambling upon the rocks, I tore the nails from my flesh in my endeavor to keep from being dragged out. After the second wave we again felt the rocks under our feet.

At the place where Jensen and I first stood the rock was wet twenty feet above our heads. It was somewhat lower when it struck us. Where the wave had struck with full force the face of the rock had been altered, and rocks were still falling when the three men in the boat found us, bleeding and torn.

Two facts had saved us. To our right a small peninsula of ice protruded some five feet from the rock, and the rock itself bent toward the west. From the moment it struck the curve of the mountain rock to the west of us the wave took a course more easterly than where Jensen and I stood.

CLEANED OUT THE PLACE.

Alfonso's First Encounter With a Small Railway Lunch Room.

Xavier Paoli in McClure's tells of King Alfonso's first encounter with the lunch room of a small railway station. Alfonso had been out motoring and was ravenously hungry.

"Give us some lunch, please," said the king to the lady at the bar.

The refreshment room unfortunately was very meagerly supplied. When the two traveling companions had eaten up the sorry fare represented by a few eggs and sandwiches, which had probably been waiting for more than a month for a traveler to arrive, the king, whose appetite was far from being satisfied, called the barmaid, a fat and matronly Bearnaise with an upper lip adorned with a pair of thick mustachios.

"Have you nothing else to give us?" he asked.

"I have a pate de foie gras, but—it's very expensive," said the decent creature, who did not see a serious customer in this famished and dusty young man.

"Never mind; let's have it," said the king.

The woman brought her pate, which was none too fresh. But how great was her amazement when she saw the two travelers devour not only the liver, but the fat as well! The pot was emptied and scraped clean in the twinkling of an eye.

Pleased with her successful morning's trade and encouraged by the king's ebullient good humor, the barmaid sat down at the royal table and began to tell the king her family affairs, questioning him with maternal solicitude. When at last the hour of departure struck they shook hands with each other warmly.

Some time afterward the king was passing through Dax by rail, and as the train steamed into the station he said to me:

"I have an acquaintance at Dax. I'll show her to you. She is charming."

The plump Bearnaise was there more mustachioed than ever. I will not attempt to describe her comic bewilderment at recognizing her former customer in the person of the king.

Moving Pictures and Surgery.

In a description of the use of the moving picture as an aid to the study of surgery the Berliner Tageblatt says: "We looked with emotion upon the late, never to be forgotten Professor Berkmann in the fact of amputating a limb, and later there was thrown upon the screen every detail of an abdominal operation. Other operations were shown, and then the spectator saw in magnified pictures the pulsations of a frog's heart and the movement of the stomach and the digestive organs. Among the most interesting of the pictures was the series which showed the effect of various poisons on the heart action."

FIELD CROP COMPETITION

The farmers of the community are reminded of the Field Crop Competition that is being conducted by the Agricultural Society. All entries must be in by the twenty-fifth of this month and may be left either at the office of the secretary at the court house, or at the store of Mr. George Gillespie, Simcoe street. The prizes are $15, $12, $10, $8, $5 and $2.

ARE SUING FOR $2000 DAMAGES

To-day's Toronto Globe says:—Mr. Justice Britton yesterday reserved judgment in the action of the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company, of Peterborough, against the Hamilton Steel & Iron Company for $2,000 damages. The plaintiff company claimed the defendant company repudiated an agreement on an order which they had placed with them for a consignment of pig iron, while the defendant company set up the defence that the plaintiff concern did not carry out their part of the bargain.

NEW SCHEME IN WINDOW DRESSING

Mr. J. C. Edwards, of Cressman's, inaugurated a new scheme last evening, which called for more than a passing glance from the passersby. The "Evening Interior Exhibit," as it is called, is brought about by curtaining off a space back of the two main entrances to the store, and dressing and decorating in the usual artistic manner. Thus the two windows of the doors are called upon to perform another duty, and while the interior of the store is hidden from view the effect and value of the scheme is apparent to the passing throng.

DISTANCE ON THE KAWARTHA LAKES

A Table That Will Prove Interesting and Useful

Below is a useful list of distances on the Kawartha Lakes. Every motor boat enthusiast should cut it out and keep it for future use. The mileages are all authentic, having been accurately measured in the centre of the channel between the points named.

Wellington street bridge, Lindsay, to Upper Dock, Sturgeon Point, 9 miles.

Long cut, lighthouse to lighthouse, 6-10 miles.

Fenelon Falls to Rosedale bridge, 4 1-2 miles.

Bobcaygeon to Chemong, 18 1-2 miles.

Bobcaygeon to Buckhorn, 16 1-2 miles.

Buckhorn to Chemong, 13 3-4 miles.

Buckhorn to Burleigh 7 miles.

Burleigh to Crowe's via store, 9 miles.

Crowe's Landing to Young's Point, 12 miles.

Boschink to Young's Point 9 miles.

Young's Point to Juniper Island, 6 miles. Young's Point to east end Clear Lake, 4 miles.

Young's Point to Lakefield, 5 miles.

Lakefield to Peterborough 10 miles.

Peterborough to Rice Lake 21 miles.

Hastings to Trent Bridge 8 miles.

Trent Bridge to Healey's Falls, 6 3-4 miles.

Lists like the above are useful in planning trips with points to stop for meals or camp at night. One can also calculate the probable time of the trip and for those who are a little timid about starting out on exploits of such a kind, it will show that although the country may look wild and desolate they are not in reality very far from points in civilization.

WILL GO TO BEACHBURG

Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville Will Take Pastorate in that Place

To-day's Toronto World says:—The Presbytery of Peterborough convened in St. James Square church at noon yesterday, Rev. Wm. Johnston, of Millbrook, presiding. Two calls were presented and sustained. Rev. Dr. D. B. Marsh, of Springville, Ont., is called to Beachburg, Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew, at $1,100 and manse, with holidays and $50 moving expenses. Rev. James Skene, B.A., of Baltimore, is called to Havelock, Ont., in the same Presbytery, stipend $800, with manse and holidays.

Both calls will be considered at a special meeting on May 23.

Rev. James G. Potter was elected an alternate commissioner to the general assembly meeting in Halifax in June.

PROCLAMATION IN ONTARIO GAZETTE

An extra edition of the Ontario Gazette of May 10th, contains a proclamation effecting the Province of Ontario and which sets forth that all persons in office who held commissions under the late Sovereign and all functionaries who exercised any profession by virtue of any such commissions shall continue in the due exercise of their respective duties on taking the usual and customary oath of allegiance before the proper officer or officers.

WARNING

Since its introduction into Canada the sales of Parisian Sage have been phenomenal. This success has led to many imitations similar in name. Look for them; they are not the genuine. See that the girl with the Auburn hair is on every package You can always get the genuine at Wm. Madill's drug store.

Parisian Sage is the quickest acting and most efficient hair tonic in the world.

It is made to conform to Dr. Sangerbond's (of Paris) proven theory that dandruff, falling hair, baldness and scalp itch are caused by germs.

Parisian Sage kills these dandruff germs and removes all trace of dandruff in two weeks, or money back; it stops falling hair and itching scalp and prevents baldness.

And remember that baldness is caused by dandruff germs, those little hard working, persistent devils that day and night do nothing but dig into the roots of the hair and destroy its vitality.

Parisian Sage is a daintily perfumed hair dressing, not sticky or greasy, and any woman who desires luxuriant and bewitching hair can get it in two weeks by using it. 50 cents a large bottle.

The safe in A. Horden's store at Plum Coulee, Man., was blown by burglars and robbed of over $700.

Men Are Searching for the Body of Vernon Valois but All Efforts Have so far Proved Unsuccessful

In spite of all efforts to locate the body of Vernon Valois, who was drowned yesterday morning, up to the time of going to press, the search had been unsuccessful. A HOLIDAY ON DAY OF FUNERAL

No Proclamation Regarding This Matter Made as Yet

Citizens are constantly enquiring whether or not the King's funeral day, Friday May 20th, will be a general public holiday with places of business closed, etc. Of course, the matter rests with the Government and a proclamation from this source is being awaited.

When Queen Victoria died the Government proclaimed a holiday calling upon all places of business to close on the day of the funeral and the merchants fell in with the idea very generally despite the fact that it was a Saturday.

The close proximity of the 20th to Victoria Day, May 24th, makes three holidays in five days (including Sunday, the 22nd) but it is believed that if the 20th is proclaimed a public holiday the business men will fall in line in paying respect to the memory of the late King.

SERIOUS COAL MINE EXPLOSION

Special to the Review.

White Haven, Eng., May 12. — One hundred and thirty-seven men were entombed early to-day by an explosion in the Wellington coal mine. After an hour of work four men were saved. The men brought out declared that their companions were doomed as the mine is filled with gas. The four were themselves overcome and unconscious when found. The explosion wrecked the mine and set it on fire and it will be hours before rescuing parties can reach the chamber where the men are imprisoned. The mine which extends for four miles under the ocean, belongs to the Earl of Tonsdale.

The Anglo Canadian Leather Company Limited

have decided to grant a substantial increase in wages to their employees at both their Huntsville and Bracebridge tanneries, same to take effect at once. The increase is given voluntarily on the part of the Leather Company, and amounts to an advance of 10 to 15 per cent. over former rate of wages.

Under the new rates the wages will run from $1.70 per day, the lowest wage, to $1.90 per day for yard men and beamhouse men, and $2.20 and $3.25 per day for rollers and beamsters.

The company are arranging for considerable extensions and improvements to their works at both Huntsville and Bracebridge, and are prepared to engage a number of good, reliable workmen at the above scale of wages.

THIRTEEN PERSONS WERE DROWNED

Special to the Review.

St. Louis, Mo., May 12.—Thirteen persons were drowned when the City of Saltillo sank in the Mississippi river near Sulphur Springs, twenty-four miles south of St. Louis, at 9.20 o'clock Wednesday night. This comprised half of the passenger list of twenty-six, most of the crew escaping. The steamer which had left St. Louis in the afternoon, was bound for Tennessee River points and carried a large party of pleasure seekers from Nashville, Tenn. The steamer struck a submerged rock and had her bottom torn out, turning turtle almost immediately.

DEAFNESS OF WHITE CATS.

An Affliction Which Prevents Their Being Good Mouse Catchers.

According to a magazine writer, the acuteness of the average cat's sense of hearing is proverbial, but it is a proverb that needs qualifying. For example, many white cats are absolutely deaf, and though the idea may appear absurd at first sight, I am inclined to believe that the color of the cat is associated with its sense of hearing.

I have several times imported Persians or long haired cats from abroad, but not one white one in the number has been able to hear the slightest sound. Of course I have possessed white cats that could hear, but they have been the exception, and that applies as much to the short hair pet of the fireside as to the aristocratic long hair of the shows. Moreover, I have observed that the white cats dullest of hearing are those with blue eyes.

The cats with orange eyes which I have had could hear quite well, those having odd eyes—that is, one orange and one blue—could hear a little but not well, and those having blue eyes were quite deaf, though all have come from the same litter. All kittens have blue eyes till they are about six weeks old, when the eyes change to their adult or permanent color. But to show how widely the permanently blue eye differs to begin with from other eyes I may say that immediately the eyes of white cats that are to have permanently blue eyes open they will shine bright red in the dark and neither the ephemeral kitten blue nor any other color eye does this.

One peculiarity of deaf cats is that they seem to have an aggravated sense of feeling in their feet pads. It is very difficult for a heavy walking animal such as man to approach a deaf cat from behind without giving it warning, and this I attribute to the extreme sensitiveness of the cat's feet, recording the slightest tremor of the ground and so to a certain extent taking the place of hearing. It is a belief held by some country people that white cats do not make good hunters, good mouse or rat catchers, even if they do hear. I am inclined to think that there is a foundation for this idea, and I would go further and say that dark colored cats make the best mouse and rat catchers because they hear best.

Where Slavery Exists.

Joseph Burtt, of England, who has visited the slavery part of West Africa, and seen how the Portuguese are treating the hapless natives, says:

"The world should unite and stamp out slavery in Africa and everywhere else. The cultivation of the cocoa in the islands of San Thome and Principe, West Africa, employs 50,000 ignorant blacks who are kept in pitiable servitude. In the islands fevers and tropical diseases carry off the people rapidly and 5,000 slaves have to be taken there yearly to maintain the needed labor supply.

"These slaves come principally from the central regions of Africa. Some are sold for debt; some are given up on accusation of witchcraft; some are captured in tribal feuds and village raids, but most are captured by expeditions equipped and sent out for the damnable purpose. They are conveyed to the coast, fastened together with wooden shackles to prevent them escaping. It is a long march, many hundred of miles, nine days of which is over a desert. Approximately 50 per cent. of the slaves die on the march."

The Strength of a Shark.

Given special advantages, such as that of holding the end of a stout rope at the other extremity of which is a hook fixed in a shark's mouth, man may, with the assistance of a number of his fellows, have the best of the shark. But alone and in the water the advantage is wholly and absolutely the other way, and the strongest swimmer and the bravest heart fail when the tyrant of the sea seeks to make his acquaintance. The shark is gifted with great strength, a savage temper, dogged perseverance and exceptional power of jaw. The lion and tiger may mangle, the crocodile may lacerate, the bulldog may hold fast—the shark alone of living creatures possesses the power of nipping off a human limb at a bite.

Making It Simple.

The scholarly looking man with the big eyeglasses had been invited to address the Sunday school and was making a few remarks concerning the lesson.

"I see the word 'line' occurs here," he said. "Will some one give me a definition of 'line'?"

Nobody answered.

"It is very easy," he proceeded encouragingly, "though you may find it a little perplexing to convey the idea in simple terms. Try again. Well, the ordinary signification of the word is longitudinal extension; but here it denotes a predetermined boundary. I am sure, my young friends, you can remember that."

Needed No Help.

The old colored woman ambled into the police court where her son was to be tried on a charge of petit larceny. She had been talking to a police court lawyer the evening before, and, catching sight of her, the limb of the law hustled toward her.

"Well, did you get up that $5 for me?" he inquired eagerly. "They are going to try Hamp's case now."

"Well, now, suh, I didn't git de money, mister. Times is jes, so hard I done colluded ter let Hamp go on en be c'nvicted widout de 'sistance ob counsel."

Tomboy.

Verstegan gives the following origin of the word "tomboy" as applied to romping girls: "Tumbe, to dance; Tumbod, danced; hereof we yet call a wench that skippeth or leapeth lyke a boy, a tomboy; our name also of tumbling cometh from hence."

A Born Leader.

"Why are you constantly referring to Bliggins as a leading citizen?"

"I can't help having an admiration for the man," replied Miss Cayenne. He belongs to our whist club and always knows which card to play first."

An unknown man dropped dead in a hotel at Saskatoon as he was raising a glass of beer to his lips.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Shakespeare Memorial

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—A movement has been initiated in England for the erection of a Shakespeare Memorial Theatre which will cost, when equipped with a sufficient endowment to maintain, pension, etc., the actors and actresses connected with it, the sum of upwards of £5,000,000 or $2,500,000.

One doner has contributed anonymously £70,000. The greater part of the balance required has not yet been subscribed.

At the banquet of the St. George's Society of Hamilton on Friday, April 22nd, a suggestion was made by the Governor-General that Canada which had given the lead in so many patriotic directions, should also secure the honor of initiating an organized movement, with the object of enabling the sons and daughters of Greater Britain, who may feel so disposed, to associate themselves with the ladies and gentlemen of the United Kingdom in an endeavor to raise funds for the erection in London of a Memorial Theatre worthy of Shakespeare, the Drama and the Empire.

Contributions to a Shakespeare Imperial Memorial Theatre in London, by members of St. George's and other patriotic societies would appear to be specially appropriate, inasmuch as Shakespeare was born on St. George's Day, April 23rd, 1564, and died on St. George's Day, April 23rd, 1616. William Shakespeare, together with our patron saint, St. George, is responsible for the distinction belonging to April 23rd.

The Governor-General's suggestion was responded to with alacrity by those present at the St. George's banquet at Hamilton; $500 being subscribed in sums of $5 each.

A further sum of $100 was also promised to his Excellency by 20 gentlemen of Peterborough on the following day, April 23rd.

As nearly everyone of the increasing stream of travellers from Great Britain to London, visit the theatres there on almost every possible occasion, the suggestion that they should contribute one $5 brick to the Shakespeare Imperial Memorial Theatre, will perhaps commend itself.

Note—The manager of the Bank of Ottawa, Peterborough, has agreed to accept subscriptions. Cheques should be made payable to the Bank of Ottawa for the Shakespeare Memorial.

OSHKIGMONG

Special to the Review.

Oshkigmong, May 11.—The football and baseball teams are getting their uniforms made and getting themselves in shape for a match with the White Caps, of Simcoe, in the near future. The date has not been fixed yet, and also a match is being arranged with the Eskimos, of Parry Island.

The Rev. S. Crookshanks, of Bridgenorth, preached here last Sunday morning and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. He preached from the words found in the 3rd, 4th and 5th verses of the 1st Epistle of Paul, the 1st chapter.

Mr. Albert Whetung spent last Sunday with his brother-in-law at Alderville.

The woods are now just in perfection, being decked with foliage and the wild flowers in full bloom.

Mr. James McCue was down at Hiawatha to see his brother, Bert, who was seriously ill. We are glad to hear that Bert is fast recovering.

COAL IN OUR PROVINCE ALONG THE MATTAGAMI

Prospectors Now Say That There is Good Cannel Coal Underneath the Lignite—Immense Iron Deposits Also Reported and Indications of Oil.

North Bay, May 13—Since the opening of navigation the reported coal fields along the Mattagami River, northwest of Cochrane, have been visited by a number of exploring parties and the reports coming out are very encouraging. R. E. G. Burrows, who took a party in for a New Liskeard syndicate, has just returned with excellent samples of cannel coal and staked ten claims adjoining the T. & N. O. Railway commission's claims. The members of the syndicate are highly elated over the success of the expedition, and the samples of coal, which indicate that the so-called lignite deposits covers the real article, so much sought after. R. Horschitz of Pittsburg, Pa., has staked four claims for an American syndicate and brought out samples of cannel coal, besides reporting evidence of petroleum. R. J. Flattery is prospecting with a party in Mattagami district for the United States Steel Co., and prospectors who have met Flattery state that he is very much pleased with the showings and claims to have discovered large deposits of coal, iron and salt.

The Mattagami Coal Mining Co., composed of North Bay business men, have eight coal claims and are very optimistic as to the results. Foster Shields of Sudbury, representing a syndicate having coal and iron claims in the new district, left for the north yesterday to arrange for active mining operations. This syndicate claim to have stripped iron deposits showing an almost unlimited tonnage of metal.

Oil prospects are very encouraging, as along the banks of the Mattagami River has been found a dark, greasy substance flowing into the river, which floats on the surface and has every indication of being petroleum. There is splendid water-power on the Mattagami, with falls 150 feet high, while there is an expanse of the river just above of twelve hundred feet. The fine samples of coal brought out have caused considerable excitement among mining men, and it is confidently expected that large coal deposits will be uncovered of great commercial value in the Mattagami district, besides iron and oil.

DR. A. J. JOHNSON TESTIFIES AGAINST ARCH. McLACHLAN

Toronto Coroner Insists That Mrs. McLachlan Came to Her Death as the Result of a Dose of Strychnine —Odor of Coal Oil on Pillows.

Whitby, May 13.—More startling than anybody anticipated was the expert testimony of Chief Coroner A. J. Johnson of Toronto, given in the McLachlan murder trial last night.

He would admit of no qualifying alternatives as to the immediate cause of Mrs. McLachlan's death. It was due to strychnine poisoning, and nothing else, he said, and when Defence Counsel Henderson confronted him with the affirmations of Drs. Shier and McClintock, who made the post mortem, that it could have been smoke suffocation, he replied stoutly "they may not know how to distinguish the postmortem effects peculiar to strychnine suffocation from smoke suffocation, but I do."

He further emphasized the crown's suspicions as to the peaceful slumbering appearance of the dead woman when found, but stating that this should not be, unless she was placed that way after expiring, or had been held by some one during the paroxysms preceding death.

Dr. Johnson's testimony concluded the crown's case. Mr. Henderson declared he was ready to go on with the defence at the resumption of trial at 9.30 to-day. Alma Nix, about whom a great deal of interest centered yesterday, will not be called. The crown has passed her up and Mr. Henderson intimated he would do the same.

It is not improbable, either, that McLachlan will not be put into the box. His counsel dropped a hint to this effect after adjournment, intimating that his deposition at the inquest could scarcely be added to. The chief strain of this was that he had no recollection of what happened before, or for some time after the fire, when Dr. McClintock gave him a stimulant.

The earlier witnesses yesterday told of finding an odor of coal oil on pillows found in the McLachlan home; then the prisoner's relationship with Alma Nix was reviewed, it being shown that they corresponded with each other, were intimate, and met frequently in different places. Witnesses adduced that she had said he would like to take her to California, that he declared if he was free, he would like to marry her, and that he hinted his wife was likely to do away with herself. Dr. Johnson furnished the climax.

A noisy, excited tremor swept the crowded court-room when Counsel Henderson said "that will do," after failing to shake the doctor's conviction as to the cause of death.

Dr. Johnson's replies to Crown Prosecutor Blackstock were thus: Mrs. McLachlan died of suffocation from some specific cause. When people are suffocated in burning buildings, they die because they breathe impure, combustible atmosphere. Suffocation from poisoning, strangling, drowning, etc., leave peculiar postmortem effects that will disclose the cause.

Oil on Pillow.

George Colby, first witness of the day, is a carpenter, who, on March 31 last, began to repair the damage done by the fire. He had found two pillows upstairs, beside a partition, one almost completely burned, the feathers of the other remaining. Another pillow, partly burned, was in another room. One pillow had an odor of coal oil. All were thrown to the rubbish heap. To defence counsel, witness admitted he wouldn't swear positively that he had smelled coal oil on the pillow. To Mr. Blackstock, he said there were no indications of fire from the lamp.

David Colby, brother of George, was positive, however, as to the smell of oil. F. Dobson, an Uxbridge merchant, was similarly certain. He had seen the pillow three or four days later.

The night of the fire, McLachlan had asked him if his wife's body had been recovered and was told yes, but he at once turned to another party and asked the same question.

"Was there anything to prevent any one getting into the house?" asked Mr. Henderson, pursuing a line of questioning to discredit the pillow evidence. Witness said the front and back doors were nailed up. He couldn't say as to counsel's query if there hadn't been an absence of a back door for three months after the fire.

T. C. Leasknone, an Uxbridge fireman, had found a bracket lamp on the floor half full of oil, and the glass unbroken.

Mentioned for Senate Vacancy.

Ottawa, May 13.—L. E. Prowse, M.P. for Queen's, P.E.I., is slated for the Senate in succession to the late Senator Ferguson. The appointment may be made shortly, at all events during the recess.

GEN. FRENCH IS COMING

Reports That He Will be Delayed Are Declared Incorrect.

Ottawa, May 13.—Contrary to reports which have been given circulation in a section of the press, the visit of Gen. Sir John French to Canada will not be delayed on account of the death of King Edward.

Gen. French, who sailed yesterday, accompanied by Gen. Henderson, will arrive in Canada on May 20, the date of the funeral of the late King. He will go direct to Toronto, where he will unveil the South African memorial on May 24. He will spend some time in consultation with the officials at Ottawa, after which his itinerary will be: He will arrive at Halifax on June 7, and spend a few days there and at St. John, which he will leave on June 15. After inspecting the troops at Montreal on June 14, he will proceed to Toronto and inspect the forces of the Niagara Peninsula during the next four days. He will visit Hamilton, Welland and Niagara Falls, and make his way to Petawawa on June 18. Thus London will be left out of the itinerary.

He will remain two days at Petawawa, where will take place the largest gathering of troops that has ever been collected there. He is due to carry out the inspection of troops at Calgary on June 24. He will arrive there the evening before, and will leave on the 25th. He will carry out inspections at Laggan on the 25th, Banff on the 26th, Regina on the 28th, Sewell on the 30th, and will return to Winnipeg in July. He will not visit the coast. The inspection of troops at Winnipeg will take place on July 2. On his return trip he will visit Petawawa camp, remaining there two days, from July 4 to July 6. He will go from there direct to Montreal, where there will be another inspection. The last point of the tour will be Quebec.

DETROIT OFFICIALS WILL BE INVITED

Detroit, Mich., May 13.—Mayor Breitmeyer has received an invitation from Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick, rector of All Saints' Church, Windsor, where Windsor will pay its respects to the dead King on May 20, for himself and the city officials to attend the service. The mayor will send the letter to the council next Tuesday, with the recommendation that suitable action be taken.

Powder Magazine Blew Up.

Logansport, Ind., May 13.—Three hundred pounds of powder, stored in the magazine of the Casparis Stone Co. at Kenneth, Ind., exploded last night, injuring twenty residents of the town. John Elroy, in charge of the magazine, is believed to have been blown to atoms. Houses in the town were badly damaged. The explosion was felt for miles in every direction.

DOUBLE SHOOTING

Special to the Review.

Leamington, May 13.—Floyd Dresser and his wife were found both shot at their home at Leamington this morning about 2 o'clock. It is supposed to be an act of murder and suicide. The couple left one child about six months old, which was nearly perished with cold when found.

LITTLE CHILD WAS BURNED TO DEATH

Quebec, May 13.—The three-year-old daughter of Antonie Gros Louis of Lorette village, ten miles from this city, was burned to death Wednesday evening. In the absence of her mother, the child played with matches, and all its clothing took fire. When the mother returned she found the little girl wrapped in flames, which she succeeded in extinguishing, but it was too late to save the child.

LOVE TRAGEDY IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, May 13.—That Victor Divaldere and Isalor Venteinoot, two friends, both hailing from Belgium, left their respective homes in St. Boniface, and walked hand in hand to the C.N.R. bridge, where together they threw themselves into the Red River, has been determined by the coroner's jury which examined the bodies.

Further, it is known that this death pact was entered into because of a triangular love affair in which both men played a part, the party of the third part being a girl in their own country. Realizing that both could not marry, they determined that one of them should not be left forlorn, they ended their lives.

FIRST TO GET NEW UNIFORMS

Brockville, May 13.—One of the first regiments in Canada to be fitted with the new service uniforms for the Canadian militia, is the 41st Brockville Rifles. Word was received to this effect yesterday by the officer commanding, Lt.-Col. W. S. Buell.

The Militia Department has decided upon a greenish shade of denim as suitable for service or working purposes in Canada, and following the latest German and American ideas, the upper portion of the uniform will be more like a shirt than a jacket. The regiment will also receive a brand new outfit of black uniforms, so that they will be well set up.

COMMISSIONERS IN ACCIDENT

Winnipeg, May 13.—Assistant Chairman D'Arcy Scott and Commissioner Mills and party, of the Railway Commission, were on No. 97, which were delayed by a pitch-in between a freight and stock train, and will not arrive until between ten and eleven. This will delay the sitting of the commission, which was to hear protests of the Western Associated Press against proposed press rates, and the Board of Trade against commercial telegraph rates and some minor technical matters.

Attending Physician Ill.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 13.—Dr. Trimble of Queenston, attending physician on Benjamin Thompson, the Stamford farmer, who, it is alleged, met his death by poisoning, has been confined to his home with a bad cold since Thompson's death, but is convalescent, and will be on hand to testify what he knows of the matter at the adjourned inquest next Monday. In the meantime, his lips are sealed.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

An international aviation meet will be held on Long Island in October.

A. T. Neill, assistant tax collector in Hamilton, died suddenly yesterday.

Snow and rain fell in Alberta, and the danger from drouth is now over.

A new militia uniform, to be worn by all mounted troops, has been ordered.

Wm. Ogg, who was injured in a barn-raising near Thamesford, died from his injuries.

Twelve persons were drowned by the sinking of a steamer in the Mississippi river below St. Louis.

Three girls were fatally injured in their home in Buffalo in a fire caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove.

The common people of France blame Halley's comet for the wretched weather the country is experiencing.

Rev. W. J. Winfield brought over fifty English farmers on the Carthagenian to settle in Prince Edward Island.

An Italian professional swordsman and a French journalist fought a duel in Paris, in which the journalist wounded his adversary.

A Kingston man has complained to a magistrate that his sister has been decoyed into a house at Yarker and held to be sent to the United States for infamous purposes.

MR. CREELMAN NOT LEAVING

Montreal, May 13.—A rumor has been circulated here to the effect that R. L. Borden was to succeed A. R. Creelman as counsel of the C.P.R., as a result of the latter's elevation to the directorate of the company.

Mr. Creelman stated yesterday that no such offer had been made to Mr. Borden and no steps taken to appoint a successor. He intimated that he would continue to discharge the duties of counsel, as well as occupy a place on the board of directors.

A FEW MORE DAYS OF LIFE

Ottawa, May 13.—The death of King Edward has given a few days' more life to Walter Ross, a young Englishman under sentence of death at North Bay for the murder of his chum named Parkinson, in the wilds of northern Ontario last fall. The execution was originally fixed for Friday, May 20, but the fact that that will be the funeral day of King Edward VII., renders it impossible for an execution to take place on such a day. Consequently Ross will get several days more life than he expected, the Cabinet having yesterday advised a respite under the special curcumstances of the case.

INFANT CHILD WAS STRANGLED

Brantford, May 13.—At the inquest into the death of the infant child of Lizzie Hill, the Indian domestic, it was the statement of two doctors who performed the autopsy that the child was born alive and met its death by strangulation. On cross-examination by Major Smith of the Indian office the doctor admitted, however, that the death might have been accidental.

The inquest was adjourned for a week to procure the girl's own testimony.

Protection For Toothpicks.

Ottawa, May 13.—Protection for toothpicks is one of the latest applications which the Department of Finance has received, and it is not improbable that the request will be granted. There is one small toothpick factory in Canada, in Hull, and it claims that were it not for the inpouring of American toothpicks duty free, it would be doing a better business.

FINTON GOES TO TRIAL ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER

Preliminary Hearing in Investigation of Stony Creek Tragedy Ends — Crown Attorney Washington Scores the Magistrate for Expressing an Opinion on Case.

Hamilton, May 13.—Tom Finton must stand trial at the fall assizes on a charge of having murdered his father, Elijah Finton, on the family farmstead at Stony Creek on April 26. He was yesterday committed by Magistrate Jelfs to go before a higher court. At the same time his worship made a remark that Crown Attorney Washington objected to rather warmly. After the witnesses were heard, Mr. G. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., argued that there was no evidence to connect the prisoner with the crime.

"If the crown attorney wishes the case sent up it must go up," said the magistrate. "If he did not press it, I would not send it up."

"I think it would have been better if your worship had not said that much," said the attorney.

Finton pleaded not guilty in a clear voice; indeed he seemed little concerned. He looked around the court and gazed at his uncle and neighborhood friends, though no sign of recognition passed between them.

A brother of the dead man, George Finton, told of Tom's movements on the morning of the fatality, and of seeing him hitch up and drive away. Mr. Staunton elicited the information from him that he was 70 years of age and a cripple, that the morning was foggy and that he could not swear that his brother was not alive when Tom left and had helped him hitch up.

Dr. Edgar described the wounds that had caused death, due to a terrific blow. Death had occurred before 10 a.m. A fall would not have caused the injuries, which were probably from a round instrument.

"To get those injuries he would have to hang by his feet from the roof of the barn and fall plump on his head," he said.

Overalls with about 20 blood-spots were exhibited. Cutting an artery or a smashing blow might have caused them to splash in such a way.

"Falls from a shorter distance (18 inches) have broken a man's skull," said defence counsel, but the witness said he had never seen such a case.

Mrs. Flora Kerr, housekeeper at the Finton home, said Tom had not been in a pleasant mood the day of the death. He was dissatisfied because of his wife's absence. Father and son left the house about 7 a.m. and Tom returned about 8.30. Later he hitched up and drove away. She saw him put a coat and something that looked like an implement 2 1-2 feet long in the wagon. Finton, sr., had not helped in hitching.

Coroner Thompson, who was one of the first to examine the body, said there were no signs of a struggle having taken place. He said the blood was sprayed on the overalls he found in Tom's room, and there was one spot that was clotted before it struck the trousers. Tom told him that he had killed pigs over a month previous, and that might account for the presence of the blood on the overalls. Mr. Staunton asked the witness in what position a man would be standing in order to fall in the position in which the deceased was found. The doctor replied that he could have been standing or sitting, in fact it would be hard to tell what position he would be in.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Drain Caved In on Him.

Barrie, May 13.—A sad fatality occurred at Allandale yesterday evening, by which Mitchell Campbell of Brentwood, lost his life. He was digging a drain and the walls caved in upon him, with fatal results. He was a young man and married.

A General Holiday.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Cabinet yesterday authorized a proclamation declaring Friday, May 20, a general holiday as a day of general mourning for Edward VII. It will be a bank holiday and all business will be suspended.

Engaged Forty-Nine Years.

Stamford, Conn., May 13.—Miss Emily Brown, for about forty years a school teacher here, was married on Wednesday night to Norman Provost, and thus culminated a courtship that began before the civil war.

Two New Liners.

London, May 13.—Tenders for two 20,000 tons turbiners have been invited by the Allan Line. The ships are for the service between Liverpool and Canada.

Don't Wish to Be Mitred Mendicant.

London, May 13.—At a meeting of the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge, the Bishop of Fredericton said he hoped the day was not distant when the society would receive help from Canada instead of sending it there. He did not always want to be a mitred mendicant, coming to England to look for money.

Charge Not Pressed.

Philadelphia, May 13.—The last echo of a sensational escapade was heard here yesterday when the grand jury ignored a bill of indictment charging Ferdinand Cohen, a hotel waiter, with kidnapping Roberta B. Dejanor, the 18-year-old heiress. The couple, after being missing a week, were found in Chicago.

Emperor to Arrive Wednesday.

Berlin, May 13.—It was officially announced last night that Emperor William would leave next Wednesday for London, arriving there on the following day. The date of his return, after attending King Edward's funeral, has not been made known.

Committed For Trial.

London, May 13.—John Prodger was committed for trial by Magistrate Love yesterday morning, on the charge of shooting Miss Elizabeth Frank with intent to kill, in her home, on April 5 last. Prodger will come up for trial early in October.

Another Explosion.

Tacoma, Wash., May 13.—This city was shaken yesterday afternoon by an explosion at the Dupont Powder Works, fifteen miles south of here. It is believed that the damage is heavy.

Well-Known Astronomer Dead.

London, May 13.—Sir William Haggins, the astronomer, died yesterday. He was born in London in 1824 and had long directed a private observatory, which he erected. He was formerly president of the Royal Astronomical Society and of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

B.C. Schools Will Celebrate.

Victoria, B.C., May 13.—The Provincial Department of Education has issued a general order to the schools of British Columbia governing the observance on May 31 of ceremonies marking the federation of the South African States, which takes effect that day.

Mail Delivery In Hull.

Ottawa, May 13.—The first free mail delivery service Hull has ever had was inaugurated yesterday morning. Five postmen were placed on routes covering the city.

WILL RECEIVE MR. ROOSEVELT

London, May 13.—Mr. Roosevelt will be presented to King George soon after his arrival in London early next Monday morning. Arrangements to this end have been made at the wish of His Majesty.

The King has personally extended, through Ambassador Reid, his thanks to President Taft and the Government and people of the United States for their many tokens of condolence and sympathy.

Mr. Roosevelt, upon his arrival here, will proceed to Rochester House, where he will remain quietly until after the funeral of King Edward.

Official notification of Mr. Roosevelt's appointment as special ambassador to the funeral of the late monarch was received at the Foreign Office yesterday.

AN IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE

Chatham, Ont., May 13.—Chatham citizens will assemble at Harrison Hall on the morning of May 20, the date of the King's funeral, and march through the city. Three bands will be in attendance and fifteen church choirs will sing in a massed choir. All the societies in the city will march. The Board of Trade, City Council and Board of Education will also be in attendance.

U. S. Battleship Florida Launched.

New York, May 13.—The battleship Florida, the biggest of the American Dreadnoughts built thus far, was successfully launched at the Brooklyn navy yard yesterday in the presence of the vice-president of the United States, and Secretary of the Navy, the naval attaches of all the powers and a crowd of 50,000 enthusiasts.

RICH GOLD FIND NEAR OTTAWA

Ottawa, May 13.—News was received in the city yesterday of another reported gold find in the Township of Portland West, eighteen miles north of Buckingham. A river driver named Prevost is said to have accidentally come across quartz containing gold visible to the naked eye. Assays of the sample show rich returns, and prospectors are rushing into the district, which is about forty miles from Ottawa.

Theft of Rings.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 13.—Jas. McCarty, who came here from St. Catharines a week ago as a bartender in Dunham's Hotel, is held for the grand jury by Judge Piper on a grand larceny charge. Albert Peake accused McCarty of stealing two rings, worth $400. The rings were recovered behind the bar.

PETERBOROUGH CHIMES

An appeal is being made to citizens in general to contribute to the proposed chimes of St. John's church. No doubt many people will think that St. John's church should pay for its own chimes, but there is a broader way of looking at it. There is a growing spirit of unity between the different Christian churches, and if it is desirable for Peterborough to have a chime of bells it does not matter much which church has it. The location of St. John's is central; the site is commanding, and there could not be chosen a more ideal place for chimes.

The subscription for the chimes has been so far successful that it is certain Peterborough will have chimes, but it is uncertain how good they will be; that largely depends upon the amount of money that is raised.

Every citizen of Peterborough will have to listen to the chimes whether he cares to hear them or not. It is, therefore, desirable that the amount raised shall be sufficient to purchase chimes that will be a source of pleasure and pride to all the citizens of Peterborough.

AN ATTACK UPON FREE MASONS

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice in the Laurier Government, is in trouble again. As if it were not enough to bring down on his head the wrath of the Rev. J. A. Macdonald, of the Toronto Globe, and the Presbyterian and Methodist churches by pardoning criminals convicted of circulating indecent literature, he has got into a quarrel with the Free Masons. Judge Beck, of the Supreme Court of the Province of Alberta, is reported to have said at a public meeting in the Kinistino Avenue Roman Catholic church, Edmonton, that he would not believe a Free Mason on oath where the interests of another Free Mason were concerned. It is stated that when a protest was made to Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, by Alberta Free Masons, he replied that as Judge Beck did not make the statement from the bench he could not take official notice of it. The Free Masons are asking how can they expect to get fair play in a court where the judge refuses to believe any Free Mason on oath. They think the Minister of Justice should at once institute an inquiry and dismiss the injudicious judge if his speech proves to have been correctly reported.

Probably the majority of Roman Catholics in this country would disapprove of any judge attacking the Free Masons, and there is no doubt the Free Masons would disapprove of a similar attack upon Roman Catholics by any judge. There are Roman Catholics as well as Protestants in the society.

It is a noteworthy fact that the late King Edward, who is now so highly praised by leading Roman Catholic church authorities, was a Free Mason, holding a very high place in the order.

AN OTTAWA DANGER

The Ottawa Journal referring to the destructive explosion in Hull by which many lives were lost and great destruction done to property says that there is a magazine near the eastern city limits of Ottawa on the Montreal road which sometimes contains as much as thirty tons of dynamite. "In Sunday's explosion," says the Journal, "but two and a half tons of virite caused all the damage. What twelve times that amount of dynamite would do to the surrounding country and to Ottawa, if by any chance it were to explode, can hardly be estimated."

This is a matter in which the whole country is interested. The Parliament buildings and other public buildings are in Ottawa. The people of Canada pay for them and they are also paying for the beautification of Ottawa. It is the duty of the Government to see that any magazine that might endanger the safety of the national buildings or even destroy the beauty of the city is moved to a distance. It is said that the damage done by the explosion in Hull was largely due to the heavy walls of the magazine. Wherever magazines are located the Government should see that they are constructed on modern scientific principles.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE FOR PETERBOROUGH

A commercial traveller, writing to the Toronto World, suggests that the Ontario Government should establish an agricultural college equal to the one at Guelph, in Eastern Ontario, at Peterborough, Kingston, Belleville or Brockville. The idea is a good one and Peterborough is the place for it. This city is a more central location for such an institution than any of the other towns mentioned.

The general adoption of scientific methods by the farmers of Eastern Ontario would greatly increase the wealth of this part of the province.

The farmers of Western Ontario have an advantage over those of Eastern Ontario in being able to visit the Agricultural College at Guelph more conveniently and at less expense.

The commercial traveller who makes the suggestion regarding the establishment of another agricultural college, also complains of the poor railway facilities of Eastern Ontario as compared with Western Ontario. The Review has already pointed out that Western Ontario is a network of railways, while the eastern and central counties are sadly lacking in transportation facilities. The extension of the Ontario Government railway southward to Peterborough would, to a considerable extent, remedy this drawback, and much the same result might be accomplished by a Canadian Pacific or Canadian Northern branch line connecting Peterborough with some point on the Temiskaming and Northern Railway. Other lines might branch out from Peterborough northeastward toward the Ottawa River and southeastward toward the St. Lawrence. An effort should be made by the City Council and the Board of Trade to interest both the Temiskaming and Northern Railway Commissioners, and the three great railway corporations in the possibilities of Peterborough as a railway centre for Central and Eastern Ontario.

Facts and Opinions

The St. John Telegraph says:—"The despatches tell of the feeling in the United States towards trade reciprocity with Canada. An old bachelor has been defined as one who 'would not marry when he could,' and now could not marry when he would.' This definition, slightly amended, would well describe the international reciprocity situation, the United States' past and present attitude to Canada in this regard being very similar to that of the old bachelor towards marriage."

The Kingston Standard says:—"We used to buy what is known as 'round' steak for ten cents a pound; now it is sold for eighteen cents. The producer says he does not get the extra eight cents; the wholesaler says he does not get it; the butcher says he does not get it. Will some one be kind enough to let us know who does get it? It's been lost somewhere in the shuffle."

A bulletin issued by the Canadian Conservation Commission says: "Canada, being a nation of farmers, has to pay a very large seed bill each year. Last year our crops called for 33,000,000 bushels of seed grain—wheat, oats and barley, and we are constantly increasing our agricultural acreage. This being so, the economy of sowing good clean seed is at once apparent. The advantages to be derived from it are like the proceeds of a sum of money laid out at compound interest—they are cumulative in their effect and grow in ever increasing ratio. Some years ago a competition was carried on in some 450 places in Canada to see just what the actual results of using clean pure seed would be. If we reason from the results obtained from it, we find that our grain yield last year would have been increased by 190,000,000 bushels had clean vigorous seed been sowed on every acre under cultivation. Now, 190,000,000 bushels of grain would fill 1,500 miles of railway grain cars. It is such a large amount that it is hard for the mind to comprehend, but, at any rate, it goes to show that it would pay our farmers to be particular about the kind of seed they sow."

Interesting For the Husband.

A titled lady warned her new gardener that her husband had an irritating habit of disparaging everything he saw in the greenhouse and of ordering in a reckless manner new plants to be bought.

"But on no account humor him," she said. "Whatever he says, throw cold water on him or he will ruin us with his extravagance."

At this point the new gardener turned on her a white and startled face

"Ma'am," he said, "if he orders me to pitch every plant in the place on the rubbish heap I shan't ever have the pluck to douse him in cold water. Won't it do as well if I get a drain of warm water out of the boiler and let it trickle gently down his neck?"—London Tit-Bits.

Very Thoughtful.

"Before we were married," said Mr Meekton, "I showed my affection for Henrietta by serenading her."

"I suppose you neglect any such attentions now."

"Yes; I show my affection now by respecting her desire that I shall not try to sing."

The Only Way.

"I wish I knew how to keep a servant."

"That man across the way can help you."

"Does he conduct an intelligence office?"

"No; he's an embalmer."—Houston Post.

INSURANCE

EVERY person should have Life Assurance and desires a good investment as well. Then patronize the Sun Life Assurance Co'y of Canada.

Limited payment and Life policies on which the Reserved Dividend period has expired have been carried at an exceedingly low insurance cost—far below that of assessment, and have yielded from 5 to 10½ per cent. compound interest on every dollar of the balance of the premium, according to the plan taken and the age of the assured.

These results show insurance at the cheapest possible cost and carry with them an investment that cannot be obtained outside of Life Assurance.

Call or phone us and let us show you these results—they are not estimates.

LONDON, May 12.—London and Liverpool cables quoted live cattle (American) steady, at 13½c to 14½c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef steady, at 11c to 11¼c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, May 12.—The railways reported 85 carloads received on the market on Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 1072 cattle, 2342 hogs, 246 sheep, 279 calves and 20 horses.

Exporters.

There was an important sale of 225 selected export cattle, made on this market, by Mr. Geo. Rowntree to Alexander McIntosh, for Gordon, Ironsides and Phares Co., averaging 1225 lbs. each, at $7.15 to $7.20, and only one load of these was at the lower figure. But it must be remembered that they were "selected cattle" to bring these prices. Export bulls sold from $5.50 to $6.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree bought 300 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co. Steers and heifers, $5.85 to $6.65; cows, $4 to $6; bulls, $5 to $6.10.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports a little more activity for feeders, as there were quite a number of farmers and feeders on the market. Mr. Murby reports handling in the neighborhood of 300 cattle at following prices: Steers, 900 to 1050 lbs. each, at $5.50 to $6.50; steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $5.75; steers, 600 to 800 lbs. each, at $4.50 to $5.25; common light stockers, $3.50 to $4.25.

Milkers and Springers.

There has been a fair supply of milkers and springers all week, but too many of the common medium light cows that are not wanted. Prices remained steady at $35 to $67 each.

Veal Calves.

Prices for veal calves have been firmer, having nearly regained the late decline. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt., but the average price was about $6.40 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for sheep and lambs is slightly lower; ewes sold at $5 to $5.75; rams, $4 to $4.50; yearlings, $6.50 to $8 per cwt.; spring lambs, $3 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Prices have again advanced over our last quotations. Selects fed and watered, $9.60 to $9.75, and $9.40 to $9.50 f.o.b. cars at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., May 12.—Cattle—Steady; prime steers, $7.75 to $8.15.

Veals—Receipts 50 head; active and steady.

Hogs—Receipts 1600 head; slow and 5c to 10c lower; heavy, $10 to $10.05; mixed, $10.05 to $10.20; yorkers and pigs, $10.15 to $10.20; dairies, $10 to $10.15.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 4000 head; sheep slow and 10c to 25c lower; lambs, active and 10c higher; lambs, $7.25 to $9.35; wethers, $7 to $7.25; ewes, $6 to $6.25; sheep, mixed, $4 to $6.75.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Beeves—Receipts 12,291; feeling steady. Calves—Receipts 230; market steady; common to good veals sold at $6.50 to $7.80 per 100 pounds.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 4240; market steady. Clipped sheep sold at $5.25 to $6; clipped lambs, $7.75 to $8.37½; Maryland spring lambs, $11 per 100 pounds.

Hogs—Receipts 1107; feeling nominally firm.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Cattle—Receipts 4500; market steady to lower; steers, $6.25 to $8.70; cows, $4.85 to $6.75; heifers, $4.25 to $7.45; bulls, $5 to $6.75; calves, $3 to $7.75; stockers and feeders, $4.75 to $6.75.

Hogs—Receipts 17,000; market 5c to 10c lower; choice heavy, $9.60 to $9.70; butchers, $9.60 to $9.72½; light mixed, $9.50 to $9.60; choice light, $9.60 to $9.75; packing, $9.50 to $9.60; pigs, $9.25 to $9.50; bulk of sales, $9.55 to $9.65.

Sheep—Receipts 12,000; market strong; sheep, $6.35 to $7.50; yearlings, $7.90 to $8; lambs, $7.65 to $9; spring lambs, $9 to $11.

Cheese Markets.

BELLEVILLE, May 12.—At the meeting of the cheese board, held here today, there were offered 1500 boxes of cheese. Sales were 340 at 10 11-16c, 900 at 10⅝c, balance refused 10⅝c.

Wish to Arbitrate.

Winnipeg, May 13.—C.N.R. boilermakers, boilermakers' helpers, carmen and steamfitters have each applied for arbitration to settle the dispute with the company. The men have asked for increases and been refused. The company, however, offered some concessions to boilermakers and their helpers but not to car men nor steamfitters.

Memorial School For Blind.

Montreal, May 13.—Rev. Dr. Barclay, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, proposes as a memorial to the late King the erection of a school for the English-speaking blind, and the idea is taking hold and is likely of being carried to completion.

The safe in A. Horden's store at Plum Coulee, Man., was blown by burglars and robbed of over $700.

Your money back if Purity Flour does not prove entirely satisfactory in the baking.

DON'T simply buy flour from the dollar and cent side of it. Buy high-quality flour. That means PURITY FLOUR. The first little extra cost is more than made up by the extra number of loaves of bread it makes—by the superiority of the bread and pastry in sweetness of flavor and nourishing qualities. Buying Purity Flour is a safe investment. You get large returns, not only on account of Purity's ability to produce more, but because Purity contains the greater nutriment and the vim of a strong hard wheat flour. Food made from Purity Flour gives the consumer health, snap and force, which cannot be gained from the use of the weaker soft wheat flour.

"MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD"

PURITY FLOUR

You can buy as little as a 7 pound cotton bag or in 14, 24, 49, and 98 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels

Purity may cost a little more than some flours but you'll find its more than worth the difference. To be genuine, must bear the Purity trade mark.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"But I'm thinkin' at goin," Ollie threatened. "How would you put in your Sunday nights with me off, Hen?"

"I'd come and set up with—with Eunice," he blurted out, "if her and Abe wasn't keepin' comp'ny."

Ollie turned and stared at him stupidly.

"But that would give her false hopes. She'd think you meant it fur really. And I just tole you you ain't got no need to make so polite to her fur my sake."

"It would be fur my own sake, Ollie," Hen stammered.

But Ollie did not grasp his meaning. "To anyhow hear about me and see my folks—ain't?" she said, thus interpreting his words. "Yes, well, but"—She doubtfully shook her head at such a questionable manner of courting her.

"Would the folks leave you go to town to work somepin," Hen asked, unable to keep a touch of hope out of his tone.

"I just would take and up and go!" declared Ollie. "I've got my age and kin go if I want. But to be sure my bein' of age ain't no use to me when I'm livin' with pop. To be sure when I'm living off of him I must do all where he says."

"Must Abe, too?" Hen asked, with unexpected and irritating irrelevance.

"If Abe must, too?" she repeated his question. "Well, anybody would know that his bein' a male that way he wouldn't be tied down like a female, fur all he has to obey to pop a good bit."

"Don't your pop and mom uphold to his keepin' comp'ny with—with Eunice"—Hen dragged the question out in an agony of embarrassment—"like what you sayed awhile back—that him and her would be settin' out on the back porch if your mom didn't jaw?"

"Was that so interestin' to you, Hen?" Ollie asked a bit wonderingly.

"Well, it would stand to reason they wouldn't want Abe to throw hisself away on no bound girl where couldn't bring him no aussteuer and Abe so well fixed as he'll be and could marry near any girl in the township."

"But what's Abe's views?" Hen inquired. "Does he favor her agin your pop and mom?"

"Well, to be sure, Eunice would be anyhow dumm if she didn't try to get our Abe, him bein' her only chanct, fur pop won't never leave her go none, and she don't never see other ones, nor other ones don't see her neither. And, to be sure, Abe he favors her some too."

"If she seen other ones, mebbe she wouldn't favor Abe so much neither. This here dude from town now—does she favor him any?" Hen put out uneasily.

"Well," said Ollie contemptuously, "I guess she ain't lookin' that high—our Eunice yet! And him a towner! Why, even me, I wouldn't look to him! He won't bother even with them two town young ladies where's so well fixed and got it so good they can board all summer and spend out money without workin' nothin' to bring more in—not even their own housework at home. A body's got to be pretty well fixed to do like that, ain't? The doc he's dressed hisself up in overalls (did you take notice of it?), and he's makin' he's a farmhand hired to pop just so's them girls will leave him be! Now think! Ain't he comic?"

"Now!" said Hen incredulously.

"Indeed, yes!" affirmed Ollie.

"He must be pretty good fixed, too, to lay off all summer without workin'."

"Yes," Ollie agreed, "he must make no amount of money fur his doctorin'."

"Well, then, if Eunice don't look so high, there's me. I'm better fixed than what Abe is. And her not havin' no aussteuer wouldn't make me no difference."

Hen's tongue was fairly running away with him.

Again Ollie turned to stare at him in dumb amazement.

"What you talkin', Hen? What would you be wantin' to give hopes to Eunice fur when you're my regular comp'ny?"

"That's where you're makin' a big mistake, Ollie."

The fatal words were out. Hen grasped the arms of his rocker as though to save himself from plunging into an abyss that yawned at his feet.

"Makin' a mistake! How am I makin' a mistake?" the bewildered Ollie demanded. "Ain't you settin' up with me Sundays?"

"If I am, it ain't because I come here fur that intention. It's because yous all had a misunderstandin' about the lady friend I wanted to pick out—which it was Eunice and not you, Ollie."

Now that Hen had got started it seemed as easy as rolling downhill. He exulted buoyantly, like one who had shaken off shackles.

Ollie rose and confronted him, her dull complexion flushing a deep red.

"You come here to set up with Eunice!"

"That's wot!" said Hen courageously.

"Why didn't you say so?"

"You didn't give me no chanct. Yous all was so sure I meant you, Ollie. Yous, none of yous, could see that a feller might want Eunice even if she don't have no aussteuer, her bein' such a good looker that way."

"You just made a fool out of me, Hen Mucklehenny!" Ollie cried, almost choking with her shame and indignation.

"I didn't go fur to do no sich a thing, Ollie."

"Well, you kin just go home and stay home," the girl said vindictively, "fur pop ain't leavin' Eunice keep comp'ny with no one—our Abe nor no one else! Pop says what did he raise her fur all these years just to leave her run when she's old enough to be of some use and pay him back fur his supportin' her?"

"Won't you go tell her I'm waitin' here to set up with her?" Hen pleaded.

Ollie glared at him dully, her bosom heaving. "Well, Hen Mucklehenny, to show you I don't want you and Eunice is welcome to you I will go tell her, but I'll tell pop and mom, too, and you kin settle it with them yet—and I wish you luck with 'em!"

She turned her back on him and left him. He waited, fairly quivering with eagerness for the appearance of the sweet, fair girl whose image filled his dull soul. Were his many weeks of dreaming about her about to be crowned with the actual realization of the bliss of "sitting up" with her? Would she in a few minutes be seated in this chair at his side, her hand clasped in his? His ecstatic expectation quite drove from his mind the spleen and disappointment of poor Ollie.

She meantime had sought her parents in the kitchen and had wrathfully related to them that it was Eunice and not she with whom Hen was wanting to keep company.

The indignation of Mrs. Morningstar against both Hen and her foster daughter was quite equal to Ollie's. Mr. Morningstar was hardly less chagrined, for he had been more than satisfied with the prospect of so good a match for his daughter, and he did not wish to part with Eunice at all.

"I ain't leavin' her keep comp'ny with no one," he obstinately affirmed, after the first shock of Ollie's news, as he smoked his pipe by the kitchen window, the smallness of his soul shining out of his little blinking eyes and reflected in the stubborn set of his thin lips, "not even fur the sake of keepin' her off of our Abe. She ain't to waste her time with no beau! You just go round front, Ollie, and tell Hen Mucklehenny I ain't leavin' Eunice keep comp'ny with him nor no one else!" he commanded.

"You go tell him, pop. I don't want to go near him no more."

But Mrs. Morningstar interposed an objection. "It'll give us an awful bad name—our puttin' it out that she hasn't dare to take her chances, too, like other ones. Better leave Hen see her tonight. Then till next Sabbath a'ready we kin tell her she has to tell him she don't feel fur settin' up with him."

"I'll tell her she's to tell him that right aways this evening and not wait till next Sabbath," responded Mr. Morningstar, rising to go to the girl. "You don't know how fur him and her might git along in one evenin'. I ain't takin' no risks like that. She's to tell him right aways she don't take to him."

"Then he can't say we kep' her back," Mrs. Morningstar nodded approvingly. "Don't cry, Ollie." She tried to comfort the girl, who was sniveling audibly. "There's others will be glad to take Hen's place."

But Ollie knew better, and her disappointment was keen.

"Where is Eunice at?" Mr. Morningstar asked, coming back from the kitchen porch, where he had gone to look for her.

A search ensued, in which the girl could not be found either in her own bedroom or in the front room with the young lady boarders nor yet in the garden with "the doc," who was strolling about in the twilight smoking. Where could she possibly be? The suspicious circumstance that Abe also was not about pointed to the possibility, almost the certainty, that they had gone off somewhere together.

"Abe's horse and buggy ain't in the barn," Ollie reported to her parents as they all came together again in the kitchen after their investigation of the place. "I locked open the barn door and looked oncet, and it ain't there! She's took and went out buggy ridin' with him, I bet!"

"She wouldn't do it to go off with him unbeknownst. It ain't like her ways," Mr. Morningstar questioned this circumstantial evidence.

"I wouldn't of thought Abe would of took and done it unbeknownst!" Mrs. Morningstar lamented. "But she won't have the dare to do it ag'in!" she declared threateningly.

"I'll go round front and fix Hen Mucklehenny all right!" Mr. Morningstar suddenly said, with ghoulish satisfaction, turning to the door. "I'll just tell him Eunice and Abe's went out buggy ridin' together. That'll dishearten him from comin' round here after her any more."

As he left the room Ollie's eyes followed him, their customary sullen dullness dissipated for the moment by a reflection of her father's spitefulness.

CHAPTER XI.

KINROSS, sauntering in front of the porch, overheard the farmer "fixing" poor Hen.

"There ain't no use your settin' here waitin'. She's went off buggy ridin' with our Abe. Him and her's wonderful took with each other, and neither of 'em's got eyes fur no other ones."

"I seen Abe's buggy ahead of me when I was drivin' over here," Hen answered, his tone expressing timid doubt of the truth of Mr. Morningstar's assertion, "and I didn't take notice to no lady settin' alongside of him. He rode clean down the pike ahead of me. Our buggies was so close apart I could see right into his'n. And till I got here a'ready Eunice she was here."

"She knowed better'n to git in with him near here. She likely walked over the schoolhouse and behind Zoar's church up and then got in his buggy above the town out, so's us we wouldn't see her."

Very low in his mind and looking abjectly disappointed and discouraged, Henny on receiving this information rose to go home.

Kinross mused on the situation as for an hour longer he wandered up and down the garden in the gathering night. His promenade brought him every now and then to a corner of the house from which he could see in an unoccupied and reputedly "haunted" part of the building a faint flickering light in one of the windows.

He had been told of the tradition concerning the ghost who visited this wing of the old house. The Morningstars were very proud of the distinction of living with the only ghost of the township, and strangers to the neighborhood were never left long in ignorance of it. Kinross felt sure, from what he had seen of the family, that none of them could possibly be induced to go near that haunted quarter of the house after dark and he was naturally puzzled, therefore, to account for the light he saw in the window just now. He thought he would ask Mrs. Morningstar to let him sleep in the haunted room some night and see whether he could not meet and lay the spirit that troubled it. It did not occur to him to associate the light with the absence of Eunice. He accepted, as unquestioningly as did Hen Mucklehenny, Mr. Morningstar's story of her clandestine drive with Abe. Indeed, the family's agitation over the fact was keeping them up long after their usual early bedtime, as he knew from the lamp light in the kitchen to which the circuit of his stroll periodically brought him.

His impressions of Eunice were in dire confusion and refused to lend themselves to readjustment. That a girl capable of even accidentally reading "The Compleat Angler" and discussing it as she had done should "take up" with Abe Morningstar was singular, to say the least. The flower-like beauty of her face, the peculiarly thrilling quality of her voice, her grace and, in some respects, exquisiteness made it seem incongruous that she should, as Mr. Morningstar had expressed it, be "wonderful took with our Abe." And then the intelligence she had revealed this evening—what was it she had said about "The Compleat Angler?"—it was not "for its didactic instructions about fishing" that she cared for it, but "for the anecdotes scattered through it, the quotations and songs and poems."

Good Lord! Should he presently discover that Abe was familiar with Chaucer and Spenser and that Ollie was a student of Shakespeare and Milton? He couldn't have been more astonished if he had found Mrs. Morningstar quoting Henry James or come across Mr. Morningstar intelligently reading George Meredith. As a psychologist he could not reconcile the fact of the girl's having left school at the age of twelve, according to her foster mother's own acknowledgment, with her capacity for assimilating Izaak Walton's little classic. He recalled that Mrs. Morningstar had told him of the child's grief at being taken from school. "She cried wonderful," the woman had said in the unsympathetic tone with which she always spoke of the girl.

"It would take a Sherlock Holmes to ferret out this mystery," he said to himself.

As he came to this conclusion a turn in his walk brought him in sight again of the haunted back building, and he saw that the lighted window had become dark. "The ghost has gone to roost," he decided.

A moment later as he came around to the front of the house the light of a lamp illumined one of the upstairs bedroom windows, the room in which, as he knew, Ollie and Eunice slept. But a moment before he had passed the kitchen in which he had seen Ollie and her parents sitting about the table. Who, then, was in that upstairs room? No member of the Morningstar household would commit the extravagance of leaving a lamp burning in an empty room. Had the ghost wandered from the back room to the front one? But ghosts did not move by the light of kerosene lamps.

Presently in his circuit about the house he found that the trio in the kitchen had at last taken their lamps and gone upstairs, leaving the kitchen door unlatched for him and for the truant lovers.

Kinross felt an impulse of pity for Eunice as he thought of the retribution she would have to face on her return or on the morrow.

"But she never seems to mind the old lady's upbraidings; she takes them with an apparently philosophical calm," he thought. "I wonder whether, against all the stress that will be brought to bear upon her, she will with equal calmness and philosophy persist in her devotion to Abe. I should think she'd find it hard to hold out against the cold blooded obstinacy of that brutal old Morningstar—harder than against the woman's warm temper. I fancy the Dutchman could be cruel under some circumstances. Now, I'm inclined to think Eunice would fare better if she favored that sheep that came to court her this evening—Hen Mucklehenny. He looks inoffensive and soft hearted, while Abe Morningstar is a genuine son of his father—small souled, selfish and brutal. But she doesn't know that it is she Hen came to see, and the Morningstars will take care that she doesn't find it out. I might do her a good turn by telling her on the quiet."

His meditation turned at last from sheer weariness into another channel, and he fell to thinking of the awkward situation he would have to confront when, on his return to town, he should be obliged to meet Miss Ellery and Miss Parks in his true character. How he was going to carry it off was a question which not infrequently occupied his leisure moments.

"I wonder whether Georgiana was in the least shaken out of her orbit by the shock of Eunice's correcting her quotation from Izaak Walton and declining to be 'a recipient of charity'—that was the damsel's phraseology, if I remember. Probably not. She could hardly forget herself long enough to entertain more than a mere passing wonder about another woman.

"Her wishing to give that dress to Eunice—it was not because of any sympathy with Eunice; it was merely an exploiting of herself, an insistence upon her theories, which she feels set her above and apart from the common herd. If something could happen to her to knock out of her her own fool idea of herself and make her just a simple, natural girl, why, with such beauty and distinction as she has, she might be a very charming woman."

To Be Continued.

Special Announcement to Women!

"Free Soap Week" is on the way.

Very soon we are going to give away, absolutely free, a 10c cake of Infants' Delight Soap—the toilet soap that carries beauty with it. We can afford to do this because the first cake will make it "your soap" for all time.

Meanwhile we are going to tell you about Taylor's Borax Soap, our wonderful laundry soap. Thousands of women use

Taylor's Borax Soap
The Soap Your Grocer Will Recommend

They know that it banishes the burden of wash-day by doing twice the work of other soaps with one-half the labor. That it makes clothes whiter and cleaner than any yellow soap.

One woman, or even ten women, might make a mistake in changing from one laundry soap to another, but when so many women discard their soaps for ours, it is no mistake. It is positive proof of the superiority of Taylor's Borax Soap. A 5c cake will convince you. Get it today.

Watch for "Free Soap Week"

This page will tell you when and where you can get a 10c cake of soap free. Save our advertisements for the next week so that when the big offer appears you will have the whole story before you. AMERICANS COME TO CANADA

Washington, May 10.—That emigration from this country to Canada continues is shown by official reports received at the office of Daniel J. Keefe, commissioner-general of immigration of the United States. The Dominion gets a large number of farmers from the Western prairies. The farmer is followed by the merchant with whom he has done business, then by the manufacturer.

For the year ended March 31, 1910, 103,789 people from the United States emigrated to Canada and 57,930 came from that country. During the preceding year 146,908 immigrants reached Canada from all countries, of whom 42,865 were farmers and farm laborers from the United States. Only 8,268 persons of the same class came from Canada to this country. In the same period 2,066 clerks and merchants, and 6,001 persons with occupations not classified, emigrated from the United States to Canada, while 1,634 clerks and merchants, and 22,320 persons, with occupations not classified, came from Canada. Thirty per cent. of the immigration into Canada during the last eight years was English, eight per cent. Scotch, thirty-three per cent. from the United States and four per cent. Italian.

The general estimate is that each emigrant going to Canada from this country has about $1,000 in money and chattels.

OCCUPANTS THROWN OUT

Exciting Runaway on George St. —Outfit Was Badly Damaged

Probably the most thrilling runaway that has occurred in the city happened yesterday evening, shortly after five o clock, and for a few minutes the excitement was intense. A horse and buggy owned and driven by Mr. Frank Montgomery, of the Montgomery House, took fright and tore down George street at a frightful clip. In front of S. A. Oke's fruit store Mr. Montgomery, and a man who was in the rig with him, were thrown violently to the ground, as the buggy overturned. The horse continued at a mad gallop to the corner of George and Simcoe streets, where the buggy was dashed against the pavement. The horse was caught and brought to a halt a few yards farther on. Mr. Montgomery or his companion, beyond a bad shaking up and a few bruises, were not injured, but the outfit was practically demolished. The cause of the runaway was a broken bit. Several people near by at the time narrowly escapes being struck by the horse.

TRY THE MUZZLE ON THE CHILDREN

And it Might Put a Stop to Some of the Vandalism That is Taking Place

The wrath of many citizens who take no small amount of pride in their lawns and flowers is being directed against children these days. One citizen remarked last evening that he was going to keep a sharp lookout in the future, and have a small sized club ready for use on the first offender. There has been talk about muzzling the dogs, but what about these two-footed vandals, who do more damage in two minutes than a dozen dogs would do in a year. The citizen referred to had a bed of choice tulips in full bloom the early part of the week, but some time during the day some hand or hands got busy, and now only the bulbs remain. This is only one of the many cases of vandalism, and someone is going to get into trouble.

A LECTURE ON HALLEY'S COMET

Interesting Programme at Lakefield, Under the Auspices of Public Library

A very instructive and entertaining lecture on "Halley's Comet" was given by Mr. J. H. Burnham in the town hall, Lakefield, last evening, to a large and appreciative audience. For fully an hour Mr. Burnham held the attention of all present, who were intensely interested in the subject, while in a clear and entertaining manner the lecturer described the wonders of the heavenly visitor.

Mr. Burnham gave a short account of his having gone, in company with a number of others, at three o'clock in the morning to the top of Armour's hill, to see the comet and the rise of Venus. He said he was loath to attempt to give an address on astronomy, but as the Public Literary Committee of Lakefield would not have it any other way he consented. He had reinforced himself, however, by persuading Mr. Kerr to accompany him. The comet was on the opposite side of Saturn on April 20th, but had turned the curve on its return and was nearly between us and the sun now. As it was still to the right and a little above the sun, it could be seen at dawn. When it passed the sun and was apparently a little below the sun it would be necessary to wait till the sun had set before it could be seen again, hence about May 20th it would furnish the finest sight of all. From a few observations of the tail of the comet astronomers plot its course and then by mathematics calculate the form and length of its orbit, which in this case takes the comet seventy-five years to travel. Comets break up sometimes while still before the popular gaze in the heavens, and as we come within the zone showers of particles tell us that the comet is like our own earth, only in a highly vaporized state. The speaker remarked, in closing, that although some have spoken of man's insignificance in comparison with the stars, yet our late, dearly beloved King in his sublime reference to duty showed that while the planets might wheel in all their glory, yet it was according to a mechanical and unavoidable law, while man had a choice and it was to his greater glory that being able to choose he resisted temptation and shows the true and good.

Mr. F. D. Kerr gave a very witty address on the tail of a comet, and by his frequent references to his own and other people's experiences in getting up to view the heavenly bodies, excited much laughter. Returning, however, to a serious view of man in relation to the heavens, he gave an admirable review of the history of astronomy.

After the lecture the Lakefield High School Literary Society entertained the audience. Miss Eugene Gryll's piano solo and Miss Baldson's violin solo assisted by Miss Burgis on the piano, were especially fine, and were most enthusiastically applauded, as was also a duet by the Misses Burgis, accompanied by Miss LeBelle. Recitations by Misses Kathleen and Emma Vincent received enthusiastic encores. A very pleasing recitation by Miss M. Kneally, who displayed really excellent elocutionary gifts, completed the programme and evinced to all present that Lakefield may well be proud of her High School Literary Society.

PARK STREET BAPTIST CHURCH ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of Park street Baptist church was held on Wednesday evening when the various reports for the year were submitted.

All the reports were very encouraging and auger well for the future of the church.

During the evening the pastor, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, was requested to vacate the chair when Deacon Green was elected as chairman. The business then before the meeting was the question of the pastor's salary and as an appreciation of the pastor's work during the time he has been in Peterborough it was decided to increase his salary to $1,000 per annum.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

Deacons.—Messrs. T. G. Gillespie, W. Kemp, Barrie, Benton, Inkpen, Kidd, Green.

Clerk to the Church.—Mr. H. H. Reid.

Treasurer.—Mr. Barrie.

Finance Board.—Messrs. Gillespie, Green, Whatley, Moore, Loomis, Bouett, Barrie, Benton, Kemp, J. Johnson.

Representative to the Hospital Board and Charity Aid.—Mr. W. Kemp.

Ushers.—Messrs. H. H. Reid, D. Loomis, R. Castle, N. Barrie, P. Johnson, J. Pilling, Luffman, Bouett, Whatley, Hubell.

A very cordial welcome was extended to Miss Maggie Mann, superintendent of the Bible school for 21 years, who has just returned from several months' vacation in Winnipeg and California.

FORESTRY EXPEDITION FOR HUDSON BAY RAILWAY ROUTE

In anticipation of the early construction of the Hudson's Bay Railway, the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has sent out this year four parties with instruction to make an inspection of the timber along the proposed route of the railway. The parties are composed of trained forest engineers, and experienced timbermen and fire rangers. They have already started their journeys into the wilds.

Of the four parties two will proceed by way of "The Pas," the present terminus of the C.N.R. line toward Hudson Bay. One of these will start its inspection at "The Pas," and proceed up the Nelson River. The other will make at once for Split Lake.

The other two parties will go in by way of Norway House, at the north end of Lake Winnipeg. One of these will make its headquarters at Oxford House and will proceed to inspect the timber around Haye's River, God's Lake, Fox River and other streams, reaching up as far as York Factory. The other will make its way from Oxford House to Split Lake, inspecting the timber en route.

All the parties will, in addition to inspecting the timber, keep a sharp look-out for forest fires and will have authority to appoint and employ fire rangers where they think necessary.

Two of these parties, and probably a third, will winter in the territory they traverse, and will be on the spot ready to continue operations next spring.

JUDGE HUYCKE'S TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF KING EDWARD

Eloquent Address Given at Opening of Division Court—A Wise Ruler and Great Peacemaker, He Is Sincerely Mourned by His Subjects—A Short, But Glorious Reign.

At the opening of division court this morning Judge Huycke made an eloquent and timely reference to the late King Edward, whose sudden death has bereaved the British Empire of such a wise monarch and the world of such a good citizen.

His Honor remarked that he was reminded by the trappings of the court room of the recent death of King Edward. It was scarcely a week ago since the wires had brought the news of his lamented death.

King Edward had two names, Albert and Edward. He had chosen the one distinctively English and by which he was to be known as member of the long family of English kings. Edward meant "truth keeper," and the name was particularly appropriate to the late monarch.

His Honor briefly reviewed the outstanding features of the reigns of the different Edwards of England, many of whom the finest features of the British constitution was due.

Edward I. laid the foundations of British law. Edward III. had all Europe at his feet, and his son, the Black Prince, was the Hero of Cressy and Poitiers.

To the reign of Queen Victoria it was reserved for Edward VII. to give additional lustre, and his reign had been a short but glorious one. England was in a state of magnificent isolation when Edward VII. came to the throne, but he had established amicable relations between the British Empire and the other nations of the world. He had showed himself not to be only Imperial Edward, but Edward the Peacemaker also.

In his foreign policy his record was unique, and in domestic affairs he had been equally as successful. He had been a confrere of Balfour, Asquith, Gladstone, Salisbury, and although these statesmen had different views on many questions they all shared the confidence and affection of the late king.

But the great Peacemaker had passed. He had responded, like we all had to, to the call of the Divine King of Kings. The king was dead—long live the king!

The drapings of the court room reminded one not only of the death of the king, but the accession to the throne of King George V. While we had lost King Edward his memory was enshrined in our hearts, and we would be reminded of him in the reign of King George—the son of Edward and Alexandra. We would all be his loyal subjects, and we hoped that Great Britain's influence for good, the greatest outside the Christian church, would continue to expand and become more emphatic.

Mr. A. P. Poussette, K.C., replied briefly on behalf of the Bar. All lamented the death of the great King Edward, and it could be wisely said that no other king had ever done so much for the empire in such a short space of time.

The court room was strikingly draped in royal purple and black, the trappings of mourning being placed by Mr. E. H. Burns, of R. Fair & Co.

ITALIAN MURDERER WAS SENTENCED TO GALLOWS

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Ont., May 15.—Pasquale Ventricini, the Italian convicted at the present criminal assizes on Wednesday of the murder of a fellow-countryman, Reffasle Fabbie, in a house on Manning Avenue March 6th, was sentenced this morning by Mr. Justice Riddell to be hanged on June 30. The jury, in finding Ventricini guilty added a recommendation for mercy on the ground that the man was a foreigner and not used to the Canadian way. Mr. Justice Riddell in passing sentence, said he would transmit this recommendation to the proper authority, but told the prisoner not to trust that it would have weight.

PETERBOROUGH STUDENTS IN SCIENCE EXAMINATIONS

A number of Peterborough students were successful in the Science examinations at Toronto University. Among those who passed the final examination for the degree of Bachelor of Applied Science was M. G. Cameron, who is now entitled to write B.A.Sc. after his name.

In the First Year Stuart A. Anderson was in the Mechanical Engineering honors list, W. R. Blackwell took honors in Architecture, while B. D. Clegg, was among those who passed in Electrical Engineering.

In the Second Year C. S. Wood was among the pass men in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

In the Third Year R. H. H. Blackwell and A. H. Munro passed in Civil Engineering, while Ross L. Dobbin passed in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

MERCHANT SOLD PAIR OF TROUSERS AFTER SEVEN

Moses Finn Fined at Police Court—Youth Was Sent to His Store to Make a Purchase.

Moses Finn, a drygoods merchant, with premises on Charlotte street, was fined $10 and $4.15 costs at the police court this morning, when it was proven that he sold goods after seven o'clock on Wednesday evening, contrary to the city by-law, which was passed at the request of a large majority of the local merchants.

The hours included in the by-law are after 7 p.m. and before 5 a.m.

The proprietor of another drygoods store, it appears, has been watching the Finn premises for some time, and on several occasions people have been seen in the store after seven o'clock. The trap was set last Wednesday evening, and a youth was sent to the store, where he purchased a pair of trousers about 7.30.

Finn claimed that he was not aware of the by-law. He had only been in the city about four months, having come from Belleville.

His Worship held that as the by-law was passed at the request of the merchants an offence against it by one who profited thereby should be punished.

A PECULIARLY WORDED LETTER FROM GREECE

Athens, the 25 Avril, 1910.

Dear Sir:

We have to request, Sir, that you will be kind enough to send us as soon as possible the following informations:

1—If you kann provide us yearly with a quantity of about 10-40000 cubik meters, round, barkless trunks of silver-firwood in the length of 14.50 m. and average diameter of 0.40 c.m. and upwards.

2—What will be the price of one cubik meter if it is furnished free on board at one of your ports, and what if it is furnished free at the Port of Patrasso (Greece?)

3—At wich months can you furnish this lumber.

4.—Wich are your conditions of payment?

It is self-evident that the trunks shall be fit for sawing planks, and thay shall be as possible free from knots, rents and cracks.

We hope to receive soon your reply and we have the honor to remain

yours truly,

HAVELOCK AND C.G.E.; BRINTONS AND BETHANY

The C.G.E.-Havelock Midland League football game will be called at 5.30 at Brinton's Meadows to-morrow afternoon, and Mr. Pulkinghorn will handle the whistle. The champions will come up on the 4.38 C.P.R. with a strong team, and will make a big endeavor to kick into the winning column. The C.G.E. eleven have been practicing faithfully for the contest and the followers of the game will find it worth while to be on hand.

The local lineup will be: Carlton, Evans, Forritt, Pogett, Milburn, Sparrow, Hampton, French, Miller, capt.; Baird and Williams. Reserves, Fielder and Flowers.

The Brintons journey to Bethany to meet the team of that place, and the Englishmen are hoping for another win. J. E. Sutcliffe will referee.

The C.G.E. will play at Bethany on May 24th instead of on the 21st, as the schedule calls for. Bethany is having a big field day on the holiday. The local team will run an excursion by the 'bus route.

SCHOOL BASEBALL LEAGUE

It was no double figure conquest which the King Edward school boys won from the St. Peter's juniors yesterday afternoon, but a close and decidedly exciting game, ending with the score reading 8—6. The King Edward nine took an early lead, scoring 5 of their runs in the first two innings, and were never headed, though the losers were coming strong at the finish. Excitement prevailed till the last man was retired, each team being encouraged by the rooting of a large number of representatives from the schools interested. The presence of a number of the lady teachers, who followed the game through closely, afforded additional encouragement for the home team. Rev. W. J. Riddiford proved an impartial umpire. The teams were as follows:—

King Edward—Taylor, c; Frost, lf; Eakins, 1b; Billington, cf; Jackson, 3b; Liddell, 2b; Wise, p; Wylder, ss; Doughty, rf.

St. Peter's—Clancy, Lynch, Wolff, Murty, Johnston, O'Brien, Eano, Carew, Milaney.

EAST CITY 13—CENTRALS 6.

East City juniors had little trouble in disposing of the Central school nine. The score was 13—6, and the game was played on the Central grounds. Rev. E. A. Pearson umpired. Batteries—East City, Anderson and Quinn; Centrals, Routley and Soden.

HITLETS

The players of the West End Baseball Club are asked to be out in uniform at Riverside to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock sharp.

The Eastern League scheduled games on the date of the King's funeral will not be played.

Providence opens at Toronto to-day. Either Newton or Rudolph will twirl for the Leafs.

Rochester put Newark away yesterday. Not an Indian went past second base.

Montreal opened at home and lost to Jersey City by one run.

There were 34 hits in the Pittsburg-Brooklyn game.

A meeting of the Lindsay commercial travellers will be held in the Simpson House parlors on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a baseball team. It is expected that a friendly game will be played with Peterborough travellers in the near future.—Warder.

NEW C.P.R. SCHEME.

Improved Lands In West Prove a Big Inducement.

The first active step in the settlement of farmers from Great Britain on the improved farms of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. in Alberta, under the new policy inaugurated by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy during his visit to Great Britain in the early part of the year, was realized by the arrival on the Empress of Britain at St. John with a party of 170 people from Great Britain to go into occupation on these farms.

The new policy of the company involves the improvement of farms varying in size from 80 to 100 acres. On each of these farms the company breaks and cultivates 50 acres and puts it in crop, fences the farm, puts down a well and erects a small house and barn, the cost of these improvements being added to the list price of the land, and the purchasers given ten years in which to pay for the land and improvements.

In the colonization of the West, it has been found that the American or Canadian farmer is not afraid of pioneer conditions, and is prepared to take possession of a prairie farm and immediately proceed to make his own improvements, living in a tent or temporary shelter until he can get a house erected.

Settlers from Great Britain and Northern Europe are not accustomed to pioneer conditions in the West, and settlement by this class has been deterred owing to the fact that they were unacquainted with these conditions, and were afraid of the hardships resulting therefrom. To meet this condition, the new policy of the company has been organized, and the success so far met with indicate that the number of people who can be brought out to occupy improved farms is only limited by the number of farms which can be got ready for them.

Anyone who had seen the first party which arrived on the Empress of Britain would have been struck by the appearance of these people, and by the fact that they are of a class which, up to date, Canada has been obtaining a very small number.

The company makes it a rule that these improved farms are only sold to married men who have had previous experience, and the fact that on their arrival in Alberta they can at once move on to a farm with some crop in the ground, and with a comfortable house in which to settle their belongings, as well as a barn for stabling the horses and cattle that they will immediately buy, makes their chances of success very much greater than it would be were they simply turned loose on unimproved land.

The new policy of the company is the first of its kind which has been tried in connection with the colonization of railway land in America, and its inauguration has probably attracted more attention than any scheme since the tide of immigration began.

DIDN'T GET IT RIGHT.

He Thought He Was a Student of Human Nature, but He Wasn't.

"On this trip in," said the car conductor about 11:30 o'clock at night, "we'll begin to pick up the beaus. They commence leaving their ladyloves about 11 o'clock. I've seen so many of them get on the car that I've got so I can tell who has said a loving goodby and who has had a scrap with her. It's in the way they pay their fare."

The car stopped, and a young man stepped aboard.

"There's one," continued the conductor. "I'll get his fare and then come back and tell you how I think he got along with his ladylove."

The fare was collected, and the conductor returned to the man with whom he had been talking.

"They had a fight," he said. "I'd almost bet she told him to go and never return. Oh, I'm a student of human nature, you bet you!"

Just then another fellow boarded the car. He sat down by the "beau."

"Why, hello, John!" the new passenger said. "How are the wife and babies?"

"All well but the youngest girl," was the reply. "I'm going down to the drug store now to get her some cough medicine."

The conductor went to the other end of the car and stayed there as much as he could.—Denver Post.

Whistling Arrows

A curious weapon has arrived at the offices of the Festival of Empire to be held in the summer in London. The weapon, which was sent as a sample by the pageant's armorer, is an arrow of Henry VIII.'s time, to which cunningly fixed is a small whistle which sounds shrill and clear if the arrow is only just thrown across the room.

It is on record that the archers who formed King Henry's bodyguard tipped their arrows with such whistles so that they "sang through the air."

TOBACCO CURING BY HEAT.

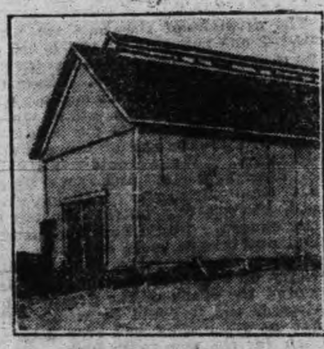
New Type of Closed Barn Used by a Connecticut Grower.

Tobacco growing is counted among the hazardous lines of agriculture in that a crop may be totally destroyed within a very short time by hail or by pole sweat in the curing shed. Danger of hail damage is eliminated in the growing of shade tobacco, but the menace of pole sweat is as great as ever. Last season, however, the first scientific experiment on a large scale to guard against pole sweat in cigar leaf tobacco was made on the farm of William Pinney at Suffield, Conn. The result may ultimately place the farmer in absolute control of the curing process, shortening the time and determining the shade the tobacco shall be when it has been cured.

The experiment was simply the utilization of artificial heat during the curing process. Some kinds of heavy leaf tobacco are cured in tight barns and with fire, and it has long been a common practice to build charcoal fires in the barns when tobacco was in grave danger of being ruined by pole sweat. But until the experiment on the Pinney farm no effort had been made to control the curing and coloring of cigar leaf.

A special type of barn is required for this work. A ventilator along the entire ridge which may be readily opened or closed tight is an important feature. Instead of the crude charcoal burners placed on the ground, creating a fire menace, specially constructed furnaces, five in number, were placed in the ground. The feed doors are on the outside of the building, so that smoke and vapors from the fire cannot enter the barn and affect the flavor of the tobacco. The smoke pipe of each furnace runs across the entire width of the building and returns on a parallel ten feet away and at a slight pitch. The vents are in the side of the barn. The smoke pipe forms the only heat radiating service.

Immediately after the crop was put into the barn the fires were started and the barn closed tightly. The temperature was run up to 80 degrees and the fires permitted to die down after the first day. The curing by this method was hastened at least five days. Very excellent natural atmospheric conditions for curing prompted Mr. Pinney to abandon further application of artificial heat. It was noted during the first two days when the barn was closed that the tobacco turned a rich yellow. The final result was a large percentage of excellent wrappers.



NEW TYPE OF TOBACCO BARN.

The furnaces were installed under the supervision of a representative of the United States department of agriculture, and the curing was followed by John B. Stewart, United States tobacco expert in the Connecticut valley, who acted in an advisory capacity to Mr. Pinney. The entire crop was prime tobacco and has since been sold at a little less than 25 cents per pound. Next year this method will have a more thorough test. The value of a barn full of tobacco is no small item, and any experiment which might destroy such a valuable product is naturally conducted with greatest caution.

Tobacco men are confident that the barn curing process will eventually be as easily controlled as the sweating process by means of steam heat.

Winter Care of Cabbage.

How deeply should cabbage plants be covered where the ground sometimes freezes three and four feet? Does it hurt cabbage to freeze? Should plants be taken up before freezing in the autumn? How early in the spring should they be set out? These questions are answered by Linnaeus Allen of Nassau county, N. Y., as follows:

Where the ground freezes three and four feet deep it will be necessary to plow up the cabbage after trenching so that the heads will be covered with at least a foot of soil. On top of this should be a heavy mulch of cornstalks or other suitable material. It does not hurt cabbage to be frozen in the trenches provided it remains frozen for a long time. What hurts it is to be thawed and then frozen several times.

The plants should be taken up and put in the trenches before the soil becomes frozen too hard to work easily. Two or three heavy frosts will not hurt the plants, nor would a reasonable amount of freezing, except that the heads will bruise easily when frozen, and this will cause rot.

If you wish to put the cabbage away for seed growing next spring the heads should be set out as soon as the ground can be put in good condition after the frost is out.

System In Farming.

No other business in the world would stand the amount of mismanagement and nonmanagement that the farmer's does. It is time for the farmers to study modern business methods and put them in practice. This is a time of wonderful prosperity on the farm, but greater things are ahead if the farmer will make systematic use of his opportunities.

THE BEST THEY HAD.

Put It All on Exhibition to Make a Good Impression.

The Norwegians are always trying to put the best foot forward, and they do it in reference to marriage as well as in reference to other matters.

It is said that a young man once went out to seek a wife and came to a farmhouse where there was more wit than money. The only thing of which the farmer could boast was one new sleeve to his coat. This must be made the most of. "Pray take a seat," he said hospitably. "But this room is shockingly dusty," and, so saying, he went about wiping tables and benches with his new sleeve, while he kept the old one behind him.

His wife possessed one new shoe and one only, but she made the most of it by pushing the furniture in place with it and keeping the other hidden beneath her skirts. "It is very untidy here," she said. "Everything is out of place."

Then they called to the daughter to come and put things to rights. But the only new thing she possessed was a cap. So she kept putting her head in at the door and nodding and nodding.

"For my part," she said, "I can't be everywhere at once."

Thus they all tried to make the young man believe that the household was well to do.—Detroit Free Press.

WELL GUARDED CASH

The Millions Piled Up In the Mint at Philadelphia.

STORED IN ARMORED VAULTS.

The Whole Building Is Embedded In a Solid Concrete Foundation, and the Underground Strong Rooms Are Inpregnable—The Night Watch.

The Philadelphia mint always contains coin and bullion which fluctuates in value each day between a half and three-quarters of a billion dollars. One hundred millions of dollars of this amount is in silver dollars stored for several years in a room by itself 100 by 55 feet in area. About $300,000,000 is in gold coin, ready to be put in circulation or to be stored in the national treasury at Washington against the issue of a corresponding number of gold certificates. A million or two is in bronze and nickel coins. Finally an amount of bullion varying from a small quantity to several hundred millions of dollars' worth occupies the four massive vaults designed for the uncoined metal.

Now, how is this vast hoard protected?

First of all, the whole mint is embedded in a solid concrete foundation about three feet deep. Concrete, as every one knows, is one of the strongest of all known substances and the most impervious to drilling or wear. Then on the interior, where the vaults are placed, within this concrete protection, comes a solid armor of battleship steel six inches thick, so strong that an expert working on it a week could scarcely make an impression, much less penetrate it by hand tools.

The vaults themselves are sunken deeply below the ground. Descending several flights of stairs and passing by doors guarded by a fearsome array of rifles for use by the night guards, a long, fairly wide corridor of solid concrete masonry shows the entrances to the six vaults, one for the silver already referred to, one for all kinds of coinage, but mostly for gold, and the remaining four for the gold, silver and nickel bullion. The bronze bullion lies in another room by itself, but as a few dollars' worth of this substance makes an uncomfortably heavy load it is not thought necessary to surround it with the minute safeguards used in the case of the precious metals.

The vaults themselves have a double combination. That to the outer door is known by the cashier only and that to the inner door by the custodian of the vaults only. To enter a vault both men have to be together, and it is a rule of the department that both shall stay together till the inspection or other object for which the huge safe is opened is accomplished.

Entering one of these great cages after five minutes' working at the combination, one finds himself in a huge room partitioned off in fifteen compartments by steel gratings of the strongest kind. A straight passage six feet wide and the height of the chamber goes down the length of the room from the door. At the entrance are stored the bronze coins, the cents, about $80,000 worth of them, but the amount varies from day to day. Next come the more precious nickel coins, of which the value usually totals about $300,000.

Beyond these storage places a steel grated door in the passage itself has to be opened and then still another to get completely to the end of the room. All along the length of this passageway, from the entrance to the vault to the end, are the compartments for the coins, separated from the passageway by exactly the same kind of gratings as those which divide the way itself into sections.

The bottom, the sides and the top of this vault are lined with steel plates, and about the entire vault is the three foot protection of concrete. Within the vault itself are the separate compartments, each locked. These compartments are examined shortly after the end of the fiscal year and are then sealed by the examiners, so that any entrance to them would be impossible without the breakage of the seals. In each compartment devoted to the storage of gold the coin is stored first in bags which contain $5,000 each in half eagles, eagles or double eagles, and then these bags are arranged twenty on a shelf. Each shelf has thus $100,000 on it. The shelves are arranged in rows downward, ten from top to bottom of the compartment, each row having thus $1,000,000 in gold in it.

Electricity lights the entire section of each vault, and the electric current is so arranged that if it were possible for the vaults to be tampered with the electricity would immediately give notice outside that something was wrong.

A detachment of guards every night is stationed at the entrance to the stairways leading to the corridor, which gives access to the vaults themselves. Their orders are to shoot down any one attempting an entry.

For the protection of the mint from fire a well drilled fire brigade has charge of the extinguishing apparatus. There are thirty-one fire alarm stations located in the corridors and rooms throughout the building.

At night every fifteen minutes thirty-one watchmen ring a signal notifying the watch in the telephone room that all is well. All these men carry revolvers during the night watch. If the signal from any watchman was not heard at the right time an instant alarm would be sounded.—Philadelphia Record.

He Sees Double.

His name isn't really Guzzler, but it will answer the purpose, and it is descriptive. Guzzler has a habit of looking upon the wine when it is red, frequently to the extent that he can see two bottles where only one exists. Now, Guzzler is married, and recently the stork paid a visit to his abode. Several days after the event two of his friends met, and the following conversation ensued:

"Hello, old man! Hear about the doings over at Guzzler's?"

"No. Another birthday party?"

"Yes, in a way. Guzzler's wife has presented him with twins."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? Well, I ought to know. Guzzler told me himself."

"Well, I wouldn't place too much dependence on it. You know Guzzler generally sees double!"—New York Times.

Paying the Doctor.

Some American doctors are in favor of the contract system for medical service, but they are still a long way from the Chinese scheme of stopping the doctor's salary when the patient falls ill. The writer knows a New Yorker who says that if ever he is threatened with an operation he will ask the surgeon what it is going to cost. Then he will hand him the amount at once with the assurance that the fee goes whether the operation comes off or doesn't. He reasons that the doctor will then have no possible temptation if it comes to a toss up whether to operate or take a chance.—New York Press.

A Rabelais Hoax.

Rabelais, being out of money, once tricked the police into taking him from Marseilles to Paris on a charge of treason. He made up some packages of brick dust and labeled them "Poison for the royal family." The officers took Rabelais 700 miles only to be told at the end of their journey that it was April 1 and the affair was a hoax. Of course, as Rabelais was the privileged wit of the royal family, he was forgiven.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Saving Explained by a Peterboro Citizen Who Knows From Experience

Many Peterborough people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a great amount of suffering and ill-health.

The reason so many use Booth's Kidney Pills is their quick relief for all Kidney weakness. Here is what a Peterborough citizen says:—

Mrs. Geo. Hawes, of 857 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—

"I had suffered for some time with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble, and, although I had tried many remedies and doctors, I found little or no relief. My back was weak, and a dull, bearing-down pain settled across the small of it, and extended into my shoulders and around my sides. I was weak and languid and the least exertion would tire me out. Dizzy spells were frequent, and often I would awake with a severe headache. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at Madill's Pharmacy. I soon found them to benefit me and continued their use. In a comparatively short time I was as well and strong as ever and without a symptom of the painful and long standing disease."

DARNING ON LINEN.

Useful Patterns For Bed Coverings and Towels.

HOW TO MAKE THE DESIGNS.

This Work Can Be Applied to Numberless Little Gifts—The Darning Is Strong and Easy to Do and Does Not Tax the Eyes.

A few designs may be interesting to needleworkers and prove helpful to those holding classes in darning on linen, which is quite a fad at present. The work is inexpensive to start, and quite small pieces of linen can be used.

No. 1 is an original design, which is popular for making little gifts. To commence draw 18 or 20 threads, according to the fineness of the linen; leave 4 threads and draw the same number as before. Stitch twice round 6 threads to form a group and put the needle down below the 4 threads; pass the thread over once, over again and bring the needle out to the left of the 6 threads already grouped above the 4 threads; then put the needle over the 4 threads and into the same hole as before; over again and bring the needle out below the 4 threads and to the left of 3 new threads and make the group of these 3 new threads and 3 of the ones to the right; over once, over again and bring the needle out above the bar of 4 threads and to the left, taking up 3 new threads, and then work as before. A glance at the top line given in the illustration will show the effect of 1 group above and 1 to the left below the 4 threads, making the groups come alternately instead of one under the other. Now leave 8 threads for the plain "band" and draw 20 or 24 threads, again leave 8 and draw 18 or 20, leave 4 and draw 18 or 20.

The plain piece is fastened by bringing the needle from the back into the middle, pass the thread at the back and put it down in the same place as it was brought through and continue this to the end.

To make the center pattern darn over 3 groups, then over 2, again over 3 and again over 2. Then come back by darning over 3 groups, using the 1 left over and 2 new ones; then over 2, again over 3 and finish by darning over 2. This completes the pattern. Now darn over 2 groups to form the bar and begin again as before, being careful always to commence by darning over 3 groups. One pattern will begin at the upper side of the space to be darned; the next at the bottom, as the bar is worked from where the pattern ends. Ribbon can be threaded through if the worker likes. A workbag or handkerchief case worked on blue linen and using silk instead of thread is charming, especially if a ribbon a shade lighter is run through.

Pattern No. 2 is also original and is very quickly worked, as a flax thread has been used. The border is the same as No. 1, but could be varied if wanted wider. Draw 20 or 24 threads and darn over 2 groups, leave 1 group and again darn over 2 groups, leave 1 and darn over 2. Now darn over 2 new groups, leave 1, darn over 2, darn over 2 again, leave 1 and darn over 2. A V shaped space is now left with 4 groups. Darn over these a short distance and then whip over the groups as far as the third of the first set of 3 darned groups, pass the needle at the back of the first of the second group of 3 and whip the other strand, bringing the needle at the back, and begin as at first and repeat the darning over the 4 strands and whipping over the 2. This is a useful pattern for bed linen, as it is strong and easy to do.

To Darn a Glove Finger.

If you want to mend a glove finger in a hurry and have no special darner handy use a boy's marble to slip under the hole. Marbles come in different sizes and make a small neat darn easy.

Rips should be mended on the outside in a thread as much like that used in stitching as may be. Strive to imitate the seam sewing.

Tears in the material may be overcast in tiny stitches on the wrong side, or if they are jagged the edge should be buttonholed and the space filled with other rows of the buttonholing.

Always use a fine needle in glove mending, as a heavy one weakens the kid.

The Allan liner Grampian ran on the rocks at Cap a la Roche and floated off the high tide.

Reduce The Cost of Living

LET us look into this problem of high cost of living. Let us see, if we can whittle it down a bit and extract some of its fangs.

We all agree that the cost of living has gone up. Eggs have gone up, butter has gone up, meat and poultry and vegetables have gone up. Everything we put on our tables has advanced in price from 30 to 50%. Except one item—Flour. Most of us have known this in a way sometime but have we ever for a moment realized that 10 cents spent in good Bread buys more real value than fifteen times that amount spent in Eggs, Beef or Mutton. Just glance at the tables above showing the comparison made by the U.S. Government bulletin. From a food point of view—bread is the most important in our whole bill of fare. Test after test by various Governments has proved that first class bread is in itself almost a complete food and provides most nourishment to the body.

It is a fact that the best bread made from Ogilvie's ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is richer in real food value than anything you may eat. It furnishes more all round food in the shape of carbo-hydrates than either beef, veal, lamb, pork, fish or vegetables. The only element of sustenance that it lacks is fat and that you provide for by using butter.

Bread is the one item of food that has not advanced in price, and has advanced in quality. Modern first-class bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is vastly superior to the crude bread of our olden times. It is not only better in taste but vastly richer in food elements. It is the result of scientific study and scientific methods of milling. "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is the highest perfection of flour.

No ordinary flour is comparable with Royal Household for quality and uniformity. One way to reduce household expenses is to eat more bread and pastry made from Royal Household Flour.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour

Let us make good, clean, fresh, home-made products from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR—bread and pastry and cookies and muffins and rolls for the youngsters and in that way we will all get better food and be healthier and wealthier in the long run.

If you send in your address and the name of your dealer you will receive a copy of "Ogilvie's Book for a Cook" containing 125 tried and tested recipes.

SIMPLE PUDDINGS.

Desserts That Are Made Without the Aid of Eggs.

Poor Man's Rice Pudding.—This is made without eggs, which is a great advantage to the household that must economize on its sweets. Take four cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of rice, salt to taste, one-half teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon or four cloves and one tablespoonful of butter. Wash the rice thoroughly and parboil it in a pint of water. Drain it dry when half cooked and arrange it in a baking dish, with the various other ingredients lightly stirred in. Serve with cream or rich milk and powdered sugar. Bake this one hour.

Indian Meal Pudding.—Take five cupfuls of scalded milk, one-half cupful of fresh Indian meal, one-half cupful of molasses, a pinch of salt and one teaspoonful of ground ginger. Pour the hot milk slowly over the meal, stirring all the while, and cook it in a double boiler twenty-five minutes; then add the molasses, salt and ginger and put the mixture into a buttered baking dish and bake slowly for two hours. If baked too rapidly this pudding will spoil. The ginger may be omitted if this taste is unpleasant, and cream is an accompaniment to the dish.

Sweet Potato Pudding.—For four persons take two large sweet potatoes, peel and grate them raw. Beat in two or four eggs, molasses to make a running paste and as much powdered ginger as is liked. Bake the pudding quite three hours in a slow oven. This is a favorite sweet in the south, where it is dubbed "potato poon," which word is a corruption of pone.

Steamed Apple Pudding.—Take two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter, three-fourths cupful of milk and four cooking apples cut in plugs. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, work in the butter with the fingers and then add milk, mixing this in with a silver knife. Toss the sponge upon a floured board, pat and roll it lightly and after piling the pared and cut apples in the center of the dough sprinkle these with a little salt and nutmeg. Gather the dough round the apples dumpling fashion, twist the ends tightly and steam in a double boiler one hour and twenty minutes. This must be served hot with a hard sugar and butter sauce. Any dried fruit may be used for the pudding, and a squeeze of lemon juice will greatly improve the sauce.

A NEW TRADE.

China Restoring Congenial Occupation For Girls With Artistic Tastes.

It would be hard to find a more delightful profession for a girl with practical artistic tastes than that of the little known art of china restoring.

It is a special craft which has hitherto been known to very people, the secrets of the trade, as a rule, being handed down from father to son for generations. But now that women are invading every sphere of usefulness the art of china restoring has not escaped them. The Dresden coach seen in the illustration was a complete wreck, but was restored recently by a girl who has taken up the work professionally.

Labor Lifts.

Covering the pan when fish is frying is apt to make the flesh soft. A solid, firm meat that is at the same time flaky is what the good cook likes.

Don't leave a tin lid on the saucepan if you start the cereal in the evening for breakfast. It will rust and the moisture drip into the food.

The toast rack of German silver fills a long felt want in the home where crisp hot toast is appreciated. It can be placed in the oven, where the slices of toast are kept "piping hot" until ready to serve.

There are a number of ways in which every scrap of an old sheet may be utilized if one will give the subject thought.

First there are very few housekeepers ignorant of the fact that if the sides are sewed together and the sheet cut through the center it will be given a new lease of life.

Twilled sheets by reason of their softness combined with their substantial weave make excellent polishing cloths and good undercovers for ironing boards.

Old cotton gowns may be ripped apart and made into bags in which to hang blouses.

An old sheet will cut up into several slips for use on the pillows over the ticking.

French Cook Wrinkle.

French cooks add a teaspoonful of sugar to each quart of water in which peas, squash and other green vegetables are cooked. This brings out the flavor of the vegetable and is very agreeable, especially in very young peas, which the French cook, pods and all, with cream, serving under the name of mangestoutes ("eat it all").

Cookery Tips.

Never soak rice or macaroni before cooking. Well wash the former, but not the latter, and place both in boiling water to cook.

Boiled suet puddings will have an added nutriment if they are mixed with milk or milk and water.

LIVE BABY IN VALISE CARRIED BY YOUNG WOMAN

Great Sensation in Windsor Railway Station, Montreal—Was Taking it to be Baptized and Placed in Convent

Montreal, May 12.—At the Windsor street station to-day a pretty young woman of eighteen stepped from the Halifax express, carrying a large-sized valise. An elderly person followed from the same car, and walking rapidly to the end of the platform, addressed the constable in a very excited manner, with the startling announcement: "That young woman has got a baby in that valise."

There was instant excitement. The constable called the lady outside, and the bag was opened. It contained a fat, smiling, rosy infant, looking not at all unhappy in its circumscribed abode. The valise had not been actually closed fast, so that there was no question about its having sufficient air to breathe.

The young woman looked at first very confused in the presence of the crowd which speedily congregated, and then she blushingly stammered forth that she had become its temporary guardian, and put it there because she did not wish to be seen carrying it. She was to take it to the Archbishop's palace for baptism, and then it was to go to the convent of the Grey Nuns. She had brought it from St. John. Those who heard the story were at first a trifle incredulous, but the constable accompanied the damsel to the palace, and there it became apparent that she was an expected visitor. That ended the police connection with the affair. After the baptismal rite had been performed, the child was duly conveyed to the convent.

HAS RETURNED FROM TRIP TO HIS HOME IN GREECE

After an absence of sixteen months during which time he visited his home in Athens, Greece, and served thirteen months in the army, Mr. Louis Yeates arrived in this city yesterday, and today is in business again with his brother George at their premises on George street. Louis is the picture of health and has developed considerably in physical appearance, as a result of his thirteen months' training in the regiment to which he was attached. He left his home two months ago and has since visited Italy, France and England, leaving Liverpool on the "Hamburg," landing at Philadelphia, where he visited relatives before leaving to come to Peterborough.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, May 12.—Norwood and Havelock juniors clashed in the second game of the series here on Wednesday evening, but neither team were able to score, leaving the first round a draw without a single goal being scored. The game was a very interesting one, with honors about equally divided between the two teams. Both defences played a safe, steady game, with close checking all over the field. The forwards were unable to get down to good combination work, but line-up:—
will undoubtedly show an improvement with more practice. Jas. Rogers, of Norwood, made a very satisfactory referee. The following was the Havelock—Goal, Stewart; backs, Copp, Tomlinson; halves, Easton, Brooks, Seabrooks; forwards, Watson, Kitchen, Bryans, Beaver, Brown.

Norwood—Goal, Hawthorne; backs, Shepherdson, Kidd; halves, Dewart, Lamey, Lobb; forwards, Rogers, Richardson, Andrews, Johnson, Graham.

The juniors play their next game at Norwood on May 18th.

The seniors go to Peterborough on Saturday to meet the C.G.E.

REV. WILLIAM PEER.

Rev. Wm. Peer, who is conducting services in the Baptist church on Sunday afternoons, is a man with varied experience as missionary in the northern wilds. The Toronto Star has the following to say of him recently: "One of those big little men, a doughty man in small compass, is Rev. Wm. Peer, the pioneer missionary of the Temiskaming, who, with his wife, is in Toronto to-day. They are en route to Norwood to take up permanent residence there. For nine years Mr. and Mrs. Peer have fought the sturdy battle of the pioneer missionary on the fringe of civilization for the Baptist church in the wilds of New Ontario. Now they are coming back to old Ontario to spend their declining years among the friends they made when Rev. William Peer was busy building up churches for the denomination in Cramahe, Campbellford, Fenella, Melne, Norwood, Warsaw, Dummer and Havelock. Truly his record in Old and New Ontario is a worthy one. A casual glance at Rev. William Peer does not reveal the missionary at his true value. A ruddy face, perpetually wrinkled and crow's-footed by a smile that hovers even in his most serious moments, blue eyes that twinkle with kindliness, silver hair and moustache—a little man half buried in the depths of a big racoon coat—these were the outstanding features of Rev. Mr. Peer as he appeared in Toronto yesterday. The removal of the coon coat reveals only a trim, well groomed gentleman of not more than 150 pounds weight, a man who would be more readily taken for a successful Toronto manufacturer than for the man who pioneered that rough north country in a manner that rivals for zest, self sacrifice and carelessness of hardship, the hazardous undertakings of the French Jesuits. Think of it! Sixty-seven years of age and able to paddle a canoe forty miles a day or face 30 below zero weather in a 16-mile journey across Lake Temiskaming and through the woods to hold service in a lumber camp. A man who has faced death by storm ashore and afloat, by wild animals or forest fires almost a score of times, who will go back at it again this winter—and maybe for many more years—as a voluntary missionary. A man who loves his work above personal comfort and worldly advancement, and even in the face of the opposition of men in power of his church, is this chap with the smiling eyes and coon coat. There is no better known man in all the north country than Rev. William Peer, and he has done mighty work for the cause up in the silver country. Yet he and the Baptist Home Missionary Board have quarrelled."

BELMONT COUNCIL.

At the last meeting of the Belmont council on April 30th, the following accounts were ordered to be paid:—Robt. Marshall, charity, $5; S. S. Joyce, insurance on town hall, $2.10; Dennistoun, Peck & Kerr, law costs, $15. The following applications were received for money on roads: Chas. A. Chase, R. B. No. 13, $20; Henley Chase, R. B. No. 33, $40; Thos. Adley, R. B. No. 30, $50; Olive Baker, R.B. No. 61, $25; Wesley Dulmage, R. B. Nos. 68 and 91, $15; Charles Ashley, R. B. No. 94, $75. Mr. Coon was given the use of the side line in the 8th concession between lots 15 and 16, for the sum of $1.00. Several other matters of importance were passed and the council adjourned to Saturday, May 28th.

CHIEF ENGINEER ON THE CANAL

Paid Official Visit to Peterboro To-day

Mr. A. W. Bowden, chief engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, was in the city to-day. Yesterday Mr. Bowden spent some time inspecting the work which has been in progress at Campbellford. This afternoon, in company with Mr. J. H. McClellan, he left for Lakefield and from there will take a trip on the "Bessie Butler" to Lake Simcoe and the Holland River. This is Mr. Bowden's first trip over the canal and he expressed himself as extremely well pleased with the work on the canal.

LECTURED ON "HOLY GRAIL"

Judge Huycke gave a very interesting lecture on Tennyson's poem, "The Holy Grail," at the Y. W. C. A. last night. The gymnasium was well filled with a highly interesting audience. A much appreciated piano duet was played by the Misses Gumphricht and Herbert Rush sang two solos in excellent voice.

A literary evening was held at the close of the lecture.

FINE EXHIBIT OF ARCTIC ANIMALS

An opportunity to see a number of Arctic animals is afforded now at Mr. E. Elcome's (taxidermist). He has at present the following: A very fine walrus head, a polar bear, seven feet high; several Barrenland caribou, a woodland caribou, and white sheep, "big horns," from Alaska. Some have asked to see these and all wishing to do so are welcome.

A HALF YEAR'S ENFORCEMENT

Of the Dog By-law Might Have Desired Effect is Ald. Turner's Opinion

At the meeting of the committee of the whole council to-night the dog by-law will again come up for consideration. At the last meeting of the council the by-law was referred back to the committee and definite information as to its enforcement will probably be forthcoming at to-night's meeting.

In answer to the Review to-day Ald. Turner, the father of the measure, said he thought the proper thing to do would be to enforce the by-law for five or six months anyway in which time a cleaning-up of surplus and destructive curs could be made. If the by-law had the desired effect in that time its more stringent clauses could be repealed.

MANAGERS DOING AWAY WITH THE CHORUS MEN

When Marie Cahill came to the conclusion that chorus men were excess baggage that weren't paying their transportation the public were inclined to look upon her action in weeding them out of her company as merely a whim or a means of attracting special attention. But the departure introduced by Miss Cahill has been taken up seriously by managers and producers and there seems to be the feeling among a great many of them that the male choristers can be wisely dispensed with.

Mr. William L. Wilken, the forerunner of "Buster Brown," informs the Review that the elimination of chorus men is becoming widespread and may eventually become practically general, although he is of the opinion that some managers may not be willing to fall into line in the matter of doing away with their male choruses.

Theatrical managers, generally speaking, are men of discretion and foresight, but the practice of dispensing with the men will undoubtedly have the effect of marring the rendition of many choruses. For, as a rule, the men can sing, whereas the girls, generally speaking, can only "look."

PASSENGERS, KEPT GUESSING

Over Manoeuvres of Young Girl and an Elderly Gentleman

A very pretty young lady was seated in the corner of a car, at the other end of which was standing a middle-aged man, apparently respectable. The man met the girl's glance for a moment and threw her a kiss. She smiled and then blushed furiously. He threw another, and she crimsoned and turned away. "That will about do for you," said the conductor. "Go home to your wife!" This did not seem to worry the man, and again he threw another kiss. When the girl rose to leave the car the man who was trying to flirt with her also moved towards the door. At this time all eyes were on the pair, and the conductor and a couple of passengers seemed on the point of interfering. But the girl took the arm of the apparently respectable man, and said in a silvery voice that all could hear, "Oh, dad, how could you?"

PAPER DOLL PARTY.

Novel Affair Planned to Amuse the Little Ones.

A clever hostess provided an enjoyable party for her little girl, something that was truly pleasant for all. It was called a paper doll party, and the children had no idea, of course, what this party was to be like until they arrived and the hostess informed them that a good fairy had come the night before and left pretty paper dolls for them, but they would have to go in search of them. The yard was very large, so it was a long time before they found the paper dolls hidden among the rosebushes and flowers. In one place would be a very large doll; another very little doll, so tiny it could scarcely be seen, was found among the hollyhocks, and dolls of every description were picked up by the children. The hostess was clever enough to dress all dolls in green crape paper dresses, so the search for them among green leaves was not so easy as you might imagine. Of course the little girl who found the most fairy paper dolls received a reward, but it was merely a paper doll much larger and more nicely dressed. This would be great fun for the wee tots and something entirely new.

Children's parties often result in much loss of china, for the best brought up youngsters until they reach years of discretion cannot be relied upon to restrain their destructive tendencies. One's own boys and girls can be controlled when they are by themselves, but when they have youthful guests parental authority is harder to exercise. That drawback to the average juvenile entertainment is offset by using paper articles for the table. A single small box contains a whole outfit. First there is a tablecloth neatly folded and looking exactly like damask. The pattern is so beautifully imitated that a few feet away it is impossible to distinguish the flimsy paper tablecloth from the expensive linen one. A little care has to be taken in smoothing the paper "cloth" on the table, for the paper tears easily. Paper plates are so cheap no one need hesitate about laying in a large stock of them, and as they require no washing they are a labor saving investment for a party. The paper dinner napkins and center spreads specially designed for party use are decorated to match the plates.

THE CARE OF LAMPS.

Wicks and Burners Should Be Boiled Once a Month.

Among the many artificial lights there is none other that gives such a soft, warm, pleasing radiance as the time honored kerosene lamp, and it is still the rule in the majority of homes. Its greatest disadvantage lies in the constant attention necessary to keep it clean, for not only is a smoking lamp an injury to the eyes, but it is a menace to the health as well.

The ordinary cleaning may be reduced to a simple filling and wiping of lamps and a washing of chimneys. Once a month give the lamp a thorough cleaning. Remove the wicks from the burners and place both in a kettle kept for the purpose, in which should be placed a heaping teaspoonful of salsoda for each quart of water. Let this boil for half an hour. Empty the lamps of oil and wash well inside and out. Remove the wicks from the kettle, wash in a mild suds, rinse in clear water and spread in a warm place until dry. Remove the burners and wash; the black, crusty accumulations will be gone and the burners will be bright and shining. When all are thoroughly dry fill the lamps and place burners and wicks in position. This cleaning requires less time and brings better results than many scourings, and the light will be clear and bright. At some seasons of the year, when lamps are used much, it may be found desirable to repeat this process oftener, while at other times the intervals may be longer.

THE STOLEN JEWELRY HAS BEEN RECOVERED

Chauffeur, Ex-Policeman and Shipper in League of Dishonesty Confess Their Crime—Taken From an Automobile at the Toronto Horse Show.

Toronto, May 14.—Following so slight a clue as the initials "G.S." upon a watch charm worn by one of the culprits, the detectives yesterday, after three days of strenuous labor, locked up three men charged with theft and receiving stolen property, and recovered nearly all of the $3,000 worth of jewelry supposed to have been lost at the Horse Show on the night of April 29 by Mrs. McCoy, wife of Dr. S. H. McCoy of St. Catharines.

It now transpires that the jewels were not lost, as Mrs. McCoy believed, in her box at the Horse Show, but were taken by the chauffeur from the automobile in which she was driven from the armories to the Queen's Hotel. They were given by him to an ex-policeman, and the shipper in a Front street liquor store, to be disposed of when the proceeds were to be divided. Each has confessed his part in the crime.

Since Wednesday evening, when they got the first clue, the entire detective department have been hard at work on the case, and Inspector Duncan, Sergt. Mackie, Detectives Guthrie, Armstrong, Archibald and Wallace have practically gone without sleep and food, so vigilant has been the watch which they maintained upon trains, hotels and lodging-houses in their efforts to locate the criminals and the jewels.

Those arrested are: Gibson Shannon, ex-policeman, now unemployed, single, 29 years, boarding at 419 Church street, charged with receiving stolen property.

Andrew Hepburn, chauffeur, single, 26 years, 405 Jarvis street, charged with theft.

Henry Crombie, shipper, single, 24 years, 54 Winchester street, charged with receiving stolen property.

Wednesday night the detective department got the tip that a man wearing a watch charm bearing the initials "G.S." and who had been seen in the uniform of a policeman in the east end four years ago, had tried to dispose of valuables answering the description of the missing McCoy rings.

The story of the loss of the jewels is told by Mrs. S. H. McCoy, who last night was staying with her mother, Mrs. J. L. Cook, 76 Evelyn crescent, West Toronto. She says that on the night of April 29, she and her husband had Garnet Chaplin and his sister of St. Catharines as their guests at dinner at the Queen's. They sat late at the table and when they started for the armories there was so great a hurry that Mrs. McCoy, who could not get her gloves on over her rings, put the jewelry in her chatelaine bag, which she carried with her.

Dr. McCoy's horse, "Viceroy," was to jump at 8.15, and they ordered an automobile from the head waiter at the hotel, who also manages the car driven by Hepburn. They drove to the show and the events were exciting. "Viceroy" won second prize and when they left the armories and drove away in the car, Mrs. McCoy was still excited. They drove their guests home, and returned to the Queen's. When Mrs. McCoy took off her cloak she missed her chatelaine, and at once surmised that, in her excitement, she had dropped it in the box at the show. The doctor telephoned the armories, but, although a search was made, no trace of the missing jewels could be found. They also notified the headwaiter, but the driver of the car had gone. Later, he denied all knowledge of the lost stones.

It now appears that he found them in the car and took them to Shannon and Crombie. The three held counsel and decided that they must get rid of all marks of identification. To this end, the white beaded silver mounted chatelaine and a valuable pearl handled lorgnette, which could have been easily recognized, were thrown into the bay at the foot of Yonge street. The stones were taken from a ring set with the great white pearl (value $900), and another set with three diamonds (value $550), and another (value $225) with nine diamonds, one of a good size. These were all found on Hepburn.

On Shannon, when arrested, were found three rings. One of these was set with 38 diamonds in a great cluster (value $800), another with five emeralds (value $100), and another with a great emerald and four diamonds (value $150). Later, another ring (value $400) was recovered in a place where he had left it.

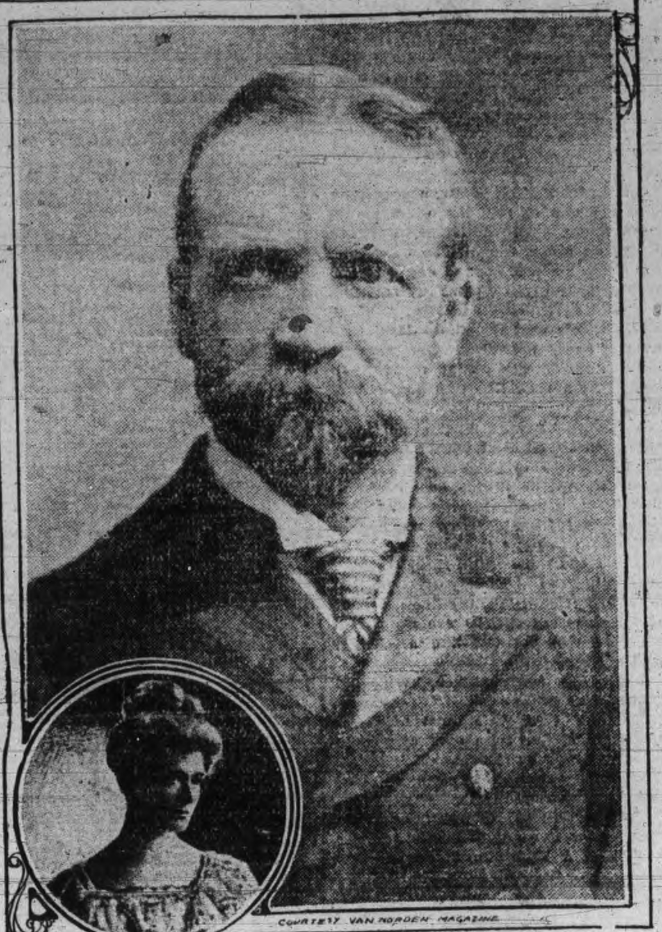
WENT INTO THE SKY TO SEE COMET



MRS. TODD · PROFESSOR DAVID TODD ·

Amherst, Mass., May 13.—Mrs. Todd and I ascended from Pittsfield, Mass., at ten minutes after two o'clock on Friday morning, May 6, and our pilot was Mr. C. J. Glidden, of Boston, to view the Halley comet. This was our second ascent together and his forty-first. We rose at once to a height of 3,000 feet, and maintained that altitude till about half-past four, following directly southeast along the Boston and Albany Railroad and Westfield, then across the Connecticut.

Just before reaching this place, while we were travelling harmlessly along, not even throwing out sand, we were fired upon by a rifle, the bullet whizzing through the balloon rigging. For a moment we were all in great consternation. Mrs. Todd was much unnerved, but soon regained complete control of herself, though she continued her assistance in my observations with much difficulty. She had already made the first discoveries of the splendid Halley comet at thirty-six minutes past two, very soon after it rose, of Venus awhile after and still later of the slender crescent of the old moon, which seemed to be far beneath our eastern horizon, as if actually seen through a transparent crystal earth.

We were all surprised at the magnificence of the comet. I had seen it at Amherst twice Friday morning, and its tail seemed four or five times longer than it was then, and the head very much brighter. I was for the first time assured that Halley cannot now disappoint us. A fortnight hence, when it comes out on the other side of the sun, everybody can then see this splendid historic comet in the northwestern sky after sunset. For the next week you must get up very early in the morning. The best time is from three to half past and due east, just above the horizon, a little to the north or left of the bright planet Venus.—By Prof. David Todd.

VENTRICINI CONDEMNED

Italian Murderer Must Hang on June Thirtieth.

Toronto, May 14.—To be hanged on Thursday, June 30, in Toronto Jail, was the sentence passed yesterday by Justice Riddell on Pasquale Ventricini, Italian, who in a drunken row, stabbed a compatriot to death on March 6. Ventricini bore up bravely in court, but afterwards collapsed and was in a dead faint for some time.

Before his doom was pronounced, the prisoner, addressing the judge in his own behalf, said:

"I can't understand why the jury and magistrate found me guilty of the charge.

"I can't say that I did kill the man, and if I can't, how can they?

"If the witnesses swear I killed the man, why don't they come forward and say they were going to kill me?

"If they saw I was going to kill him, why didn't they try to stop me?

"I saw these men coming in front of me, I was frightened. I can't remember."

Justice Riddell told him that he could hold out no hope that the jury's recommendation to mercy would let him escape the gallows.

"I have obtained from the jury the reason for their recommendation, and they tell me it is because you, a foreigner, had, perhaps, not got accustomed to our ways, and may not have wholly appreciated how contrary your act was to the laws of our land," he said. "Every man in Canada must obey the Canadian law at his peril."

Ventricini is 45 years old. A stated case has been asked for by T. C. Robinette, who objected to some of the evidence admitted in the trial and to the judge's charge. His lordship consented to consider these objections.

CONNAUGHT IN LONDON

London, May 14.—King George's uncle, the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the Duchess of Connaught, arrived in London yesterday evening from their African trip. They were met at the station by the King and Queen Mary, and the royal party immediately drove to Buckingham Palace.

King Edward's coffin was temperorily opened to give his brother a last view of the body. The casket rests in the centre of the throne room, which presents the appearance of a richly adorned private chapel. An altar has been erected on a dais beneath a canopy with a profusion of white flowers banked around it.

Only members of the royal household, the diplomatic corps and intimate friends of the late sovereign will be admitted to this private lying in state.

McLACHLAN GUILTY OF MURDERING HIS WIFE

Sentenced to be Hanged on July 14—Judge Says it Was the Most Shocking Murder Case He Ever Tried—One of the Worst Cases in the Annals of Crime.

Whitby, May 14.—Sentenced on Friday, the thirteenth of May to hang on July 13, for a crime committed on Friday, Oct. 29.

While it took the grand jury six hours to return true bills of murder against Archie McLachlan, charged with the triple crime of killing his wife and two infant sons, it only required one hour and twenty-five minutes for the trial jury to return a verdict of guilty at 5.35 yesterday afternoon.

McLachlan, who had borne himself rather bravely through the ordeal of awaiting the verdict, winced noticeably. His counsel, Mr. Henderson, spoke huskily, "I would ask your lordship that the jury be polled."

One by one the twelve men were asked by name: "Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty," came back in whispers.

Then followed a breathless pause.

"Gentlemen of the jury," began Justice Teetzel, "you have arrived at a verdict which I must say was fully justified from the evidence. I trust that you may never have such a responsibility again as you have had to-day."

Mr. Blackstock moved for sentence and the prisoner was told to stand up.

McLachlan swayed to his feet, and leaning one elbow on the rail of the dock, rested his cheek in his hand. And thus he stood staring glassily and avasively past his lordship.

"Have you anything to say as to why the sentence of this court should not be passed upon you?" No answer. Mr. Henderson stepped over beside the box, but the prisoner heeded not his counsel's touch on the shoulder.

"Your lordship," faltered Mr. Henderson, "we have placed ourselves before the country; have been found guilty and I suppose must abide by the results. I must ask your lordship to be as lenient as possible. It is one of those distressing cases where your lordship must exercise your duty, and I would but ask that you give us all the consideration you can."

Addressing the prisoner Judge Teetzel began: "Archie McLachlan, after a trial that has been eminently fair in all respects, and after your most able counsel has done all that could be done in your behalf, it has been found that you are guilty of one of the worst crimes in the annals of Canadian law. It is not for me to lecture you, but I must say that the circumstances make it the most shocking murder that I have ever tried. There is not a single mitigating circumstance.

"You seem to have lost all the better instincts of a man, violating your solemn vow to your wife, have been unfaithful to her who was under all circumstances a faithful, true wife to you. She was the mother of your children, and the most shocking part of it is, not only your wife did you kill, but two of your offspring. I doubt if there is a more horrible murder in the annals of crime.

"I shall give you an opportunity of making your peace with your Maker."

Then followed the formal words of the death sentence.

This trial pertained only to the charge of murdering his wife. Mr. Blackstock requested that the other charges of murdering his two children be formally traversed to the next Assizes and the judge so willed.

All through the trial proceedings McLachlan had maintained a confident and rather sneering air, asking to be taken outside occasionally and walking in and out composedly—almost defiantly—until George Tate Blackstock, in the height of his description of the dying agonies of the wife, turned toward the prisoner and said, "Who straightened those bedclothes, or, if she had contortions in bed, who held her down? There sits the man!"

McLachlan flushed, then turned pale, and seemed to shrivel up in the corner of the little dock. He remained with eyes downcast until the jury retired.

When sentence was pronounced, he looked like a man ready to swoon, and he had to be supported to his cell by County Constable Calverley. In the cell he revived sufficiently to remark, "Pretty hard feed for an innocent man."

Among the most interested spectators in the ladies' gallery yesterday were Miss Alma Nix and Miss Charter of Sunderland, who both figured prominently in the last two days' evidence.

Little Monta McLachlan, who will soon be the sole survivor of the Uxbridge tragedy, has been in Whitby throughout the trial, in company with her aunt, Mrs. Watson, who gave evidence against the child's father. She is a very pretty and cheerful child and has not been apprised of the doom that is hanging over her father, of whom she is very fond.

There were 130,000 words of evidence taken. The defence only had one witness proper. Three of those who were called by Mr. Henderson, were crown witnesses, but were not to have been called.

Before adjourning, Justice Teetzel expressed a very high appreciation of the action of the authorities for the prompt, intelligent and skillful way in which the case had been investigated and brought to an issue. He regretted that from his observations in other localities crime had gone unpunished and guilty parties had been allowed at large.

Five Perish In Flames.

Faribault, Minn., May 14.—Bert Sperry, his three children and their grandmother were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home in this city yesterday. Mrs. Sperry and two children were saved.

HE SPARED HIS BABY WHEN HE KILLED HIS WIFE

Child's Grandmother Discovers Murder and Suicide—Young Husband Played Pool and Neglected His Wife—A Tragedy in Leamington.

Leamington, May 14.—The quiet town of Leamington was shocked yesterday when the news of the murder of Mrs. Floyd Dresser and the suicide of her husband, both well and popularly known, was first sent through the town about 8 a.m. The parents of Dresser are well-to-do farmers, living on the outskirts of the town.

The Dressers were married here about two years ago. He was 20 years of age, and his wife a year younger, and, so the neighbors say, were always happy and cheerful. A baby girl was born about six months ago, and was evidently the delight of the parents. The father partioularly enjoyed the infant, and looked after it lovingly.

Young Dresser, however, has often been away from home in the evenings, and it is said by neighbors that the local pool rooms kept his attenton until late at night. His wife, it is said, often chided him on this lack of attention to her, but, as he worked at any odd jobs he could find, and therefore was frequently late to meals, she overlooked his shortcomings.

Young Dresser was playing pool up to about ten o'clock Thursday night, and gave no intimation to his associates that any such horrible thoughts were in his mind, as he certainly must have had before turning towards home.

From all evidence at hand, he deliberately shot and killed her, and then turned the revolver on himself, blowing his brains out, and falling across the bed in a pool of blood.

The neighbors were alarmed by Mrs. Oliver, mother of the young wife, who upon calling about 8 a.m. at her daughter's home, to give her some promised seed potatoes, found the blinds down and the doors locked, and, after repeated poundings at the door, heard only the cry of the infant. The kitchen door was broken in and the tragedy disclosed. Mrs. Oliver swooned, and was carried out by friends.

According to the medical examination, Mrs. Dresser was shot twice in the left temple, and the revolver must have been held within a few inches of her head, as her eyebrows and hair were burned. The man was shot in the forehead. He had two revolvers and two shotguns in the room. One of the revolvers was in his hand when found. On the sill of the window of the room was a small glass stopper bottle without a label containing chloroform.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Florence Nightingale on Thursday celebrated her 96th birthday.

The Ottawa observatory seismograph yesterday recorded an earthquake some 3,500 miles distant.

Bloodhounds have failed to trace the two-year-old child of Thos. France of Elkhorn, Man., lost since Sunday.

It is stated that the Duke of Connaught will probably be going to South Africa to inaugurate the new Parliament.

Edmund Burk of Montreal has made a big hit in London, Eng., as the high priest in the grant opera "Samson," in Covent Garden.

May Patterson of Granton, Ont., aged 10, was badly bitten by a mad collie belonging to her uncle, and has been sent to Toronto for treatment.

Proprietors of the Central Hotel, Comely House and Pacific Hotel, Owen Sound, were fined yesterday from $100 to $125 each on several charges of illegal liquor selling.

Three men were injured, carloads of cattle killed, and two cars of merchandise destroyed in a C.P.R. freight wreck near Heron Bay, on the Lake Superior County, Wednesday night.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley, at St. John, said he has the definite promise of Mr. Hays that the G.T.P. terminals will be at Quebec, and at Montreal in summer, and St. John and Halifax in winter.

Sir Edward Morris, interviewed in London, declared there was a great fortune in Newfoundland fisheries for anyone who would organize a cold storage system between Newfoundland and the United States.

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, has instituted a movement to end the squandering of Catskill funds. In an order obtained from the court he has directed three land condemnation commissioners to show reason why their services are so expensive and why they should not be removed. The commissioners summoned were George N. Rigby, Bernard F. Martin and James E. Apgan. Charges of neglect and extravagance are made, and the action by Mayor Gaynor is believed to be the first of a series of similar steps under consideration by the city's executive.

FRANK OLIVER CONTEMPLATES LONG TRIP

Ottawa, May 14.—Hon. Frank Oliver will leave for the west in the course of a week or so. The Minister has under contemplation a unique trip during the summer from Edmonton north through the Peace River district and Mackenzie River, right up to the Arctic Ocean, thence overland to Dawson City, and from there down to Prince Rupert and Vancouver. A detachment of Mounted Police will accompany him over the route from Edmonton to Dawson City, if he finds that he has an opportunity to take the trip.

FLEEING FROM FOREST FIRES

Grand Marais, Mich., May 14.—John E. Elving and his wife with their young baby, together with their six other children, the eldest of whom is 18 years, have reached here in an almost famished condition after a 30-mile trip through the forest between here and Upper Brule Lake. It took them five days to cover the distance, and they were alternately almost burned and frozen to death.

Two of the smaller children were saved from drowning in the swift current of the Brule River by the family's Newfoundland dog.

When Elving and his family were routed from their beds Sunday morning by advancing forest fires they beat a hasty retreat with a small stock of provisions. After tramping for three days in an effort to escape from the burning timber, they found themselves entirely surrounded by fires. Elving, with his hand axe, cut limbs from trees on the bank of the Brule River, sought a favorable place in the stream and stationed himself and his family near, deep in the cold water beneath a wetted screen of underbrush which they saturated from time to time until the fire burned out.

ARE SCEPTICAL ABOUT DISCOVERY

Ottawa, May 14—The geological survey is sceptical of reported discoveries of cannel coal along the Mattagami River in New Ontario.

"Such reports are made by prospectors," said an official of the geological survey, "and have to be taken with a grain of salt. These men are highly elated over any discovery. Many of these reports are also made with the idea of exciting public interest, in the hope of selling a part interest in the claim at inflated prices."

CANADA'S NEW FAST LINE

London, Eng., May 14.—The "Royal Edward", Captain Roberts, flagship of the Canadian Northern's transatlantic fleet, sailed from Bristol Thursday night on her initial voyage to Montreal with almost a full complement of passengers, 700 being aboard. Two special trains of the Great Western Railway brought the London passengers to the new station alongside the steamer in two hours' time.

PURPLE THE COLOR FOR DRAPING

Ottawa, May 14.—Information has been received from Lord Strathcona that the office of works of Great Britain is not giving any orders for the draping of public buildings; indeed, it is strongly advocated that there shall be no such display.

But in cases where such decoration is decided upon, it is the wish of the Government that purple only shall be used.

An Indian Uprising.

East Las Vegas, N.M., May 14.—An uprising of serious proportions has broken out among Pueble Indians at Taos, 70 miles northwest, and last night troops are hurrying by special train from Santa Fe to check a possible massacre of white ranchers.

The Indians have cut all telephone and telegraph wires.

AEROPLANIST WAS KILLED

Lyons, France, May 14.—Chauvette Michelin met a tragic death here yesterday while competing in the races of an aviation meeting. Michelin seemed to lose control of his aeroplane, which bumped into a telephone booth and then knocked over a derrick, which struck the aviator, fracturing his skull.

Michelin was only 23 years old.

To an assistant who wished him good luck as his machine arose yesterday, the young aviator said: "No more aviation for me after this meeting; I have had enough."

IMPRISONED AT EIGHTY

Washington, D.C., May 14.—H. P. Gilbert, aged 80 years, former vice-president of the defunct First Co-operative Building Association, was sentenced yesterday to imprisonment for one year in penitentiary.

Gilbert as an executor of an estate misappropriated $20,000.

Man Electrocuted by Live Wire.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 14.—Because he objected to paying $1.05 duty on a new pair of shoes, Charles Rice, a prominent Welland man, narrowly escaped arrest yesterday. Customs inspectors demanded the duty and Rice said he would rather be arrested than pay. The police were sent for. Rice paid when he saw the officer.

Coming in contact with a live wire, Harry Cannon was electrocuted yesterday. He was working on the Ontario Power Co. pipe line.

CANADA BUYS AEROPLANE

Ottawa, May 14.—The Dominion Government has purchased for $5,000 a biplane from the Canadian Aerodrome Co., of Baddeck, C.B. It will be used by the Militia Department, and will be delivered in Ottawa in a few weeks. It will be shown at militia camps.

Unrest In Egypt.

Cairo, Egypt, May 13.—In the belief that the death of King Edward and the resulting political confusion may be seized upon as an opportune time for starting an insurrection against English authority, the Government has stopped the leave of all British army officers in Egypt. The troops are being constantly practiced in field [illegible]

A SENSATION IS PROMISED

Hamilton, May 14.—S. D. Biggar, lawyer for the Finton family, said yesterday: "Within three or four days we expect to have a man placed under arrest charged with the murder of Elijah Finton, and entirely free our client, Tom Finton, of any suspicion."

Earl Grey Cancels Tour.

Ottawa, May 14.—Among the other engagements which His Excellency the Governor-General has been forced to cancel on account of the death of his late Majesty has been his proposed visit to Western Ontario.

Smallpox Postpones Hanging.

North Bay, May 14.—Because of an outbreak of smallpox in the jail, the hanging of Walter Ross will not take place until June 21.

MOTHER EARTH WILL BE SAFE

Washington, D.C., May 14.—Cyanogen is now practically absent from the tail of Halley's comet, according to a despatch from the Lowell observatory of Flagstaff, Arizona. The cyanogen bands appear strongest in the head of the comet.

Former Judge a Suicide.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 14.—Former Judge J. R. Corrigan, aged 50 years, a prominent Democratic political leader, committed suicide yesterday in the office of Dr. G. H. Hunter.

May 24 a Holiday.

Ottawa, May 14.—There appears to be some doubt as to whether May 24 will be a public holiday or not this year. As May 24 is a statutory holiday it will be observed as usual.

GHASTLY SCENE AT HANGING

Walla Walla, Wash., May 14.—Richard Quinn, executed yesterday for wife-murder, dangled at the end of the rope for 22 1-2 minutes and was able to unbuckle the straps about his arms and drop them to the ground before he strangled to death. The muscles of his neck were abnormally large and he made them tense just as the trap was sprung.

Spent $4,000,000 to Escape Jail.

New York, May 14.—F. Augustus Heinze, the copper magnate Thursday night acquitted of a charge of misapplying the funds of the bank of which he was president, said yesterday that the defence in two and a half years had cost him over $4,000,000.

OIL FUEL FOR NAVY

Ottawa, May 14.—Admiral Kingsmill yesterday said that the ships Canada will build for the navy will use oil as fuel. The British navy is now extensively adopting this system as against coal, and an expert visited the Ontario oil fields to ascertain the supply available. The oil can be piped on board, there will be less smoke, and therefore less "tell tale" from the ships' funnels. The docks will not require the same amount of holystoning, which is necessary when coal is burned. And the work of stoking will be reduced to comparatively no labor at all.

BEEN MISSING SINCE SUNDAY

Ottawa, May 14.—Thomas O'Hara, an employe of the Walters' Axe Factory, Hull, has been missing since Sunday evening, and it is thought he is a victim of the explosion. He had been drinking, and when last seen shortly before the disaster was on his way to sleep off the effects of the liquor behind one of the Explosives Co.'s buildings. O'Hara came here from Detroit about a year ago.

BETTER NEWS FROM ALBERTA

There was good news yesterday from South Alberta. The long drought has been broken by a heavy fall of rain followed by two inches of snow. It was too late to save a great part of the fall wheat acreage, but much of it has been re-seeded, and it is now hoped that the spring wheat will come through all right.

Fortunately, the Northwest is so vast and there are so many settlements that drought or frost in one or two does not spell ruin for the whole country. In the early days of settlement a frost or drought that destroyed crops in one section frightened people away from the whole Northwest. That was the experimental period and settlement was necessarily slow. Now, however, people in Eastern Canada are apt to imagine that the Northwest farmer has everything his own way. The fact is that, while it is a wonderful country, capable of supporting a great population in comfort, the pioneer farmers have many hardships and many discouragements. On the average, we think the farmers of Ontario have a much happier and easier time of it.

ROOSEVELT TO MEET THE KING

Many newspapers have referred to Col. Theodore Roosevelt's adventures abroad as if he were the official representative of the United States wherever he went, whereas he was actually only a private citizen, but he is actually to be the official representative of the United States at the funeral of King Edward. It is announced that King George has expressed a desire to receive the celebrated American. There can be no doubt that a friendly meeting between the King and the ex-President of the United States will have the effect of cementing the friendship between the United Kingdom and the United States. Mr. Roosevelt will take back with him kind thoughts of the new King, and the British people. He will not hesitate to say what he thinks, and his words will count for much in creating public sentiment in the United States.

CANNEL COAL FOR ONTARIO

Again it is stated positively that really good coal has been found in the Mattagami River district. This time it is asserted that cannel coal has been found under the lignite. The United States Steel Corporation is reported to have a prospector on the ground. Why should any of these coal lands be allowed to pass into the possession of the United States Steel Corporation or any other corporation? Instead of allowing prospectors to stake coal claims the Government should retain all coal for the benefit of the people of Ontario and in order to encourage prospectors offer large rewards for the discovery of good coal. However, any rights that have been acquired by prospectors under the present regulations should be respected by the Government.

It is to be hoped that the Government party recently sent north to investigate is composed of coal experts who can furnish a really reliable report.

CANADIAN PEACEMAKERS WANTED

Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, in moving in the Quebec Legislature the address of sympathy with the Royal family, said in reference to the work of King Edward: "War has been turned into peace and hatred into love and brotherhood."

The Ottawa Free Press thinks that no better words could be selected to carve on the first monument to King Edward erected in Canada.

It would be more accurate to make it read: "He aimed to turn war into peace and hatred into love and brotherhood."

These words might appropriately be placed on every monument to King Edward erected in Canada. And should not Canadians who read them reflect that what King Edward tried to do in world politics every Canadian statesman should try to do in the smaller sphere of Dominion politics. We have in Canada different races and different creeds. It is easy for a politician to stir up strife between them, but what a glorious future Canada might have if every one of our politicians would endeavor to emulate the example of King Edward, the Peacemaker, and strive on every occasion to "turn war" into peace and hatred into love and brotherhood."

Canadian newspapermen, too, should make this their great aim. Some of the French-Canadian Liberal newspapers continually endeavor to so twist the utterances of Conservative politicians and Conservative newspapers of Ontario into attacks on the French-Canadian race that their readers are given the impression that the whole people of Ontario are hostile to Quebec. On the other hand there are newspaper men in Ontario who search the French-Canadian newspapers for articles hostile to Ontario and pounce with delight on anything that can be made to appear disloyal to the Empire. How much better it would be to search for kind words and loyal sentiments, and it would be just as easy to find them.

COLD BROUGHT ON KIDNEY DISEASE

Brantford Lady Suffered Till Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs A. H Thomson had Heart Disease, Lumbago and Rheumatism, and Tells How She was Restored to Health.

Brantford, Ont., May 13.—(Special)—How Colds, La Grippe, and other minor ills settle on the Kidneys and develop Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Bright's Disease and other terribly dangerous ailments; and how any and all of them are cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills is fully shown in the case of Mrs. A. H. Thomson, whose home is at 48 Albion street, this city.

Mrs. Thomson was, some years ago, taken with Cold and La Grippe and Straining, which affected her Kidneys, and the result was Backache, Lumbago, Rheumatism and Heart Disease, which caused both her and her friends grave anxiety.

She had suffered some years when she heard of cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and bought a box, which she used with such splendid results that she continued to take them till she was cured. Since then she has used Dodd's Kidney Pills in her own family and recommended them widely to her friends, all of whom have warm words of praise for the standard Canadian Kidney remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Lumbago and Bright's Disease are all Kidney Diseases or are caused by diseased Kidneys. You can't have any of them if you keep your Kidneys sound and your blood pure. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys sound. Sound Kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood.

MR. BINNEY'S FAILURE.

Opinions by Neighbors, Creditors and His Family.

Mr. Binney failed in business.

One of his neighbors said, "At last?"

Another neighbor said: "I thought they were going it pretty strong for a man of his income. Still, I didn't like to say anything at the time."

A third neighbor said: "Oh, I'm so sorry! My dear, we must go over and give Mrs. Binney our deepest sympathy. I'm dying to see how she is taking it."

One brother-in-law said: "If he had lent me that $500 I asked him for last year he'd have been that much ahead, anyway. Much good it did him to keep it. Too bad, though, of course."

Another brother-in-law said: "Sly old boy, Binney. He's got it salted away somewhere, all right. Don't you worry."

His butcher said: "Now, a poor man like me has to pay his debts as he goes along. All the same, I'm not worrying about the $20 he owes me, but I'll bet you if I owed anybody $20 they'd make my life a misery till they got it."

His wife's best friend (to Mrs. Binney): "Now, my dear, you mustn't mind any of the awful things you hear. At a time like this people will talk."

A friend: "A man must either have exceptional capital or exceptional ability to succeed in business nowadays. Poor Binney, as it happens, had neither."

A second friend: "How much will he be able to pay? Twenty-five cents on the dollar? How did there come to be so much? Did Binney overlook it?"

A third friend: "Ninety-five per cent of business enterprises are unprofitable. There's nothing like a steady, well paying position."

A knowing acquaintance, "Wise old Binney."

His daughters, "We must hold our heads up higher than ever or people will say that we are ashamed."

His wife, "He'll be home more now, and that is everything."

Binney: "Whew! Thank heaven it's over. Now I've got to hustle and get a job."—New York Sun.

His Courtship

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

He took his pipe from his mouth and clasped his hands behind him as he bent back his head to the stars while he dwelt upon the picture of a revised Georgiana which his fancy called up. He was just wondering whether the deception he was playing upon her in his disguise might not be made in some way to work such a revision in her when his attention was arrested by the sound of approaching carriage wheels.

In the quiet of the country evening the beat of the horse's hoofs could be heard from a distance, and he had time to decide that it was no doubt the buggy containing the truant lovers that was coming up the road and to wonder how their return would be met by the angry heads of the house when the vehicle drove in at the barn, and he saw as he strolled in that direction that Abe was alone.

What had the fellow done with Eunice? Kinross was surprised into a quick feeling of alarm for the girl's safety. He was on the point of stepping after Abe into the barn to inquire after her when he bethought him that he would do better to keep out of the "mixup."

"It's none of my business. Of course Abe would justly resent my solicitude for the girl."

So, with the reflection that he was living in the midst of fast thickening mysteries, he shook out his pipe and went indoors for the night.

To reach his bedroom he had to pass the opening to the long, narrow hall which led into the redoubtable back building, and it was just as he came to this passage that his step was arrested by something which gave him a momentary thrill of excitement. The lamp he carried shed a light down the passage, and his eye was caught by a white figure moving swiftly and noiselessly at the farthest end of it. Almost instantly the figure disappeared. Whether it had run around a turn in the hall or dissolved into ether he could not be sure. Was it a wraith or what? Should he pursue it? No; its garb was too suggestive of a woman's nightgown to make pursuit on his part advisable. He would get Mrs. Morningstar's permission to sleep down there some night, and then, if ghost it were, he would surely make its acquaintance.

With this conclusion and feeling actually exhausted with the evening's succession of episodes he went to bed.

CHAPTER XII.

KINROSS' aversion next morning to departing with his books into the woods, the small interest he felt in the philosophy of the schools as compared with the philosophy of the actual life of the Morningstar farmhouse, led him to risk exciting the suspicion of his fellow boarders by "hanging round" the kitchen porch during the greater part of the forenoon.

On coming downstairs to his breakfast he had found Eunice, as usual, at her kitchen drudgery, moving about, as she always did, as though only half conscious of her surroundings. If as the result of last night's developments there had been a scene, the girl bore no sign of it.

He put a few leading questions to Mrs. Morningstar as she gave him his breakfast. This matter of his late and solitary breakfast had been a troublesome one to adjust in his assumption of the character of a farmhand, since not even his desire to retain his incognito would have induced him to get up to the family's 4 o'clock meal. He had finally, after considerable difficulty, negotiated with his landlady for breakfast in his room, except on such mornings as the coast was left clear by the early departure of the other boarders to the woods or "wherever," as Mrs. Morningstar referred to their wanderings.

"Well," he remarked as he broke an egg, while Mrs. Morningstar filled a glass with milk for him, "where was Eunice last night, anyway, when you were all looking for her?"

"Och, her!" snapped Mrs. Morningstar disparagingly. "Well, us we conceited she'd went off buggy ridin' with Abe. The way she tries behind my back to make up with our Abe! I tell her she hasn't a shame, and after all I done fur her yet a'ready!"

"But she had not gone with Abe?"

"No; here when Ollie she went up to bed I guess near an hour after we was astin' you had you saw Eunice anywheres, why, there was Eunice in bed asleep. Ollie she waked her and ast her where was she awhile back when we was all lookin' fur her, and Eunice she got stubborn headed and wouldn't answer to Ollie. She's the worst stubborn head, that girl is! I just believe she was out somewheres makin' up to our Abe. But Abe he got rid of her and went to see some other one, I guess, fur he didn't come home till late."

Kinross wondered whether the fond mother of Abe really believed that he was the unwilling victim of Eunice's Machiavellian plots to attract him or whether her maternal jealousy merely invented this reluctance on his part.

"I don't know what's come over Eunice here lately," Mrs. Morningstar complained as she sawed thick slices from a huge loaf of homemade bread. "Till a couple days back she always minded to me and pop and done what she was tole. Here this mornin' I jawed her fur not takin' that frock Miss Ellery wanted to give her. I sayed to her what right had she to as good as throw away a frock when us we had to buy her all her clo'es, but she wouldn't make me no answer. Then pop he sayed she is to tell Miss Ellery she's changed her mind and will take the frock off of her if she wants her to, and Eunice she didn't make pop no answer neither. Then pop he sayed to her did she understand she was to do it as soon as the young ladies come down this mornin', and, mind you, Eunice she tole pop she wouldn't! To pop she sayed that! I couldn't hardly believe I heerd it. Why, our Ollie she wouldn't have the dare to tell pop she wouldn't!"

"And Eunice never did so before?"

"Well, I better guess she didn't!"

"But what do you suppose has made the worm suddenly turn—that is to say, how do you account for her asserting herself like that all at once?"

"Och, her!"

"Well," said Mrs. Morningstar, "to be sure, no person ever offered her no frock before."

"There's something in that," Kinross admitted.

"And then I wouldn't put it past her that she's spunkin' up because she thinks she's gettin' our Abe."

"He is a prize," granted Kinross, with apocryphal sarcasm.

"I guess, too," Mrs. Morningstar vigorously acquiesced in this view of her son.

"What did Mr. Morningstar do about it when Eunice refused to obey him?" inquired Kinross, with interest.

"Well, I never seen pop more surprised. He jawed her and he argued her till he didn't know what to say to her no more. But she just kep' her stubborn head and sayed she wouldn't do it to take the frock. Then pop tole her she needn't wear it herself—she could give it to Ollie after the boarders had went home a'ready. Well, then, Eunice sayed, if Ollie wanted to wear it she'd have to ast fur it herself. Pop explained her that it was some different, too, ag'in, fur Ollie to ast fur clo'es off of some one to what it was fur a 'dopted girl dependent on other folks."

Mrs. Morningstar as she talked stood with her back to the door which led into the summer kitchen and so occupied was she with her story that she did not hear Eunice's light step as the girl came into the room bearing a pile of dishes that had just been washed. The clatter of the plates as they were placed in the closet made her turn with a little start.

Eunice also turned and stood with her back to the closet as she lifted her head and looked at her foster mother.

Kinross, his breakfast untouched, watched her with almost breathless interest. He seemed always to get a new impression of her face when her usually downcast eyes were raised and the soul that looked out of them was, as it were, unveiled. Those dark, luminous eyes suggested an intensity of life within of which the customary stillness of her bearing gave no hint.

She came forward and stood at the table. Her face was pale, and she spoke in a low, musical voice, with its little peculiar thrill, which Kinross was beginning to find singularly haunting.

"I overheard what you were saying to Dr. Kinross."

It was the first time she had spoken his name in the whole month of his stay at the farm, and it fell on his ears strangely.

"I have made up my mind that if you feel my support a burden to you and if I don't earn the food and clothes you give me I shall go away and earn my living elsewhere."

Mrs. Morningstar, unmindful of her boarder, stared for an instant dumfounded. "You'll go away!" she repeated, with a half gasp. "Where'd you go, say?"

"I don't know. But I will no longer accept charity—from you or any one. If you think you bestow charity upon me, I will go away."

"You've got the right to stay here and work to pay us fur all them back years we kep' you before you was old enough to work fur your livin'!" retorted Mrs. Morningstar angrily. "You leave pop hear you speak about goin' away, and you'll see oncet!"

"Abe tells me that almost ever since you first took me I have really earned my living by the work I have done and that for a long time I have earned wages besides, which have not been paid me. So it would seem," she said, with a dreary little smile, "that you are recipients of charity from me."

"Abe tole you that there?" exclaimed the woman. "I don't believe it! Our Abe he ain't that dumm! Don't you darst to leave pop hear you say Abe spoke you such things! Do you hear? He'd jaw Abe turrible. Do you hear?" she demanded.

"Yes."

"Well, are you obeyin' to me?"

"I will not promise that."

"Eunice! How darst you say you won't to me? You never done it before. What's come over you?"

"Abe says," the girl repeated, "that you have no authority over me now that I am of age."

"And what, I'd like to know, makes Abe put such things as them in your head!" she desperately cried. "Well, pop'll soon get 'em out—you'll see! Here!" she commanded. "Clear off these here things!"

Obediently Eunice turned to gather up a handful of dishes, with which after a moment she left the room. She had not once looked at Kinross.

"Now, you see," complained Mrs Morningstar, "how she tries to work our Abe till she gits him to talk things agin his own pop and mom to her! To think he'd say that us we owe her wages yet! Och, my souls!"

It was beyond expression, and she dropped it and began vigorously to scrape the plates that had been left after the breakfast of the young ladies.

As Kinross mechanically finished his own breakfast he was more than ever lost in wonder at the girl's infatuation for Abe Morningstar. It seemed inconsistent with everything else about her. It made him feel an unreasoning impatience with her and put a damper upon the sympathy he would otherwise have felt for her situation. He was possessed, however, with a strong curiosity concerning her, and during all the rest of the day he was on the lookout for an opportunity to talk with her alone. He realized with a grim sense of the humor of it that it was the first time in his life he had ever voluntarily sought to talk with a girl.

He found himself astonished and annoyed as the hours went by to realize the difficulty, the well nigh impossibility, of finding the opportunity he sought. The girl herself added to the difficulty with her shy reserve and a certain dignity about her which made him feel almost guilty of an impertinence in seeking her confidence.

So intent was he upon securing the chance he desired that he carelessly let himself be discovered by Georgiana and Daisy loafing on the kitchen porch in the middle of the afternoon when they would naturally expect him to be in the fields with his employer.

"Have you a headache again this afternoon?" Daisy curiously inquired as the two girls, looking warm and tired from a long walk, sank upon the porch steps where he sat.

"Yes, I have it in my head somepin wonderful," he readily lied.

"I am surprised," declared Daisy, "that Mr. Morningstar would employ such an invalid as you are, Peter—as much on the make as he is."

"If farmhands wasn't so scarce to get," Peter answered, recklessly improvising Pennsylvania Dutch dialect, "he wouldn't keep me."

Mrs. Morningstar, who had stepped out to the porch bench to "pick over" a pan of gooseberries, just in time to hear this remark of Peter's, bent back her head and gave forth a loud laugh. "You bet he wouldn't!" she cried.

"Well, since you aren't working," Daisy suggested, "you can put in your time forgetting your headache by amusing me. Can you play euchre?"

"I don't play nothin' but hymn tunes."

"Oh, my gracious!" groaned Daisy. "Well, it isn't any of my business to butt in, but I should think," she observed reprovingly, "that you would at least make good your lost time, Pete, by helping Mrs. Morningstar to pick those berries. But I suppose," she added, taking on her air of acquiring useful information, "that to help a woman would not fall in with your ideas of manliness, would it? The Germans of rural Pennsylvania are just like the Germans of the fatherland in that respect at least—their lack of gallantry to women. I was in Germany three days last summer, and in all that time I never once saw a man chivalrously help a woman. And about here!" She rolled up her eyes expressively.

"Now," protested Pete, "I seen a native help a woman with a basket this mornin'."

"You must have been mistaken, Peter," Daisy said incredulously.

"No, I ain't neither. I seen him when he done it."

"Was he a Pennsylvania German?" she asked skeptically.

"Dutch as snitz."

"I'd like to make a note of it," she said, gathering up her pencil and book. "Tell me, Peter, what were the circumstances and how did he help her?"

"She was his wife, and he helped her fasten a basket on her back to carry into the village."

Daisy dropped her notebook and looked at Peter severely, while Georgiana gazed at him pensively.

"I am disappointed in you, Peter," Daisy said reproachfully. "Miss Ellery and I both supposed that you had fine though undeveloped perceptions or intuitions, which, with a little encouragement, might reveal you to yourself."

She turned her back on him in disdain and began to help Mrs. Morningstar with her berries. "You're not worth while, Peter," she cast at him over her shoulder. "A man with such views is capable of other underhand dealings."

Georgiana sighed. "If my faith in human nature were not very large I should believe that to give even a suggestion of real chivalry to a born Pennsylvania German was almost a psychic impossibility. Frankly, Peter, isn't it?"

"It may be that kind of an impossibility," answered Peter in a tone of reluctance to commit himself, "since you say so. I ain't denyin' no such statements."

"But, Peter, I had hopes of you that day you so nicely picked up my hatpin for me," said Georgiana in her pat-on-the-head tone of voice.

"Done it to see how the pin was made, that you could stick it through your skull and not kill yourself," he said, disclaiming any gallantry in the act.

Both the girls regarded him dubiously, but the stolidity of his face was impenetrable.

"Pete," said Daisy frankly, "sometimes I have a suspicion that you're foxy and are jollying us. Say, what dandy big gooseberries these are!" she exclaimed, with characteristic irrelevance, eating more than she picked, to Mrs. Morningstar's evident discomfort.

"Daisy," said Georgiana in a tone that dropped Peter and Mrs. Morningstar out of the conversation, "did you get any news in your letter from Belle?"

"News! Well, I should say! Don't you think—the Civic club in its prospectus for next winter's work has gone and put me—me—down for a paper!"

Consternation was in her face and voice. Georgiana smiled.

"About what?"

To be Continued.

FOR LITTLE BABIES AND WELL GROWN CHILDREN

Baby's Own Tablets are good for all children, from the feeble baby whose life seems to hang by a thread to the sturdy well grown child whose digestive organs occasionally get out of order. These Tablets promptly cure all sickly, ailing children well and strong. Mrs. H. Greenfeld, Embro, Ont., says: —"Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for children. Special Announcement to Women!

"Free Soap Week" is on the way.

Very soon we are going to give away, absolutely free, a 10c cake of Infants' Delight Soap—the toilet soap that carries beauty with it. We can afford to do this because the first cake will make it "your soap" for all time.

Meanwhile we are going to tell you about Taylor's Borax Soap, our wonderful laundry soap. Thousands of women use

Taylor's Borax Soap

The Soap Your Grocer Will Recommend

They know that it banishes the burden of wash-day by doing twice the work of other soaps with one-half the labor. That it makes clothes whiter and cleaner than any yellow soap.

One woman, or even ten women, might make a mistake in changing from one laundry soap to another, but when so many women discard their soaps for ours, it is no mistake. It is positive proof of the superiority of Taylor's Borax Soap. A 5c cake will convince you. Get it today.

Watch for "Free Soap Week"

This page will tell you when and where you can get a 10c cake of soap free. Save our advertisements for the next week so that when the big offer appears you will have the whole story before you. Watch for the window displays that dealers are to make generally throughout the city during Free Soap Week.

VICTORIA HARBOR AIR LINE TO CONNECT WITH PETERBORO

Mr. James Oborne. General Superintendent of the C.P.R., Waited on Committee of Whole Council Last Night and Explained Company's Intentions and Request to the City—Special Committee and Officials Hold After-Session.

There was a decided difference of opinion expressed at the meeting of the committee of the whole council last night as to whether the city could afford to grant the C.P.R. the concession it asked for in connection with the junction of the Victoria Harbor air line and the main road. The proposal is not a new one, and when considered before was left in the hands of a special committee to deal with.

At last night's meeting Mr. James Oborne, the C.P.R. general superintendent, addressed the committee on behalf of the company. At the last meeting of the council, he stated, the principal objection to the proposition as then submitted was that the entrance of the railway to the city on the plan suggested would destroy one of the best residential sections of Peterborough. The company, on due consideration, thought there was good grounds for this. Several railways had been made since then, however. The streets that would have to be closed by the city if the present scheme of the company were carried through, would be Stewart, Rink, Park and Chamberlain and the company would build a subway on these streets if the city would give the property for erecting the freight sheds by transferring to them all the land on the waterfront west of the C.P.R.'s spur line to the Quaker Oats. The exact point of entrance had not been decided upon by the company, but it would be made in such a way that the resoidential section would not be injured. Mr. Oborne said that it would probably not be necessary for him to enumerate the advantages to Peterborough that would result in the construction of the road, but the chief one would be that it would give Peterborough practically direct connection with the great west.

Ald. Hicks said he would like to know just what the company desireed in connection with them obtaining the land. Did they want to buy it or did they expect it would be given to them?

To this Mr. Oborne replied that the company looked to the city to give them the land.

Ald. Hicks stated that the city had spent a lot of money indirectly in bonusing factories by giving them sites. He didn't think the C.P.R. were entitled to get the finished product for nothing.

Ald. Buller understood at the meeting at which this proposition had been discussed before that Mr. Oborne had intimated the company would have car shops here in case the line was built and would make Peterborough one of its big mechanical centres.

Mr. Oborne said he thought this matter one of comparative indifference or small moment in comparison with the benefit Peterborough would get from such an excellent connection with the west. The building of the line would give the Quaker Oats a direct line with western Canada, and this would greatly facilitate the shipment of the supply of raw material. The construction of the road would mean the adding of another spoke to the wheel of which Peterborough was the hub. The giving of the land would be the means of obtaining a very important transcontinental railway.

Ald. Turner didn't think that the passing through Peterborough of a thousand transcontinental passenger trains would be of any benefit to Peterborough and was not in favor of giving the waterfront to the C.P.R. or any other company.

Ald. Hicks suggested that the matter be left in the hands of a smaller special committee, and at the conclusion of the session the committee, consisting of Mayor Morrow and Ald. Phelan and Bradburn, with the addition of Ald. Hicks, took up the matter with Mr. Oborne and Mr. Angus MacMurchy, the C.P.R.'s solicitor. City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall was present in the city's interests.

The result of this meeting will be announced shortly.

"EVENING INTERIOR EXHIBIT"

Always watch for our exhibit every evening immediately inside of each door of the main store. These exhibits are enclosed in walls of green velour and are distinct from the rest of the store. Only the most exclusive, natty goods are shown. This is practically the first of its kind in Canada and as such is attracting great attention. Always watch our doors as well as our windows as this is a permanent feature of the store. Next Saturday night the north door will be closed at 6 o'clock and an exhibit will be arranged. Enter at the south door.

THE COUNCIL WILL ATTEND SERVICE

At last night's meeting the committee of the whole council decided to accept the invitation of the Ministerial Association to attend in a body the memorial service to King Edward on Friday.

"BUSTER BROWN"

Once more the familiar and welcome features of the great Outcault creations, Buster, Tige and Mary Jane, greet us from the pages of the newspapers, billboards and windows. Once more the interest of our community is aroused at the prospect of seeing this inimitable trio and their big crowd of assistants in the art of funmaking. "Buster Brown" has become an annual visitor to almost every town of any importance throughout the land. The child that saw him last year, with the added dignity of one year, tells his younger brother or sister of the delights to come. The promise "to see 'Buster Brown' when he comes" is a guarantee of perfect behavior for a time at least. The cast is stronger and better than ever this year. Everything that could be done to improve the performance in the way of new songs scenery and costumes has been added, so that "Buster Brown" as now presented, is second to none in the greatest of all favorite forms of entertainment, comedy with music.

The date is fixed for Thursday, May 19th, at the Grand. Plan opens Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

PUBLIC MEMORIAL SERVICE AT ARMORIES ON FRIDAY

Will be Held Under the Auspices of the Ministerial Association—Brief Address by Rev. J. G. Potter and Rev. H. R. Trumpour—Band Will Supply Music for the Services

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association yesterday afternoon arrangements were made to hold a general memorial service in honor of the memory of the late King Edward. By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Stevenson, the use of the armories has been granted for the service, and it will be held there next Friday morning from 11 to 12 o'clock.

Brief addresses will be given by Rev. J. G. Potter and Rev. H. R. Trumpour, and the music for the service will be furnished by the 57th Regimental band. Rev. E. A. Pearson, as president of the Ministerial Association, will be in charge of the services. Seating accommodation for a very large congregation will be supplied.

A meeting of the Ministerial Association, at which fuller details will be arranged, will be held on Monday.

LATEST NEWS OF THE COMET

The Astronomical Society will meet in the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday night, when the most recent views of Halley's comet will be shown and the most recent information concerning the comet will be given. The evening will be an interesting one to the general public. All are cordially invited.

LOCAL AGENTS WERE WINNERS

Messrs. Young and McConkey, local agents for the International Harvester Co., were successful in the district competition for the largest record of sales of the "Corn King" manure-spreaders. Mr. Wm. Galbraith, the local salesman for the company, had the excellent record of twenty sales to his credit, and won the blockman's prize.

Besides this number, fifteen of the implements were sold from the rooms of the company on Water street. The competition was open from April 25th to May 7th.

WAS HONORED BY MEMBERS OF COURT CHEMONG I. O. F.

The members of Court Chemong, No. 530, Independent Order of Foresters, held a successful and interesting meeting on Thursday evening in the S.O.E. Hall. The meeting was presided over by Chief Ranger Bro. Rooke, and there was a good attendance of members present.

Bro. A. Bradshaw, D.S.C.R., has now recovered from his recent illness and is again able to attend to the organizing department, and as a result twelve new members have been added to the membership, these being all duly initiated by the original form, which proved very interesting.

A pleasant incident of the evening was the presentation of a suit case to Bro. E. P. Clarke, S.W., who is about to leave for the west coast. Bro. A. Allison, S.P.C.R., who presented the gift from the court, referred to Bro. Clarke's energetic and faithful attention to his duties as a member and officer of the court, and on behalf of the members wished Bro. Clarke every success in the west.

Bro. Clarke, although taken by surprise, thanked the members for their unlooked for kindness.

Several of the members referred in feeling terms to the loss the Empire had recently sustained in the death of our beloved Sovereign, King Edward VII., and on motion this was placed on record and the charter draped; also that a letter of condolence be forwarded to Queen Alexandra.

The court, at a previous meeting, unanimously decided to hold their annual church service on Sunday evening, June 19th, in St. James' Methodist church, and the chief ranger announced that all the arrangements had been made, and that a cordial invitation had been extended by the management of St. James' church to all the members to attend divine service on that evening.

The court decided to run their annual excursion to Burleigh Falls by the steamer "Otonabee" on Peterborough Civic Holiday. A portion of the time at the next regular meeting on May 26th will be of a musical and social nature and will be in charge of several of the companions and brethren.

READ EVERY DAY ABOUT THE COMET

Recognizing the very general interest in the advent of the comet, known as Halley's comet, The Daily Review has arranged with the Dominion Newspaper Syndicate for a series of articles, written by Waldermar Kaempffert, the astronomer of the Scientific American of New York. This periodical is probably the most widely read of any scientific publication, and The Review by special arrangement gains the use of a series of articles. Each day will appear an article giving an account of the movement of the celestial visitor, and the time of the rise of sun and comet for each day for this locality will be published.

Read the series of articles. You will not have to ask your neighbor for information, but can find it first-hand in the Daily Review.

ARRESTED IN CAVENDISH; WILL FACE SERIOUS CHARGE

Thomas Windover Taken Into Custody at Home of His Nephew, Who Alleges That Prisoner Assaulted His Wife—Preliminary Hearing Next Thursday.

Thomas Windover, who it is stated, is regarded as a "bad man" by the residents in the county to the north of this city, was arrested at the home of Nelson Windover, in Cavendish township, last evening at six o'clock by County Constable Wm. Dickson, of Westwood, and brought to this city about midnight and placed in a cell at the police station. The prisoner was arrested on complaint of his nephew, Nelson Windover, who alleges that on April 21st, the prisoner went to his home, where his wife was alone, and by pointing a loaded rifle at her face, subjected her to indignities.

County Constable Dickson went to the home of the complainant yesterday in company with County Constable Montgomery of Buckhorn, and Windover was found there. He resisted arrest, but after a hard struggle was handcuffed by Constable Dickson. He has a wound on his forehead and the constable's clothes are bespattered with blood.

Windover appeared before County Magistrate Edmison this morning and was remanded to jail till next Thursday, when he will receive a preliminary hearing.

Mr. G. M. Gordon will conduct the case in the interests of the prisoner, who will face several serious charges.

OFFICIAL BOARD REPRESENTATIVES

At a congregational meeting of the Charlotte St. Methodist church after prayer service the following representatives were elected to the Official Board for the ensuing year: R. F. Downew, H. B. Collier, B. P. Wright, W. Galbraith, W. P. Adamson, J. W. Green and Mr. Throope.

BAILLIE INQUEST RESUMED; LIFE MIGHT HAVE BEEN SAVED

The Baillie inquest was resumed at the county council chamber last night, with Coroner Grey presiding. Considerable evidence was taken and another adjournment was made to Thursday, May 19th, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Greer was first called and he presented a report of the post-mortem examination made on the body of the dead boy.

The principal organs of the deceased were in very good order. The body was much emaciated. There was a deep cervical abscess. The left lung was found to have pneumonic consolidation and death was due to pneumonia and the cervical abscess.

Witness also produced a report from Dr. Amyott, of Toronto. This report was in regard to specimens taken from the dead boy's throat and analized. The report had very little bearing on the result of the inquest.

Dr. Greer said that there would have been a fair chance of saving the patient had he had medical treatment.

Dr. Eastwood agreed with Dr. Greer's evidence.

Mr. James Baillie and Mrs. Baillie, the parents of the deceased, gave evidence, which, however, was of little importance.

The Rev. M. P. Talling, Ph.D., of Toronto, will occupy the pulpit of St. Paul's church to-morrow at both services. As Mrs. Pogue has been seriously ill throughout the week, the managers and elders made arrangement that Mr. Pogue should be free from preaching to-morrow. Dr. Talling, who takes charge of the services, is well known to the people of Peterborough, and loved by the members of St. Paul's. Large congregations will no doubt wish to hear his messages.

W.F.M.S. Annual Meeting

The Peterborough Presbyterial of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will hold their annual meeting in the Presbyterian church, Norwood, on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 17th and 18th. The afternoon and evening meeting on Tuesday, the 17th inst., will be open to the public and a cordial invitation is extended to all interested in missionary enterprise to attend. In the afternoon Miss Campbell, of India, will give an address, and in the evening Dr. J. M. Waters, of India, will speak. A collection will be taken.—Norwood Register.

WHO IS HALLEY?

To-morrow morning the comet itself will not be visible before sunrise, because it lies below the horizon in the East. However, its tail may be seen projecting above the horizon in the East, to the right. The sun rises at 4.29.

Edmund Halley, the man whose name will be forever linked with the famous comet, now in the skies, was one of the most distinguished scientists the world has ever seen. His achievements are all the more remarkable because he lived at a time when even the more commonplace knowledge of our day was possessed by only a few astronomers, and because it was largely due to his efforts that Sir Isaac Newton, his scientific councillor and most intimate friend was induced to publish the famous treatise in which the immutable laws of gravitation were first given to the world.

Halley was born in London on November 8, 1656. Even in our time, when children in knickerbockers discourse on the fourth dimension before learned Harvard professors, he would have been regarded as a prodigy. As a boy he was a skilful mathematician and practiced astronomer. At the age of twenty he set out for St. Helena, the island which afterwards served as Napoleon's prison, to make the first really systematic chart of the southern heavens, a purpose in which he was aided by his well-to-do father, and the Indian Company, by whom the island was controlled. The importance of that expedition may not be apparent to one who is not engaged in astronomical research. To the astronomer of the seventeenth century, as well as to the astronomer of the twentieth century, Halley's work is all important. Most of the civilized communities of the world, in ancient times at least, were situated north of the equator. Hence it is that the more valuable stellar observations made by the ancients and the astronomers of the middle ages, astronomers who were really more astrologists than astronomers, were confined to the northern heavens.

It was in 1684 that Halley first realized the tremendous importance of the law of gravitation which his friend, Sir Isaac Newton had previously discovered. Newton was a comparatively poor man. Halley, although not poor, was reduced in circumstances. The Royal Society of London could not pay for the printing of Newton's work. Yet Halley felt that the world was the loser by deferring the printing of an epoch-making discovery. Accordingly he paid for the publication of Newton's "Principia" out of his own pocket, and thereby enabled England to claim for one of her subjects the credit of a discovery which might easily have fallen to the lot of a foreign astronomer. Newton's "Principia" proved to be one of the scientific "best sellers" of the day; for Halley's expenses were afterward refunded from the proceeds of the "Principia's" sale.

Halley did more than play the part of a maecenas. He drove home the universality of the law of gravitation by mathematically proving that Newton's law applied not only to the planets constituting the solar system, but to those occasional celestial visitors, which, under the name of comets, had spread terror throughout the ages and had been regarded as the the harbingers of evil. He computed the orbits of some twenty-four comets, and noticed that those of 1531, 1607 and 1682 seemed to return after a period of seventy-five or seventy-six years. He concluded that possibly they might be the same body, and that this body had a definite period of revolution. The slight differences in the recorded intervals he attributed, and attributed correctly, to the influences of the planets past which the comet drifted as it journeyed forward and from the sun. After making due allowance for all perturbations, he computed that the comet would return to the sun's vicinity about the year 1758. Accordingly, at the end of the mathematical investigation of this comet, he wrote;

"Wherefore, if according to what we have already said, it should return about the year 1758, candid posterity will not refuse to acknowledge that this was first discovered by an Englishman."

The comet blazed forth on Christmas day 1758, and ever after it has been called Halley's comet.

Haley was not only a good astronomer, but a good navigator. He was one of the first men who thought of systematically studying the magnetic variation of the compass so that navigation might be made safer, and was therefore a pioneer on a field of scientific investigations which has probably been brought to its highest point by the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

After his voyage he was made successively Professor of Geometry at Oxford, Secretary of the Royal Society, and Astronomer Royal of England, in which last capacity he did much to habilitate the Greenwich Observatory. It was during this incumbency that the famous Captain Cook was sent to the South Sea Islands, partly at Halley's instigation, to observe a transit of the planet Venus across the sun's disc.

Halley died on January 14th, 1742, at the ripe age of 85. Old as he was, unfortunately he could not see his famous prediction of the return of the comet of 1682 fulfilled.

Besides being a man of remarkable scientific attainments, tradition tells us that Halley was a man who keenly relished the lighter moments of life. When Peter the Great was staying in England, he conceived a liking for Halley, which expressed itself, as Peter's likings usually did, in hilarious drinking bouts. It is stated that after carousing with him at Deptford one evening, the Great Peter wheeled the great astronomer in a barrow through a yew hedge, with the result that he had to pay handsome compensation to John Evelyn, the owner. Evidently, Shakespeare was right in surmising that not every astronomer plucks his judgments from the stars.

CROPS GOT A GOOD START AND WILL NOT BE AFFECTED

By the Cool Weather and Heavy Rainfalls—Growth Now Much Ahead of What it Was at This Time Last Year—Warm Spell Will Give Desired Stimulus.

Since the advent of the present cool weather, and the recent heavy rainfalls that have been prevalent throughout the country, some serious alarm has been entertained, lest they should produce a harmful effect on the early crops. In conversation with a couple of prominent farmers to-day, the Review learned that the growth of all crops is progressing in a manner entirely satisfactory. While the rain did effect them to a small extent only in the low-lying sections, the wheat had obtained sufficient growth to withstand it. In comparison with the time last year one farmer stated that the growth of wheat was considerably ahead of what it was last year.

Clover is also in splendid condition and well up. Owing to the early spring and the warm weather which accompanied it, seeding was able to be done very early, which accounts for the headway in all crops so far. All that is needed now is a good warm spell to bring everything along in good condition.

TORONTO CONSERVATIVES ARE IN CIVIC POLITICS

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Ont., May 14.—Toronto Conservatives are announcing their intention to run the municipal campaign on political lines, and to nominate a mayor and controllers at a convention of 1,500 delegates in Massey Hall in November next. The ward associations will select aldermanic candidates. The proposal was ratified at a meeting of delegates from every ward.

THE TARIFF BUNGLING OF LAURIER GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, May 14.—In the last hours of the session the Government called upon Parliament to sanction the tariff bargain made with the United States, whereby Canada reduces the duty on forty or fifty articles to induce the United States not to declare tariff war on her. Mr. R. L. Borden made an important speech which put the action of the Government in a striking light. There are, he said, three possibilities.

1. Can we ever in the future deal with those 40 or 50 items of our tariff without asking the consent of the United States? The government has put itself in this position:—That if Canada ever wishes to alter these particular duties she must ask the leave of the United States, or have the maximum tariff imposed on her.

2. Can we ever increase any item of our tariff without consulting the United States, or running the risk of incurring the maximum tariff? The United States looked at our tariff as a whole and said that, in view of its general nature, and of these concessions on 40 or 50 articles, it will consent not to impose the extra duty. But if we alter the general nature of our tariff we give them a pretext for penalizing us.

3. Can Canada give any tariff favour whatever to any other country—say to Germany or Italy—without instantly giving the same favor to the United States without receiving anything in return?

That is the mess that the Laurier Government has landed Canada into with its tariff tinkerings.

The sword which Josephus records being over Jerusalem before its fall, was probably Halley's comet, say F. C. D. Crommelin, of the Greenwich Observatory.

BRITISH BARRED FROM CANADA

London, May 13.—The Leader says: The more one examines the new situation which has been created by the recent order of the Canadian immigration authorities, the clearer it becomes that Canada's intention is to bar her doors to the British artisan. So we have the extraordinary situation of a British colony, won with British blood, protected by British arms and British ships, financed by British money, and developed to a great extent by British toil, closed to British men.

ANOTHER ACTION FOR DAMAGES

The Review noticed the other day the decision in the Bell v. City of Hamilton (sustained on appeal) by which the municipalities are required to exercise common sense and consideration respecting lumpy ice on the sidewalk in winter.

In Everett against the township of Raleigh, in which an iron pipe on the roadside injured people who accidently upset out of a vehicle, the point in this case seems to be that material left on the roadside, even if off the highway, if not lighted as obstructions on the roadway are lighted, will stick the municipalities for damages.

The safe in A. Horden's store at Plum Coulee, Man., was blown by burglars and robbed of over $700.

WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN TO OFFSET THE BIG FIGHT

New York, May 13.—The proposed evangelistic crusade, to offset what members of the clergy style the brutalizing influence of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, is taking form. Two New York preachers have accepted invitations to go to San Francisco and hold revival meetings as counter attractions to the big fight. They are Rev. John Wesley Hill, one of the originators of the crusade, and Rev. JohnCallahan, a mission worker. The Rev. Wm. A. Sunday, of Chicago, best known as Bill Sunday, the baseball evangelist, will also go to San Francisco to aid in the work, it is said here. The evangelists will begin their work several days before the fight.

New York business men who are opposed to this contest have subscribed funds to pay the necessary expenses.

ST. PETER'S WON WELL PLAYED SENIOR CONTEST

School Teams Hit and Fielded the Ball in Pleasing Style at the Oval—Score Was 4-2.

In a game that was featured by good hitting and fielding, Sough Central senior school league nine met defeat at the hands of St. Peter's team at the oval yesterday afternoon. The score was small, 4—2, and although the winners made a talley in their first time at bat, the Rubidge street ball tossers came right back in the second with two and looked good to land the contest. Classy fielding behind Heenan, however, blocked their attempts. St. Peter's evened up in the fourth, when O'Hern completed the circuit. He made first on his own hit and was chased home on hits by May and Bain. In the sixth, two more counters were secured, on three hits and a pass, Murphy and Morrow scoring. The South Centrals looked good to tally in their half but with one down, a double play by Morrow, retired the side.

Both Barrie and Heenan twirled nice ball, but the latter was steadier. He issued no passes and struck out three, while Barrie in the six innings allowed three batsmen to walk, but struck out four. He was replaced by Parker in the seventh.

APPROPRIATE CEREMONIES FOR CITY LEAGUE OPENING

Everything is lovely, Lizzie. The clubs of the City Baseball League know who is who and what's what. Last evening at the meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. the representatives of four clubs took a peep into the future and transacted business accordingly. In order that the schedule will not be interfered with, each club agreed that they would not arrange a game for any Saturday during the schedule, and until after the first Saturday in August. This assures the playing of all games of the league without interruption. The first doubleheader will be played next Saturday and a committee will make arrangements for big league opening ceremonies. Several of the civic officials will be asked to take part at Riverside, and a parade of the players of all four clubs from some point to the grounds will be arranged for.

The T.A.S. and West Ends will clash in the first game with P. A. C. and Strathconas providing the excitement in the second. Ladies will be admitted to all games free; gentlemen will be charged 15 cents and the juvenile 5 cents.

At last night's meeting there were present, the president and secretary, and Messrs. A. Quinlan, Jas. Doris, Jos. Sharoe, H. Reid, F. D. Craig and W. Metheral.

HITLETS

Cold weather gave the Toronto and Providence teams a holiday yesterday.

Montreal shut out Baltimore and corralled six runs.

Boston beat Mordecai Brown at Chicago.

Only two Pirate players reached third in the Pittsburg-Philadelphia game.

"Connie" Murphy, who helped Peterborough win the Midland League two seasons ago, leads the City Amateur League at Toronto in hitting, with a percentage of .600.

LACROSSE

A Rochester dispatch says:—On April 16 the local lacrosse team was defeated by Cornell University, at Ithaca by a score of 3 to 0, after a week's practice. On the following Saturday they played a tie game with Hobart College, each team scoring one goal. Hobart College in turn defeated Columbia University 10 to 1.

Since then the local players have been practicing diligently and are in condition to give a good account of themselves when they meet the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, next Saturday. There are eighteen players who are striving to be selected for this, the biggest game of the season.

The team leaves Friday morning and they will be the guests of the Crescent Athletic Club during their stay in the big city. Last year the game was won by the Crescents by a score of 4 to 2, but next Saturday the locals expect to reverse this score as the team will be about 50 per cent. stronger than last season.

Tired of Juries.

Kingston, May 14.—Giving as his reason that he is tired of seeing bad men allowed off without fines by weak-kneed juries, Justice of the Peace George Hunter has handed in his resignation. Hunter is known as one of the fairest and kindest magistrates on the bench, and has been on the bench many years. The authority of the county magistrate is quite limited, as it is only in minor cases they can impose sentence, others having to go before a higher court.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

What a contrast! The kitchen no longer is stifling hot, the work is now done with comfort, and the housewife is not worn out with the heat.

She saves her strength, keeps her health and is better able to enjoy the summer.

The New Perfection does everything that any other stove can do—all the family cooking, baking, washing and ironing. No smoke, no dust, no odor. Heat is applied directly and not wasted. A turn, and the flame is out.

The New Perfection stove has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for the coffee pot or saucepans, and nickeled towel racks.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove very attractive and invites cleanliness. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

HOUSEMAIDS' CLUB.

An Enterprise of Vassar Girls to Rectify Wrong Conditions.

The maids' clubhouse at Vassar college is a comparatively new enterprise. The question of having a house was first agitated by the students' association in 1901, when the girls became actively interested in the unfortunate conditions in which the maids lived. There was no place for them to meet for any recreation or to receive their friends, and their own rooms were so crowded that rest was almost impossible.

Through 1901-2 the matter was discussed, and money was solicited from the college girls until the required $10,000 was collected. The building was completed and opened in March, 1908. Lewis F. Pilcher, professor of art at Vassar college, designed it.

The clubhouse is a concrete building, situated just behind the senior dormitory main building. It contains a library, living room, kitchen and laundry and an infirmary on the second floor. The furniture was donated by different girls or clubs, while the infirmary was equipped by the resident physicians.

The college girls pay the running expenses by individual contributions with the exception of light, heat and water, which the college furnishes. The salary for a resident supervisor is the largest item in these expenses. Miss Elizabeth Paine, a graduate fellow of sociology in the Woman's college, Baltimore, 1900, is the supervisor. Her duties are to be present in the clubhouse, where she lives, to make it attractive, to be ready to help the maids with advice and to guide the college girls in their efforts to help the maids.

The maids pay the expenses of their teas and parties and this year have pledged $100 to be used either toward the running expenses or the endowment fund which the girls are trying to raise. So far the alumnae have been able to help little in a pecuniary way toward raising the fund, but as soon as they have completed the girls' dormitory which they are building at Tokyo it is expected that they will help contribute.

The clubhouse is managed by a committee of college girls who act as a board of directors. The chairman is either a senior or a junior. This year the chairman is Miss Sarah Hincks, '10, of Andover, Mass.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia. Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate [illegible] by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

INEXPENSIVE DISHES.

Tempting and Nourishing Things Made With Calves' Brains.

With calves' brains one may concoct a number of tempting dishes rich in nourishment and small in expense, says the Delineator. Carefully prepared, brains are equal to sweetbreads, which they resemble, with the advantage that the brains sell for about one-fourth the price of sweetbreads. In all methods of cooking brains they should be given the same preliminary treatment—parboil them fifteen minutes in water to which have been added a dessertspoonful of vinegar and a little salt. Let them lie in cold water a few minutes, after which remove all dark streaks and skinny membranes. They are then ready to be cooked according to various recipes, some of which follow:

Calves' Brains Breaded.—Separate the lobes of a pair of brains previously parboiled; then with a thin, sharp knife split each division. This will result in pieces similar in shape and size to oysters. Beat the yoke of an egg, thin it slightly with cold water and dip the brains into this, then into finely crushed crumbs. Fry carefully in hot butter and lard. Garnish with quartered lemon which has been rolled in minced parsley.

Brains Saute.—Bread and fry the brains as directed, stir into the remaining fat a spoonful of flour and brown. Add one pint of hot water and two tablespoonfuls of tomato catchup. Now put the brains back into the pan, cover and simmer gently for fifteen minutes. Serve in a border of boiled rice.

Brain Pates.—Brown together a tablespoonful of flour and one of butter. Add one pint of hot water, a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce and one-half teaspoonful of onion juice. Now put in the brains, which have been cut into small dice shaped pieces, and let simmer, covered, for fifteen minutes. Fill hot pate shells with this mixture and serve.

A Working Man Who Rules Millions.

Herr Bebel, the leader of the German Socialists, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, is a wheelwright by trade. Although entirely self-educated, he is one of the finest orators and debaters in the Fatherland; and whenever he addresses the Reichstag he is certain of having a large and attentive audience. In such esteem is he held by the Socialists that millions will obey his will because they have implicit trust in his integrity. Herr Bebel neither drinks nor smokes, and, besides being a celebrity in the political world, has gained fame as a writer.

South Africa's Anthem.

South Africa has a brand new national anthem. The country endeavored for some time to secure a composition suitable for that purpose, and out of 150 compositions the work of Berthold Kaploowitz was chosen, and the citizens of Johannesburg had the first opportunity of hearing it performed after it had been formally accepted. The composer is not a professional musician. He is a civil engineer.

A Poor Substitute.

Mrs. Bright—You have become quite an adept in palmistry, I believe?

Young Mr. Squeeze—Yes; I have studied it for some time.

Mrs. Bright—Well, I have had a plaster impression taken of my daughter's hand, and if you wish to study it you can do so at your leisure. It will save you the trouble of a personal examination, you know.

ELECTRICITY ON FARMS

SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENTS ARE ACHIEVING GREAT SUCCESS.

Ald. Reinberg of Chicago Has Had Marvellous Results by Sending a Current Into His Flower Beds, But Finds That Color and Fragrance of Roses Are Not So Fine—Device for Measuring Growth.

More than a million square feet of glass cover the greenhouses owned by the world's most up-to-date florist.

Ald. Peter Reinberg, an enterprising resident in the go-ahead city of Chicago, is to-day the largest rose-grower in America.

His notable nursery successes in one particular direction have earned him the proud title of the "Carnation King," and of late Mr. Reinberg has been experimenting extensively along the lines of stimulating plant growth by electricity.

Not alone has Mr. Reinberg been treating his carnations and roses in the daring direction indicated, but he has also extended the new culture to various culinary vegetable subjects, with very encouraging results.

Ald. Reinberg, to begin with, laid a network of copper wire about two inches below the surface of the soil in one of his greenhouses. Currents of various strength were turned on for several days in succession, and ultimately it was found that the seeds and young stock planted came to maturity much more quickly than those sown in ordinary soil. The roots of the plants were larger, the blossoms finer, and in the case of flower bearing and vegetable bearing stems the crop produced was many times greater.

Though Ald. Reinberg's remarkable experiments may be considered too recent to estimate with reliability their permanent value in horticultural science, and practical flower farming, he himself is convinced that continued experiments will lead to the conclusion that electrified beds will be the rule rather than the exception in the not-far-distant future.

To many the idea may be new, but it has had tentative trial before on both sides of the Atlantic.

Some months ago Ald. Reinburg tried to hasten the growth and increase the size of certain favorite varieties of roses. He utilized by day, under glass, to the full the natural light and warmth of the sun, and by night he kept flaming arc lamps going. Also the hot-water apparatus of the greenhouses was brought into full service.

This strenuous forcing hastened the growth of the roses in a marked manner, but the gain in this respect received a very serious offset in the circumstance that the flowers so stimulated were found to lack the rich coloration and some of the perfume essential to their full acceptability. This has led, for the time being, to Ald. Reinberg's abandonment of the attempts to force roses and carnations unduly for the market to any large extent. But the bold florist is not without hopes of being able to discover some scientific method of securing conservation of color, beauty, and scent coincidently with the acceleration of growth and size expansion of his botanical subjects.

For some years past, it is interesting in this connection to note, the Russian Government has experimented with the use of electricity in stimulating the beetroots used for making sugar. Metal plates have been placed in the ground, charged with a current by connecting wires. This plan increased the amount of sugar from an acre of beets two and one-half times, besides bringing the plant to maturity in a shorter time.

Scientists have a clever little instrument that is used to record the daily growth of a plant. The top leaf of a seedling is held in a tiny clasp, which in no way harms the plant. To this clasp is attached a small lever, the point of which is furnished with an indelible pencil, which rests lightly upon a paper record. As the plants grow the pencil naturally travels upward, and leaves on the paper a record of the plant's growth. This shows the exact increase in growth of plants reared by electricity in relation to those grown normally.

Of course, electrical agriculture has advanced beyond the stage of experimentalism. That always active scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge, has, in conjunction with Messrs. J. E. Newman and R. Romford, devised a method of practical electrical culture, which is working satisfactorily on several farms in England; and the system has also been applied encouragingly upon half a dozen large plots in Germany, as well as upon one holding in Holland. This is the procedure followed:

A network of galvanized iron wires is suspended at a height of 18 feet on wooden posts 70 yards apart, about one post per acre being needed, and an ordinary dynamo, positively electrifies the wires to 60,000 to 100,000 volts. This electrification of the air over the soil continues eight or ten hours a day for five or six months. But little power is requisite, and the yield per acre is increased 30 per cent, and even more under some conditions, according to reliable reports.

It would surely be a good thing for the community were the most made of the possibilities opened up in this direction.

With the Author's Compliments.

A little boy wanted to give his mother a birthday present, and he did not know what to give her, so at last he decided to give her a Bible.

After he had bought it he did not know what to put on the front page, so after looking through some of the books in the library he decided to put the following on:

"To dear mother, with the author's compliments."

WORSE THAN OPIUM.

Queer Kind of Smoke Which Starts In Boyhood Days on the Farm.

"Opium smoking isn't in it with potato-stem smoking," states a doctor. "Usually the vice—and there are more victims than you would imagine—starts in boyhood days on the farm, when the youngster of the family steals his father's pipe and hides with it and some matches down behind the garden fence or behind the barn next to the field potatoes. He doesn't dare to take up the straight tobacco, but he tries out some dried potato stem in the pipe.

"The smoke sets the experimenter into a delicious dreamy state at first, but the heart action accelerates in a minute or two in an effort to throw off the poison through the lungs and skin. The dreamy state quickly disappears, the face gets flushed and the heart action rapidly increases to severe palpitation.

"If the dose has been large the victim feels a wild, fierce elation and impels him to action of any kind. In this state he may do anything, but the stage is reached much more quickly than with alcoholic liquors.

"At this stage the heart action weakens and there is either stupor or syncope, in which the victim of the potato poison lies practically paralyzed and unable to move, while his brain is in an insane whirl. This represents the height of the intoxication, and it is followed by acute depression and melancholia and a slow return of the physical powers.

"The potato stem smoke speedily draws a victim down. He grows pale, is gaunt and emaciated, ends up with violent acute mania, usually with homicidal tendencies.

"I had one case of the kind. A boy of 16 caught the habit trying to find a substitute for tobacco. He only lasted about three years. There wasn't anything that could be done for him.

"This young chap couldn't be restrained or changed from the potato stem craving by any of the usual drugs. He was kept in bed, roped down, during the maniacal stage that he went through. Morphine didn't seem to do any good. The moment he was freed, after recovering somewhat, he would make a rush for the nearest potato vines, trying to get and smoke the stems, which he secreted in many places cunningly hidden."

DISSERTATION ON HALLEY'S COMET

The regular meeting of Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society will be held in the Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. It will be "A Night in the Skies," with lantern slides. Special reference to Halley's comet will be made and the latest photographs of the comet shown. Rev. Dr. Marsh will be the lecturer.

GOOD BLOOD GOOD HEALTH

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood Cures Most Ailments.

The lack of sufficient red, health-giving blood doesn't end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are the tired, languid, run down folk who never have a bit of enjoyment in life. Food does not nourish, there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache, sometimes fainting fits and always nervousness. If anaemia or bloodlessness be neglected too long a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more blood cures all these troubles. Just more rich, red blood; then abounding health and vitality and pleasure in life. To get more blood the remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases the blood supply so quickly or so surely. The cure actually begins with the first dose, though naturally it is not noticeable. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been doing this over and over again in Canada for years. This is why thousands of people always have a good word to say about this medicine. The following is the experience of one of the many who praise this medicine. Mrs. J. J. Thibodeau, Bathurst Village, N.B., says: "Some years ago, while teaching school I became so run down that I could hardly walk. My breath was short and I had failed in weight and lost color. I had to rest several times on my way to school, and during school hours it took more than all my strength to fulfil my duty. My doctor advised me to give up teaching and take a long rest. But at this time a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got six boxes. I hadn't finished the first box when I felt a little better, and by the time I had used the six boxes I was fully recovered and enjoying the best of health. At a later date I was troubled with eczema and my faith in Pink Pills led me to try them again, and I was not disappointed, as they cured this trouble also. I can't praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too much for they have done me a power of good."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Drinking Serpent Venom.

The serpent is said to be protected from its own venom by certain properties in its blood, and it is a curious fact that certain members of South African tribes claimed to possess immunity from serpent bites because they had serpent's blood in their veins. Many writers, again, have stated that natives of the country are in the habit of drinking serpent venom. It appears to produce a certain not unpleasant form of intoxication, and to protect them against serpent bites. And that snake poison can be taken into the system in this way with impunity is one of the results of Prof. Fraser's experiments. He found that a quantity of serpent venom sufficient to kill 1,000 animals if introduced directly into the blood could be introduced into the stomach without injury.

What was the explanation of this strange fact? Prof. Fraser came to the conclusion that the animal's bile was the antidote to the poison. And on mixing the serpent's bile with its venom he found that the latter was deprived of its deadly effects. The same property in a lesser degree was found to exist in the bile of other animals. And the special constituent in bile which possesses the active property has been isolated, and promises to be one of the most powerful antidotes for snake poison yet discovered. And a French experimenter, M. Phisalix, has found that "cholesterin," one of the constituents of bile, is an antidote. Guinea-pigs inoculated with it were found to be immune from snake bites.

Ancient Doctors of Tibet.

The physicians of Tibet 1,500 years ago employed the same means of diagnosing the condition of a sick person as the physicians of the present day—they felt the patient's pulse, looked at his tongue, etc. Among the "remedies" which they recommended were not only vegetarian diet, baths, compresses, but also massage and cupping. What is more remarkable is that physicians who did not keep their instruments quite clean were severely punished. The ancient Tibetans were in this respect extremely modern. The old Tibetan medicine book prescribes that healthy persons should "lead an orderly, sensible manner of life."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Chocolate Nut Sticks.

First mix carefully together, says Woman's Home Companion, one cupful of fine granulated sugar, one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter, one unbeaten egg, two squares of unsweetened chocolate (melted), three-fourths of a teaspoonful of vanilla, one-half of a cupful of flour and one-half of a cupful of English walnut meats cut in pieces. Line a seven inch square pan with paraffin paper and spread mixture evenly in pan. Bake in a slow oven. As soon as removed from oven turn from pan and remove paper, then cut cake in strips, using a long, sharp knife. If these directions are not followed the paper will cling to cake and it will be impossible to cut it in shapely pieces.

THE LAST RESORT

When all else failed, the Doctors said, "try Fruit-a-tives"

And "Fruit-a-tives" cured Mrs. Cadieux

PLANTAGENET, ONT., JANUARY 31ST, 1910.

"About March 1st 1909, I was taken deathly sick with Stomach Trouble, Backache and General Breakdown. I failed from 125 pounds down to 80 pounds, was confined to bed for eight weeks, and was unable to eat or keep anything on my stomach, vomiting nearly all the time. I expected to die, and took many remedies as well as employing different physicians. The doctors said they could do nothing for me and, as a last resort, one of the doctors told me "to try Fruit-a-tives—if they would not cure me, nothing would".

MDE LAURENT CADIEUX

My husband bought "Fruit-a-tives" from Mr. Arthur Roleau, merchant of Plantagenet, and I started taking them at once, and inside of ten days, I was able to leave my bed. My stomach got strong and I could eat and retain my food. I gained rapidly and soon had my usual good health back again, and today I weigh as much as ever, 125 pounds."

MDE. LAURENT CADIEUX.

Even the doctors are recommending "Fruit-a-tives". They realize now that these wonderful fruit juice tablets will positively cure all Stomach Troubles, Indigestion and Dyspepsia—and they are using "Fruit-a-tives" in their practice.

Few people realize the vital importance of keeping their blood pure. Impure blood is the chief cause of Stomach Trouble, because it is from the blood that the stomach obtains the fluid which digests food. When the blood is laden with impurities, the disolving fluid (or Gastric Juice) will be impure. These impurities may come from a congested liver, from Constipation, from weak kidneys, from an inactive skin, or from all four. Naturally, the ordinary "digestive powders" and "pepsin tablets" will not cure the trouble, because they only help to dissolve the food—they do not go to the seat of the trouble. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest remedy ever discovered for all forms of Indigestion, Dyspepsia and other Stomach Disorders, because "Fruit-a-tives" is unequalled as a blood-purifying medicine. "Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver, regulates the bowels, strengthens the kidneys, stimulates the skin, and thus rids the whole system of all impurities. "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure you of any kind of Indigestion. "Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. If you are unable to obtain "Fruit-a-tives" conveniently, do not accept substitutes but send to "Fruit-a-tives" Limited, Ottawa and the regular size packages will be mailed you, postpaid, on receipt of price.

WORK STARTED FOR NEW FREE METHODIST MISSION

Excavation work was commenced yesterday for the Free Methodist Mission on the property on the east side of Aylmer street and north of King street. A permit taken out yesterday at the city clerk's office calls for an expenditure of $3,000 and this, added to the amount paid for the property which, however, is more than is necessary for the site of the new mission will bring the figures up to the neighborhood of $6,000.

The structure will be of solid red brick and the plans call for a modest but substantial building. There will be a basement suitable for providing two class rooms, furnace room, etc., and the auditorium will have seating accommodation for 250. The arrangement is for two aisles and three rows of seats. The entrance will be from Aylmer street and both the basement and auditorium will be accessible from the porch.

When the proposed mission was first suggested a year ago, there was but $250 on hand, but it is expected that when the mission is opened in the latter part of August or the first of September, there will be no indebtedness. Miss Lotta Babcock and Miss Kate F. Clarke are in charge of the mission work of the Free Methodists in this city, and while the work has, in a measure, been handicapped by lack of accommodation, greater accomplishments will no doubt be made in the future.

Mr. G. O. Haywood is the contractor.

CHIMES FUND IS GROWING

Rev. Canon Davidson said to-day:—"The members of the chimes committee are greatly encouraged and gratified to-day by a most handsome and unexpected donation of $200 from a small group of Peterborough citizens who express satisfaction that this enterprise promises to be carried out in a manner creditable to the city. As the donors are not members of St. John's, the broad-minded generosity of their gift is intensified and goes to further strengthen the spirit of unity so happily prevailing in Peterborough. Citizens generally will join the committee in warm gratitude for this valuable help to a public cause. This should inspire fresh efforts and wider gifts enabling this enterprise to be carried through in a manner pleasing to all. A contribution was also received to-day from Miss E. Melville, of Winnipeg, a former member of St. John's. The number of out-of-town contributions is quite striking as showing the feelings of past citizens for their old town and church. Many of these gifts are entirely unsolicited."

OBITUARY

LULU CATHCART.

The community of Springville express their deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Cathcart in the loss of their daughter Lulu, who passed away yesterday in Oxbow. The deceased, in company with her sister, Lillian, went to Oxbow nine months ago, where they carried on a most successful millinery and dressmaking business. The late Miss Cathcart contracted pneumonia and gradually sank until her death occurred. The remains will be brought to Springville for interment.

A TRADES AND LABOR MEETING

Next Monday evening a meeting of the representatives of all trades of the city will be held at eight o'clock in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Simcoe street. The election of officers of the local Trades and Labor Council will take place, and Mr. John E. Flett, Canadian representative to the International Council, will be present.

WOMEN AS SPIES.

All the European Powers Use Them For Secret Service Work.

A short time ago some valuable Admiralty plans disappeared from Chatham, England. Mr. McKenna, the First Lord of the Admiralty, admitted that they had been stolen, but a mystery surrounded their disappearance. It is now suggested that a well known international woman spy, who is ever ready to sell her services to the highest bidder, be it the Russian, German or French Government, was responsible for the disappearance of those plans. It is known that she was in England for some weeks prior to the incident and it is supposed that during that time she engineered the plot which resulted in the vanishing of the important papers.

It is only a short time ago that a beautiful and fashionably dressed teacher of languages, Fraulein Petersen, about 25 years of age, was arrested at Kiel, Germany, says Tit-Bits, on suspicion of being a French spy. She was said to have entered into a love affair with a non-commissioned officer named Dietrich of the explosives department for the purpose of inducing him to divulge important German naval secrets. Dietrich, flattered by the attentions of such a beautiful woman, could deny her nothing, and at the time of the arrest was said to have been supplying her with the formula for the manufacture of the German smokeless powder (one of the most effective yet invented) and the situation of the port mines.

In Russia, where the secret service is raised to the level of a fine art, the woman spy is recognized as an extremely valuable medium for obtaining information, not only about foreign matters but also concerning the various revolutionary movements going on at home. One of the most notorious of these feminine police spies is Mme. Jotchenko, who has been described as a female Azeff.

This person, posing as one of the Terrorists, took part in their enterprises, and discovering all their plans gave information to the police. For this work she obtained a handsome monthly salary. She began her nefarious trade at the age of 23, and her first big coup was when she betrayed the Respontine plot against the Czar in 1895. Scores of those who had trusted her went into exile in Siberia on the plot being discovered.

She herself, to disarm suspicion, was sent away also, but was allowed to escape and rejoin the revolutionists in order to obtain more information. One of her victims was a handsome girl named Frania Froumkin, who was sent to the gallows after an abortive attempt to kill the perfect of Moscow. The arch traitress wormed herself into the confidence of families, with the result that numbers of persons were banished to Siberia.

Quite recently the French Government caused a large number of German women employed on the eastern frontier as barmaids to be expelled from the country. These women had been watched and found to be in the pay of German spies, to whom they gave the information that they acquired from listening to the conversation of drunken soldiers in the taverns.

A more serious affair was that at Reims. Seven men and three women alleged to be paid agents of the German War Office were arrested. The three women were in the habit, it was said, of making the acquaintance of soldiers and wheedling military secrets out of them, which information they passed on to the men. Compromising correspondence was found at their lodgings and seemed to reveal wholesale espionage by the women. As a matter of fact the arrest of these men and women is said to have disclosed the existence of a widespread organization of German spies throughout the country.

The People of Iceland.

Writing of Iceland, a traveler says: "The people are as a class extremely well educated, and many a young fellow you may see haymaking has been through the Latin school at Reykjavik and is studying law, medicine or divinity in the winter. He finds the means for his winter studies by working on the land during summer. Iceland is essentially a democratic country, and every one has an equal chance of coming to the front. It is singularly unspoiled by the vices of an older civilization, and its people are marked for their simplicity of life and manners. I should unhesitatingly describe Iceland as morally the purest country in the world."

One of Oswald's Jokes.

When a play written by a man who had roused Oswald's anger by reading a newspaper at a wedding of one of his friends was produced the French wit prevented its success by inducing 250 of his friends to attend it, carrying great books. These young men, who occupied prominent seats, read their books while the performance was going on, and whenever there was any applause each one of them, as if moved by clockwork, turned over a leaf. The rustling of the leaves and the spectacle of the men absorbed in reading made the performance a failure.

Prepared For It.

If young Mrs. Miller had not inadvertently used a certain bit of slang one day she might never have discovered what opinion her hitherto forbearing husband held concerning her attempts at cooking desserts.

Noticing when dinner was half over that Mr. Miller appeared downcast, the bride exclaimed suddenly:

"Cheer up, Frank; the worst is yet to come."

"What?" gasped the husband, taken unawares. "Have you made a pudding?"

Shaking Hands.

The custom of shaking hands originated in the ancient practice of adversaries grasping the weapon hand during a truce as a precaution against treachery. When two friends met they extended their weapon hands to each other as a sign that there was no need to stand on the defensive, and a handshake was but the natural outcome of a hearty and vigorous grasp.

An unknown man was killed by a C.P.R. switch engine on Brant street, Winnipeg.

LAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Mr. M. A. James, president of the Laymen's Association of the Bay of Quinte Methodist Conference, some months ago asked the president of the conference if the committee could arrange the conference programme so as to allow the Laymen's Association to furnish the programme at one evening session, but the reply came back that it was not then probable that it could be so arranged, as the conference programme had already been decided upon. Mr. R. W. Clark, Millbrook, the secretary of the Laymen's Association, wrote to the members of the Laymen's executive for suggestions respecting topics they would like to have discussed at the coming annual conference sitting in Trenton. He has received a number of interesting suggestions for subjects of discussion.

PARLIAMENT IS CALLED TO HONOR KING EDWARD

Shortest Session on Record Will be Held at Westminister as Tribute to The Late King—A Parliament Without Politics—New King Rises Early.

London, May 16.—King Edward's last Parliament, assembling on Tuesday at Westminster Hall, will be, at least in one respect, a welcome anomaly. It will be a Parliament without politics. The King's speech, which the Lords and Commons will be summoned to receive will be the shortest on record. There will be only one word and that will be unspoken. The rival legislative Houses will know that the word is peace, and they will commune with their own hearts and be still. There will be a memorable tableau, with a stately company of royal mourners, and Edward the Pacificator's last service to the Empire and the world will be rendered potent. It will be an appeal to human sympathies, and hazardous and fatuous will be the attempts of politicians to challenge the prerogative of the dead King to effect the deliverance of the country from partisan politics.

The brief religious service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and will be attended by both Houses of Parliament. The ancient hall will not be draped, and the ceremonial will be of magnificent simplicity. The coffin will rest on a draped catafalque. The only sign of decoration will be a purple cloth covering the platform of the catafalque and the trappings of the bier. The King and Queen, the Queen Mother, and other royal mourners will be grouped about the catafalque during the service.

On Monday night the King and Queen, the Queen Mother, the other members of the royal family and the officials and servants of the palace will attend a special devotional service before the body is removed.

King George, who has been rightly credited with originating the unique audience of the Houses of Parliament with the dead sovereign at Westminster Hall, is among the earliest risers in Mayfair. He has been accustomed to take a long canter through the parks before 7 o'clock, but now he has settled down to a long day's work without exercise. Every detail of pageantry, hospitality and etiquette is referred to him, and there is a rapid succession of audiences and prolonged drudgery with secretaries and officials. He is showing signs of weariness and exhaustion, but with inflexible will is keeping abreast of the work. He even finds time for sympathetic messages to friends of the entombed Whitehaven miners and to Florence Nightingale.

The pageant of which the King is chief organizer will rival Queen Victoria's burial in impressiveness and grandeur. The naval spectacle will be lacking, but the dead sovereign's last meeting with Parliament and the solemn yet democratic lying in state under the vaulted roof of Richard II. before the eyes of half a million subjects will be more memorable than a full array of battleships and cruisers.

Until the arrival of the Duke of Connaught enabled the mourners to prepare for the formal function in the throne room with the sealed coffin there had been extreme simplicity in the death chamber. King Edward might almost have been a cottager taking his rest in his night clothes. There was no field marshal's uniform or gold lace trappings, and around his neck was the locket which he had always worn as a charm.

While he was resting peacefully there was a hubbub outside over the concentration of 25,000 or 30,000 troops for the protection of the line of march, belated preparation for decorating the streets, mercenary traffic in windows and scaffolding seats for spectators and untimely chatter about the autumn session for bringing the veto question to a head before coronation year.

London is quieting down after a week of strong emotion and fervid loyalty to the royal house. Among the rumors in the air is one that Queen Mary will be nominated as a regent in the impending bill for regulating the minority of the Duke of Cornwall, and another says that the Duke of Connaught will open the Parliament in South Africa and become Governor-General of Canada. Another is that Windsor will be King George's principal home this year, with a long outing at Balmoral, and that Marlborough House will be the Queen Mother's town residence. Still another is that the King will speedily assume the rank of field marshal.

The first official "Life of King Edward" will be compiled by Sir Richard Holmes, the librarian at Windsor. The bulk of the work is already done. The most impartial estimate of Queen Victoria was an anonymous "Quarterly Review" article. The author was Edmund Goe, who was frightened by his own candor until he heard that King Edward liked the article and had expressed the hope that his own life and reign would be summed up with an equally open mind.

Pope Asks That Oath Be Changed.

Rome, May 16.—The Tribuna says the Pope has addressed a letter to King George V. of England requesting modification of the "no Popery" accession oath, by the elimination of certain words, which he declares are "particularly offensive to Roman Catholics."

PRINCE TSAI TAO ARRIVING IN NEW YORK AT AMERICAN LINE PIER

PRINCE TSAI TAO LEAVING THE PATROL

PRINCE TSAI TAO GOING ABOARD TRAIN AT SANDY HOOK.

THE PRINCE WITH MAJOR GENERAL WALTER HOWE AND OFFICERS AT SANDY HOOK

New York, May 14.—Prince Tsai Tao, uncle of the Emperor of China and chief of staff of the Chinese army, visited this city on his tour around the globe, and was enthusiastically welcomed by representatives of the nation, State and city, and by his own compatriots.

He was accompanied by a military commission appointed by his brother, the Prince Regent, to study and inspect all that may be of value in the reconstruction of the armed forces of his country. His first thought after he had reached this city was of his invitation to visit the government defences at Sandy Hook.

Hardly had he and his suite been established in the Plaza before they were on their way down the bay on board the ordnance boat the General Meigs, as guests of Major General Walter Howe, commanding the Department of the East of the United States army. The Prince stood without the movement of a muscle behind the mighty guns as they were fired, although civilian members of his suite showed signs of perturbation.

The American officers were amazed to find that the young nobleman of twenty-five, who had never left Pekin before this expedition, was familiar with intricate problems of gunnery and talked of war like a veteran. He speaks no English, but his questions and comments given rapidly through an interpreter evinced how well advanced he is in his profession.

Twenty-one guns were fired as a national salute when the imperial visitor and his party reached the pier at the Sandy Hook reservation, and Colonel John V. White, in command of the companies of coast artillery, and other officers came to pay their respects. The battalion attached to the post had been drawn in to salute him. The Prince was about to have luncheon, but when he saw that the soldiers were waiting he asked that he might review them at once, so that they should not be kept standing in the sun.

CANADA'S SALUTE FUNERAL DAY

Minute Guns Will be Heard From Coast to Coast.

Ottawa, May 16.—A militia order has been issued prescribing the military ceremonies to be observed on the day of the funeral of King Edward.

Minute guns will be fired (the number to be specified later), at noon on Friday at twenty-five points from Victoria to Halifax, including London, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Guelph, Toronto and Peterboro. At each of these places, where units of the permanent force are stationed, every available officers and man is to be present on parade at the place where the salute is to be fired in dress review order.

When the first and last guns are being fired, troops will present arms. During the firing of the salute they will be stationed with arms reversed. After an appreciable pause, during which the crape will be removed from the colors and black from the drums, the royal salute will be given by the troops presenting arms and bands playing "God Save the King." If a band is present in parade with the troops, it will play during the firing of the salute "Chopin's Funeral March," and after a pause, "The Dead March in Saul."

WHITEWASHING LETTER DICTATED

Washington, May 15.—What purports to be a statement of Frederick M. Kerby, a stenographer in the office of R. A. Ballington, Secretary of the Interior, was published here yesterday afternoon to the effect that he and other stenographers in the Interior Department wrote from dictation of Oscar Lawler, assistant Attorney-General for the Interior Department, a letter which, he alleges, to have been substantially the foundation for President Taft's letter exonerating Secretary Ballinger from the charges of L. R. Glavis. At the White House an emphatic denial of Kerby's statement was given out.

METHODISM IN CANADA

London, May 16.—Sir R. Perkes, speaking at Tooting Wesleyan Hall, referring to his visit to Canada, said he could not help noting that Methodism there was not holding its own.

He found the old pioneering method of the Methodist fathers had been practically abandoned, and Methodist churches in Canada had become mere isolated congregations.

Accident to Liner.

Dover, May 16.—The Red Star steamer Kroonland, which left Antwerp Saturday for New York, passed Dover at 7.30 o'clock last night, with a shaft broken. The Kroonland was to stop at Dover, but she signalled "Uncontrollable." Apparently the steamer was proceeding under a single screw for Southampton.

MAN GOT 12,000 VOLTS AND LIVES

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 16.—Geo. Appleford, a Niagara-on-the-Lake gardener, had a narrow escape from death Friday night, when he received 12,000 volts from a cable at the village power-house. He had a crowbar over his shoulder when he entered the power-house, and the bar came in contact with the cable.

He was rendered unconscious, but recovered under artificial respiration. He is reported to be out of danger to-day.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Three men were killed in a boiler explosion at Chewtown, Pa.

Four Indians lost their lives in a camp fire near Kinistino, Sask. They were a man and wife and two children.

Richard Adams of Rockport, Ont., fell on a gimlet in the hands of Edward Furness and was pierced to the heart and killed.

Several children were taken out of haunts of vice in a raid in Kaladar district and handed over to the Children's Aid Society.

Mr. Bourassa is mentioned at Montreal as the possible successor of Mr. Monk in the leadership of the Quebec Conservatives at Ottawa.

Cattle on the Dominion liner Englishman, en route to Queenstown, were fed on arrowroot biscuits when fodder ran out, following the breaking of the steamer's shaft.

FISH SEIZURE AT NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 16.—A shipment of undersized pickerel was seized by Game Inspector Cook Saturday. The fish were billed to the States.

Interesting developments are expected at the inquest this evening into the death of Ben Thompson, who died a week ago from poison. The provincial police are investigating the death of the farmer, which followed the decease of a farm hand employe on Thompson's farm.

SIR WILFRID'S TOUR TO WESTERN PROVINCES

Will Start Early in July and Spend Two Months on the Trip Being Accompanied by Messrs. Graham, Macdonald and Pardee.

Ottawa, May 16.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's political tour of western Canada will begin during the first week in July and will last sixty days, during which the Premier will visit all the important centres in the West from Port Arthur to Prince Rupert. The exact itinerary has not yet been arranged nor the dates fixed, but it is settled that Sir Wilfrid, accompanied by Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Mr. E. M. Macdonald, M.P., and Mr. F. F. Pardee, M.P., chief Liberal whip, will leave Ottawa on July 7 or 8, speaking the following day at Port Arthur or Fort William.

A couple of days or so will be spent in Winnipeg, and during the following three weeks' meetings will be held at various points in the Prairie Provinces, including Brandon, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Weyburn, Yorkton, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and other points in Alberta. Vancouver will be reached early in August, and a couple of days will be spent there and in Victoria. The party will go as far north as Prince Rupert.

Sir Wilfrid will be back in the Capital by Sept. 6 or 7. Hon. Mr. Fielding will be unable to accompany the Premier, as he will be absent in England during July.

Sir Wilfrid goes to Quebec to-day for a few days, and during the next month he will take a short holiday at his old home in Arthabaskaville.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur arrived in Ottawa on Saturday, after four months' absence in South Carolina and New York convalescing from his serious illness. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries and of the Navy returns much improved in health, and is now steadily gaining strength. He will resume active charge of his Department this week.

LIGHTNING CREATES HAVOC

New York, May 16.—Three buildings in the Bronx were struck by lightning Saturday, three persons were knocked unconscious, scores of others were slightly shocked and 500 employes in the big freight office of the New Haven Railroad were thrown into a panic. Fire, which followed, added to the damage.

One bolt tore through the roof of the freight house and penetrated the two upper stories. Freight Agent McDowell, who was in his office on the top floor, was hurled unconscious from his seat, and Miss Mary J. Beaver, his stenographer, was shocked by the electrification of her typewriter, so that she fainted. In the office immediately below the bolt struck the desk of C. M. Montsett, trainmaster, smashing it to bits and shocking Montsett out of his senses.

Scores of clerks were hurled from their desks in other offices, and scores were shocked through the electrification of the metal in the building. Despite the pelting rain they rushed frantically out into the street.

Miss Josephine Egan, the telephone operator, stuck to the switchboard and called the fire department and police as fire broke out. Quick work prevented great loss from the flames.

GUILTY OF IMPRUDENCE

Ottawa, May 16.—The coroner's jury enquiring into the cause of last Sunday's explosion at the works of the General Explosives Co. at Hull, where ten persons were killed, returned a verdict saying

"Without holding the said company criminally responsible we consider it guilty of certain imprudence in storing a quantity of detonators in close proximity to their magazine, and also in not having a regular watchman constantly on the premises.

"And we recommend to the Government of this province such amendments to the laws and regulations concerning the manufacture and storage of explosives as will secure the greatest safety to the public, and that in no case shall factories or stores be allowed within cities, towns or villages."

Coroner Lyster refused to allow the reporters to hear his address to the jury.

ARE DOWN ON CHEAP EDITIONS

London, May 16.—Thomas Nelson & Sons' production of a series of two-shilling novels, equal in every way to the usual six-shilling editions, has created a sensation in the publishing trade and in library circles. The Author's Society has adopted a resolution that novelists would be unwise to allow themselves to contract for the publication of novels under six shillings. It added:

"There is no evidence from publishers or authors that the lowering of price leads to any substantial increase in circulation, while there is evidence that in certain circumstances the opposite has occurred."

COMET'S TAIL TOO SHORT TO REACH TO THE EARTH

This is the Latest Opinion of Astronomers—Next Wednesday is the Day That it Comes Closest to the Earth.

London, May 16.—Halley's comet is about 26,000,000 miles from the earth, toward which it is rushing at a rate which will bring it to its nearest point to the earth on Wednesday next. On that day, if the tail be 15,000,000 miles in length, the earth will pass through the tail. The latest observations, however, lead astronomers to conclude that the earth will not come into contact with the comet's tail, which is calculated to be only 7,500,000 miles long. The diameter of the comet's head is estimated to be about 9,000 miles—not much greater than that of the earth.

However, it is possible that the tail may come up to the previous expectations as to its length before May 18, for recent observations by means of the spectroscope have shown a strange like the jests of imprisoned wretches to the number of cometary mysteries which await explanation. For several weeks the spectrum of the comet showed the presence of hydrocarbons and cyanogen only, but now the existence of a large quantity of sodium is revealed.

Signs that will show whether the filmy tail does envelope the world on the night of May 18 will not be such as to cause any alarm. Herbert Hall Turner, Savalian professor of Astronomy at Oxford University, says it is impossible to state with any certainty whether any influence may be detected on May 18.

"Possibly," he says, "delicate instruments for recording atmospheric electricity might show some disturbance. Possibly, if there are solid partices in the tail, a few meteors may be seen. Possibly nothing will happen at all, and this last alternative is by far the most likely, for, according to recent observations, the tail is far two short to reach us."

French People Are Alarmed.

Paris, May 16.—The weather and Halley's comet have recently occupied a very large space in the imagination of Parisians.

Science has to admit, although rather negatively than positively, that the approach of the comet is very likely, in large degree, to be the cause of the remarkable meteorological perturbations to which western Europe, more particularly France, has been subject in the last few weeks.

What further will the comet do to the inhabitants of the earth? is naturally the question that is developed out of this preoccupation. The French are probably as free from superstition as any other nation. Predictions of the end of the world based upon any except common sense reasons impress them little. Ridicule kills the most absurd nations. In France the fear of the comet, which is widespread although little avowed, has not been met with the kind of ridicule that kills.

Mild fun has been poked at it, but it is fun of the stoical sort, somewhat like the jests of imprisoned wretches in the great revolutionary days while they were waiting for their turn to be taken out and guillotined.

Under the superficial air of indifference and skepticism the menace of the comet is really taken rather seriously. The reports of astronomers on the gaseous ingredients of the comet's tail are read with the greatest eagerness. None of these gentlemen will commit himself absolutely to a statement that the comet will not sweep animal life from the earth, and it is safe to say that millions of persons in France are counting each day as the 18th of May approaches with much anxiety, however much the majority of them may seem to dissimulate.

DEATH ENDS AN EXCITING CHASE

New York, May 16.—Threading the crowded lanes of Central Park at breakneck speed a taxicab with a swaying, glassy-eyed chauffeur at the wheel dashed in and out between foot farers and carriages yesterday afternoon, pursued by mounted policemen and traffic men on motor cycles, until on a sharp turn it impaled itself on the front springs of a Limousine coming in the opposite direction.

Michael O'Connell, chauffeur of the taxicab, died in a hospital late yesterday. The springs of the Limousine penetrated the radiator of the taxicab two feet.

Votes For Women In Norway.

Christiania, Norway, May 16.—By a great majority the Odelsting has voted to grant universal municipal suffrage to women over 25 years of age. The new legislation will become effective at the next elections and will increase the present women electors from 270,000 to half a million.

The Odelsting is the controlling legislation body of Norway.

NEWS OF THE KING'S DEATH BY WIRELESS

Victoria, May 16—News of the death of King Edward flashed by wireless to the R.M.S. Empress of China, which arrived Saturday by the outbound Japanese steamer Awa Maru, put a stop to a fancy dress ball in the steamer's saloon. The music was starting for a set of lancers when Capt. Archibald ordered the piano stopped and the purser announced the receipt of the news, which caused the merry-makers to disperse.

Aid For the Strikers.

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 16.—Thousands of iron, steel and tin workers in the United States will contribute one per cent. of their earnings to aid the cause of the strikers in the sheet and tin divisions and to build up a formidable defence fund in accordance with action of the Amalgamated Association of iron, steel and tin workers in national convention here yesterday.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

THIS MAY BE ANOTHER MURDER

Rochester, N.Y., May 16.—The body of H. T. Bennett, of Eagle Harbor, a member of a well-known Orleans County family, was mutilated by a car near Eagle Harbor early yesterday morning, and it is thought that the man was killed by one or both of two Italians, with whom he started for home at midnight, and that then the body was placed on the railroad. The Italians have not been arrested. One of them is said to have gone to Buffalo.

WILL NOT RISK LIVES OF OTHERS

London, May 15.—Home Secretary Churchill has decline to sanction the reopening of the pit of the Wellington Mine at Whitehaven, where over a hundred miners were entombed several days ago.

The mouth of the pit was bricked up in order to quench the fire in the mine. In a message to the agent of the miners' union at Whitehaven, Mr. Churchill says that it is certain that any attempt to penetrate the workings would be attended with certain death.

KILLED BY EXPLOSION

New York, May 16.—Charles Louis Quintard, a graduate of Princeton, employed by the law firm of Davies, Stone and Auerbach, which has offices on the seventh floor of the Mutual Life Building, was killed by an explosion of gas in the rotunda of the building about three o'clock Saturday. He had descended in an elevator and was walking through the rotunda, from which a corridor leads to Nassau street, when, without any warning, there burst from the wall two marble slabs 30 square feet in area, and a marble corner column 14 feet high. The splintering mass fell on the young lawyer, crushing him to the floor and burying him.

THE MURDER AT SHAWVILLE

Bryson, Que., May 16.—It is expected that the trial of Michael Murphy, accused of the murder of Harry Howes and William Dale of Shawville, will be concluded on Tuesday evening. The jury applied for permission to visit the scene of the shooting on Saturday morning. Judge Weir acquiesced, and in the afternoon the jurymen drove over to Shawville and looked over the ground.

The evidence for the crown is practically all in. The defence will have two or three witnesses, who will probably be examined on Monday.

WILL HAVE TWO WHIPS

Ottawa, May 16.—Geo. H. Perley, M.P. for Argenteuil, has been formally appointed chief outside whip of the Conservative party. This means that, following the British plan, there will be two chief whips, one for outside and one for inside work.

Mr. Pedley's duties will be mainly connected with organization and general party management. He will have permanent offices in the city, and through his hands will pass all correspondence and business associated with the federal Conservative party generally.

ANOTHER AVIATION RECORD

Mourmelon, France, May 16.—Daniel Kinet, the Belgian aviator, yesterday broke the world's record for an aeroplane flight with passenger, remaining in the hour for two hours and 51 minutes.

At Chalons-sur-Marne, on April 8, Kinet made a flight, with passenger of two hours and 20 minutes. Previous to that Orville Wright held the record, having remained in the air at Berlin last September, with a passenger, for one hour and 35 minutes.

MAD DOGS IN ONTARIO

Almost every day news comes of someone in Western Ontario being bitten by a mad dog. The latest case reported is that of May Patterson, of Granton, near London, a child aged ten who was bitten by a mad collie belonging to her uncle. Patterson's collie was bitten some weeks ago by a dog which went mad at Stratford and was killed near Denfield, forty miles away, after biting more than one hundred cows and sheep. The dreadful disease is undoubtedly very widespread in Western Ontario. Those who object to proper precautions being taken may have much to blame themselves for.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

It is probable that but for the wide interest taken in the death of King Edward more attention would have been paid to the fact that May 12 was the ninetieth birthday of the heroine of the Crimea, Miss Florence Nightingale. She has not been able to leave her house for a number of years, and she is at present confined to bed, but her mind is still clear and active.

Florence Nightingale was at one time the most talked of woman in the world, and she deserved to be. A woman of good family, well-educated and refined, she devoted her life to the alleviation of suffering. It was her work as nurse in the Crimean war that sent her name over the face of the earth. The hospital system of the British army in the Crimea was entirely without proper organization, and the suffering of the sick and wounded was awful at the time she undertook to organize and train a select band of nurses to go to the Crimea. She arrived at Scutari with thirty-eight nurses on Nov. 4, 1854, the day before the battle of Inkerman. After the battle there were four miles of beds not eighteen inches apart filled with wounded men. She found a great lack of proper food, change of clothing and the most ordinary hospital necessities. She brought about such a wonderful change that she became known throughout the British army as the "angel of mercy."

Her work was so much appreciated by the British people that a popular subscription of $250,000 was raised for her. She refused to accept it for her own use, but suggested that the money should be applied to the establishment of an institution for the training of nurses.

Queen Victoria always sent a message to Florence Nightingale on her birthday, and last year King Edward bestowed upon her the Order of Merit. She was the first woman to receive this honor.

The human race will ever owe a debt of gratitude to Florence Nightingale because she made the profession of the trained nurse highly honorable. Her example led many thousands of refined and cultured women to enter this noble profession, and the good accomplished is incalculable.

There is no other country in the world which contributes to this great work so large a number of good and refined women in proportion to population as Canada does. Unfortunately a very large proportion of those who enter the profession are lost to Canada. Canadian nurses are found everywhere in the United States, and such good work have they done that the very name Canadian is almost a sufficient recommendation for a nurse in that country.

WM. FIELDING AND WM. PITT

The Review quoted the other day the opinion of a Chicago paper as to the way the people of the United States would act towards any member of the United States Government who accepted a gift of $120,000. There is no doubt that the people of the United Kingdom would be equally indignant if any British Cabinet Minister accepted such a gift. One hundred and nine years before Mr. Fielding accepted this gift the famous William Pitt established a precedent which has ever since been recognized in British politics. In the course of the discussion in Parliament on Mr. Fielding's acceptance of this gift Mr. Northrup quoted the following extracts from Stanhope's Life of William Pitt:

"It was well known by the public that Pitt would not be continued one hour in office by the regent. It was well known that he had already taken measures for returning to his first profession. It was also known, perhaps, that his neglect of his private affairs had involved him in some debts, which he trusted to discharge by an industrious application of his talents at the bar. At this very time, however, there was held, by public advertisement, a meeting of the principal bankers and moneyed men of London, anxious to tender him on his retirement from office a substantial mark of their esteem. The sum of £50,000 was first proposed, but, so great was the enthusiasm, that in the space of forty-eight hours this sum was doubled and Mr. George Rose, as his Secretary of the Treasury, was requested to press upon him, in the manner most likely to be acceptable, a free gift of £100,000. But Mr. Pitt answered his friend as follows:—'No consideration upon earth shall ever induce me to accept it.'"

That was in 1789. Later on, in 1801, Mr. Pitt was about to step down from office to begin the practice of his profession. He was at that time loaded with debts. The historian says:—

"So long as Mr. Pitt continued in great office his creditors were content to wait. But when they learnt that he was resigning, and that two-thirds of his present income would be lost, the impatience of some among them could no longer be restrained. The demands upon Pitt grew to be of the most pressing kind. There was reason to apprehend from day to day that an execution might be put into his house; that his rooms might be left without furniture, and his stable without horses. He determined on the sale of Holwood; but considering the heavy mortgages on that little property, its sale could only afford him on the balance a most scanty sum.

"Pitt was too proud to utter a word of complaint, even to his nearest friends. But they, and even, though in less degree, the public at large, soon became aware of the extremities to which he was reduced. . . . . Next there was a renewal of the generous offer which the merchants of London had made Mr. Pitt in 1789. A deputation from them waited on him to state that they had already subscribed for his use a sum of one hundred thousand pounds, which should be paid into the banking house which he chose, and so that he should never know the name of any one of the subscribers. This noble gift was, however, as nobly declined. If (said Mr. Pitt) he were ever again in office, he should always feel abashed and constrained when any request was addressed to him from the city, lest by non-compliance he should be thwarting the wishes of some among his unknown benefactors."

William Pitt's habit of getting into debt was not commendable. Politicians like other people, should learn to live within their incomes.

Mr. Fielding has always had a salary quite large enough to live on in good style without going into debt. The cost of living in Ottawa is not so great that a Cabinet Minister and his family cannot live and save something out of an income of $9,500 per year.

SNOW CRYSTALS.

They Invariably Conform to the Rule of Six.

What magic is there in the rule of six that compels the snowflake to conform so rigidly to its laws? Here is a germ bestrewn realm of nature possessing the charm of mystery, of the unknown, sure richly to reward the investigator.

Much wonder has been excited because the snow crystals exhibit such a bewildering diversity and beauty. They form within a very thin gaseous solvent, the air, and this allows the molecules of water an unexampled freedom of motion and adjustment while arranging themselves in crystal form. The fact doubtless largely explains why the crystals of snow far exceed other crystals in complexity and symmetry. Snow crystals, like all crystals of water, develop under the hexagonal system and invariably divide into six. Nothing absolutely certain is known as to why they grow thus except as it is assumed the number and arrangement of the attractive and repellent poles possessed by the molecules of water impose this habit of growth on them. This dividing into six is necessarily discussed and best explained in somewhat technical sounding terms. We may assume each water particle or molecule possesses two opposite primary poles, positive and negative, corresponding in direction with the main tabular axis of the crystals, and in addition three or six equidistant secondary poles arranged around what may be called the equatorial diameters of the molecules. Water, being a diamagnetic substance and susceptible to polar repulsion, presumably has a tendency to arrange itself thus in a position between and at right angles to the primary electromagnetic poles. This alignment of the lines of growth opposite to the lines of greater magnetic force would compel the crystals of snow to grow mainly outward in the directions of their equatorial diameters and secondary poles. This theory would perhaps best explain why the crystals grow upon thin tabular or in the hollow columnar form and increase so little in the directions of their main axes—that is, in the direction in which, it is assumed, their main position and negative poles lie.—Technical World Magazine.

A PATHETIC DUEL.

Sad Sequel to a Meeting In the Days When Middies Fought.

One of the most pathetic duels in the early history of the American navy was that between two young midshipmen whose names are not given in the record, according to a recent writer. Their ship was in the Malayan waters. One hot night they quarreled over the question of leaving open the scuttle. The dispute was finally settled amicably by the exchange of cots. A superior officer who had overheard their heated words made it plain to one of the midshipmen that he would have to "call out" his friend if he wished to retain the respect of his friends. To avoid ostracism and to conform to the standard of honor imposed by his superiors the unwilling midshipman challenged.

The meeting occurred on the seashore. He wrote of it afterward as follows: "Upon the signal we both fired. I found myself wounded and was about to lean upon my second's arm when I perceived my opponent fall upon the sand. My own wound was in the fleshy part of the thigh. It did not prevent my running to the prostrate figure of my old friend, whose face exhibited intense pain, and, kneeling down by his side, I implored his forgiveness, which he instantly granted.

"My despair at his fate knew no bounds, and, accusing myself of his murder, I upbraided with the bitterest reproaches those who had urged me to send the challenge. For weeks after his cot was attended by his late opponent, whose greatest joy was to anticipate his wants."

The wounded youth recovered, but had a withered arm, and, leaving the service, died of a broken heart.

Charles Reade's Mistake.

"It was Charles Reade, wasn't it, who wrote, 'Nothing is so terrible as a fool?'"

"Yes, but he was wrong. I live next door to a newly married couple. If Charles could see them he would at once admit that two fools are even more terrible."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"A theme on which I can't possibly ask uncle to write the paper for me, 'The Bad Effect Upon the Morals of the Community of the Autumn Displays of Underwear In the Department Store Windows, Especially the Figures of Women in Nightgowns, and the Advisability of the Civic Club's Requesting the Removal of Such Demoralizing Displays.' That's my subject."

"If they look at the matter from a higher plane," said Georgiana, "they would see that it is their own minds that need to be regenerated rather than the shop windows."

"Let me take that down!" cried Daisy. "That shall be my opening sentence. I shall also suggest," she went on as she wrote, "as a preventive (or preventative, which is it?) of so many unhappy marriages, that in place of the exhibit of women in nightgowns they display a windowful of men in their pajamas. The preachers wouldn't have any jobs then!"

"You would better let me edit your paper before you stand up and read it to the club," Georgiana advised. "Does Belle write anything else?"

"Every one is out of town, she says, and there's nothing doing, and she says she can hardly wait until you come back and meet that new professor of psychology. Oh," exclaimed Daisy, with a little squeal of delight, "won't it be bully!"

Georgiana tried to look dignified, but only succeeded in looking interested and rather pleased.

"Isn't it perfectly killing, Georgie, the way every one seems to have settled things between you and that psychology man?"

Kinross leaned his back against a pillar of the porch and gave himself up to enjoying himself.

The young ladies meantime supposed their very language to be as incomprehensible to the farmer's wife and Pete as though they spoke a foreign tongue.

"Do you know," said Georgiana, her countenance softening with her pleasing reflections, "that even father has caught the infection of Dr. Kinross'—well, popularity (I dislike the word). You know he is not apt to notice such things, but he remarked to me several times that he had never seen a young man so turn the heads of all the women—even the married women!"

"But, Georgiana," complained Daisy, "then I shall hate him, I know. I always do hate a man I'm expected to like and approve of. And a fellow who makes all the girls hysterical about him—oh, I know I'll scrap with him!"

"He won't be apt to give you a chance if all they say of him is true," smiled Georgiana.

"I shall force him to see that I despise him!"

Georgiana laughed, then added: "Father himself told me that if he did not know Dr. Kinross he would think he must be a bounder, the way the girls and women make themselves silly about him. But the queer thing about it, father says, is that Dr. Kinross doesn't reciprocate their attentions at all and is rather a cynic—indifferent to women—indeed, rather afraid of them!"

"What a chump!" cried Daisy contemptuously. "That's worse yet. No, Georgie, I refuse to like that man. And if you don't jilt him I shall!"

"Jilt him? I trust my relations with him will be on a plane too high to admit of the possibility of any such vulgarity as jilting! A girl always knows it when a man is going to propose to her and"—

"Oh, no, she doesn't, Georgiana. I have often thought a man was going to propose to me—and he didn't."

"Father told me," continued Georgiana, scarcely heeding Daisy's flighty interpolations, "that it was a comfort to know that I was not capable of the weakness of such infatuation and that my self poise would always save me from making that kind of a fool of myself."

"Well, I should think so!" exclaimed Daisy warmly. "Oh, won't he have to go way back and sit down when he falls in love with you! I can hardly wait until I see it!"

"Wouldn't it be—eh—well, amusing," Georgiana granted, clasping her shapely hands about her knees and looking dreamy, "if after his adamantine front to all the other girls he should thaw to me?"

("Very amusing, indeed," thought Kinross.)

"Which of course he will," affirmed Daisy dogmatically, "for you're not like the other girls—you're on a higher plane."

"And so is he," said Georgiana lucidly, accepting Daisy's tribute complacently.

"Perhaps," Daisy reluctantly conceded, "but he must be perfectly horrid—a conceited prig—with all the girls flattering him so idiotically."

"We shall cure him of that," Georgiana smiled, her tongue suggesting a proprietorship which Kinross couldn't help thinking a little gratuitous.

"Father considers him able," Georgiana went on. "But," she added, "I have heard him say of him that he had 'a sarcastic tongue.' Now, sarcasm,"

"So she thinks she is going to bowl me over."

she dogmatized, "is not the expression of a high plane of thought, and perhaps," she said earnestly, "I may be able to help him to see life more sweetly and sanely."

("Not if I have any influence with myself," was Kinross' mental comment.)

While they talked Daisy had now and then cast rather uneasy glances at Peter and Mrs. Morningstar, and she now leaned down and said something in a lowered voice to Georgiana.

Georgiana shook her head and answered aloud: "You need not be afraid. Their plane is so far below that of ourselves, Daisy, that they scarcely catch the sound of our voices when we speak, but if you feel any apprehensions"— Georgiana rose and shook out her skirts.

Daisy dropped her handful of gooseberries into Mrs. Morningstar's pan, and the two girls strolled away.

Kinross' eyes followed them thoughtfully, with a sense of pleasure in the symmetry of Miss Ellery's shapely shoulders, straight back and long, graceful movement.

"So she thinks she's going to bowl me over just as soon as I come within her range," he mused. "What will be the effect on her, I wonder, when she discovers she's been discussing me like that in my own presence? 'Their plane is so far below that of ourselves, Daisy, that they scarcely catch the sound of our voices when we speak.'"

A short laugh escaped him, which roused Mrs. Morningstar to speech.

"I make no doubt, Doc," she said, working busily while she talked, "that you kin understand them girls when they speak all them high words to each other. Ain't? It beats me what they're conwersin' about together. Still when they speak so educated that way—just like readin' out of the newspaper or whatever."

"I think they don't always understand themselves, Mrs. Morningstar."

"Now, think! Poll parrots, too, they don't know what they're sayin' neither. And educated people's the same," she repeated in surprise.

Kinross at this moment caught a glimpse through the window of Eunice alone in the kitchen.

"Here's my chance," he thought, rising from the porch steps.

"Say, Doc," Mrs. Morningstar stopped him, "if them girls ever finds out the joke you're playin' on 'em, pretendin' to be common like us when you're as tony as theirselves, I make no doubt they won't like it, Doc."

"I agree with you, Mrs. Morningstar. They won't like it."

"Supposin' they meet you in town there some time in your dude cloes!" she said apprehensively. "To be sure, there's so many that lives in town it ain't likely you will run across each other."

"It's not merely likely, Mrs. Morningstar. They simply can't escape me."

"Not?" she cried. "Well, I guess you'll feel pretty cheap!"

"It is they who will feel inexpensive, Mrs. Morningstar. They'll be ready to sell themselves for half price on the bargain counter!"

He left her to puzzle over the problem as he turned away and went into the kitchen.

But the moment's delay had lost him his chance. Eunice had left the room by one door just as he was entering by the other.

CHAPTER XIII.

On the evening of that same day Kinross, sitting on the grassy terrace by the front gate contemplating the dusty highway, was still puzzling over the problem of Eunice.

"Were she the Sleeping Beauty in the enchanted castle she couldn't be more inaccessible," was the conclusion to which he had come as, after seeing the whole family, including Eunice, go upstairs for the night, he had necessarily postponed his quest to the morrow.

"It looks as though I should be driven to communicate with her through correspondence even while here under the same roof with her!"

He was fairly wearied out with his speculations about her. For the first time he now found his disguise irksome, so much would he have liked freely to discuss the case with Miss Ellery. Surely that philosophical young woman was not so abnormally self engrossed as not to be curious also about Eunice. Perhaps if he gave her and Daisy an opportunity they would question him about the girl, thinking, of course, that he had known her long and intimately. It would be a relief, even under the hampering condition of his assumed character, to talk her over with some one. How had her extraordinary talk of the night before struck Miss Ellery anyway?

He had reached this point in his meditations when he was roused by the sound of a step behind him. All the family had gone to bed, so it must be the young ladies. They were coming to join him on the terrace.

"A mere farmhand is, after all, a man," he shrugged.

But this evening he felt an unusual readiness to welcome their society.

"If I can't investigate Eunice myself, at least I can now get at the impression she has made on others."

He tossed away the cigar he was smoking. It was of the brand smoked by Miss Ellery's father and quite too choice to be found in the possession of a farmhand. He hoped she wouldn't notice the aroma.

He turned around and looked up.

There before him, slim and pale in the starlight, stood Eunice, in the unexpectedness of her appearing suggesting to his startled fancy a vision of a Fra Angelico angel.

His astonishment left no room even for a passing regret for the excellent cigar so unnecessarily sacrificed.

There was a mingled timidity and dignity in her manner that brought him to his feet with an instinctive chivalry.

"Will you sit down with me?" he asked in a tone of uncertainty, for he could not guess just why she had come. She had always appeared to shun and even to be afraid of him. There was just now a pained sensitiveness in her fine face that revealed the struggle she was having with herself in approaching him like this.

"But you would rather not be intruded upon—even by me?" she asked wistfully, her voice low and trembling. "I mean," she hastily explained, "I don't count, of course, but perhaps you would rather be entirely alone?"

She had spoken so unhesitatingly last night to Miss Ellery. Why should she falter like this, in such agony of embarrassment, when speaking to him? True, she had talked to Georgiana under stress of a sudden strong impulse—she had been caught unawares, as it were—that had been manifest enough. Still, in spite of his own lifelong battle with shyness, he couldn't quite understand why any girl under the sun should be bashful with him. Certainly his experience with bashful girls had been limited—or, rather, nil.

"Ever since last night," he said to her, "I have been looking for an opportunity to talk with you."

He saw the color flood her cheeks and her bosom rise and fall in a long, deep breath.

"You have wanted to talk with me?" she breathed.

"It's the only thing I have wanted ever since last night."

"Since last night?"

"Yes, since last night—naturally."

"Is it," she asked, "that you are concerned in this controversy about Miss Ellery's frock?"

"No"—he repressed a smile—"it is not about Miss Ellery's frock I wanted to talk to you."

It was evident that the episode of the frock had been, to her mind, the only notable one of the previous evening.

"Let us sit down," he repeated.

Her face lighted up as she obeyed him with a brightness that transformed it. He marveled why she should in one moment shrink from him and falter in painful shyness and the next be radiant with pleasure. To him the reason for the transformation was not apparent.

"What made you say you don't count?" he began as he seated himself beside her.

"You said so—that evening—by the fence."

"When I said you didn't annoy me? But I didn't mean that!"

"What did you mean then?" The question seemed to spring from her without her volition.

What had he meant, indeed?

"I suppose," he speculated, "I meant that you interest me too much to annoy me."

"And the young ladies—you avoid them because they don't interest you?"

Was there a note of eagerness in her wistful voice? And to think that she should volunteer to ask him questions! If he could make her feel more at ease with him, perhaps he could get her to talk to him of herself. His pulse bounded with pleasure in anticipation of his quest of her secret, and he felt a thrill of satisfaction in his present isolation with her.

"I can't say they don't interest me. Everybody interests me, even Ollie, even Abe!"

He looked at her narrowly as he spoke her lover's name with this intimation of his insignificance. He could not see whether or not it disturbed her.

"But," he went on, "there are degrees of interest. None of them have a mystery about them."

Her face as she listened to him expressed anxious attention, like one who tries to follow a foreign tongue, and she seemed to weigh for a moment all that he said before she answered.

"But neither have I a mystery about me," she replied wonderingly. "A mystery?"

"Haven't you?" he questioned gravely in the tone of one reproving a child for telling a fib.

"Indeed, no." She shook her head in denial of such an accusation. "I haven't."

"No? I'm surprised to hear it, for, do you know, you seem to me the most mysterious young person I ever met!"

"I do," she marveled. "But why?" In her astonishment she was forgetting her shyness. "Unless," she attempted to explain it, "you find me mysterious because I am so simple. If all the young ladies you know are complex like Miss Ellery"—

"Heaven forbid!"

"Don't you like her?" she asked again with that note of wistfulness which this time included an accent of pity for Miss Ellery.

"I love her!" he declared with a whimsical exaggeration that he hoped would dispose of Miss Ellery finally. "That's why I wouldn't have all the young ladies I know made after her pattern, you see."

She started at his words, and suddenly the radiance seemed to die out of her face, leaving it mournful.

"You—you love her!" she said falteringly.

"Of course I love her! The difference between you and Miss Ellery," he went on, following the idea in his own mind and not seeing in the dimness the pallid hopelessness that had come to her face, "is that Miss Ellery thinks she's complex, but isn't, and you think you're simple, but aren't. And the most mysterious thing about you is that you hadn't noticed it yourself—that you were mysterious, I mean. I don't see how it escaped you."

She did not answer him.

"For instance, why are you so different from Ollie when you two have had the same rearing?"

She swallowed hard and seemed to make an effort to speak to him.

"Is that a mystery?" she said. "But it is easily explained. We are not of the same parentage."

"Do you know anything of your own parents?"

There was a scarcely perceptible hesitation before she answered.

"No." Her voice sounded remote, as though she shrank from his questioning.

"That in itself is strange, isn't it?" he ventured, hesitating to force his investigations against her evident reluctance, but his keen curiosity getting the better of his finer feeling.

"I suppose it is," she answered, her voice subdued, her eyes downcast.

"Do Mr. and Mrs. Morningstar know nothing about your parents?"

"I don't know."

"But have you never asked them?"

"I have never discussed it with them."

His questions agitated her, he saw, and he didn't believe she was being candid with him, so he reluctantly dropped them. He remained silent to give her a chance to tell him why she sought him here at an hour when all the rest of the family were abed.

"I want to ask you," she began timidly, "to tell me something if you are quite willing to spare your time to me."

The occasional unusualness of her mode of expression struck me as touching of foreignness. Here was another phase of the mystery of her.

"I couldn't make better use of my time," he answered. "Ask me anything you like, child."

SICK HEADACHE

Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Canker Sore Mouth Cured by Mi-o-na

Sick headaches are caused by indigestion and a general disturbed condition of the stomach.

Cure the indigestion and the headache, nausea, heartburn, sour stomach, and that "all in" feeling will vanish.

Mi-o-na tablets will cure indigestion or any other stomach trouble. They will relieve almost instantly. Wm. Madill has so much faith in them that he will give you your money back if they don't.

Mi-o-na cures by making the stomach strong enough to produce enough gastric juices to digest all the food you want to eat. It promptly puts new life and energy into the overworked and played out walls of the stomach.

Use Mi-o-na for a week, and you can eat what you want any time you want it, and take pleasure in doing it.

Your blood will be richer, redder, purer after taking Mi-o-na, and it only costs 50 cents a large box.

Frank Oke, St. Thomas, Ont., says: "My wife was troubled with indigestion for a number of years. We tried a number of preparations to no effect. Finally she began to use Mi-o-na and has been entirely relieved of all these troubles. I can confidentially recommend Mi-o-na."

OBITUARY

AGNES CLOTWORTHY.

The death occurred Saturday evening shortly after 8 o'clock of Miss Agnes Clotworthy, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jane R. Livick, 580 George street. Deceased had been ill about two months, suffering from gangrene, and was seventy-seven years of age. The deceased was a Presbyterian in religion and a member of St. Andrew's church.

The funeral will take place from the late residence at 2.30 to-morrow afternoon and proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment. The pallbearers will be Messrs. G. W. Powell, Jno. Anderson, Wm. Porter, Alexander Hall, James Davidson and Albert Alexander.

Rev. J. G. Potter will officiate at the funeral services.

J. H. GARDINER.

Citizens of Peterborough were much shocked to hear of the death of Mr. J. H. Gardiner, the well-known auctioneer, which took place Saturday evening about six o'clock. While it was known that Mr. Gardiner was seriously ill, it was not thought that death would ensue. During the past week the deceased gentleman had been conducting an auction sale, but on Thursday evening he suffered a paralytic stroke Friday he was considerably improved and hopes were entertained for his recovery. Saturday evening, however, he seemed to sink perceptibly and the heart being affected, the end came quickly and without pain.

The late Mr. Gardiner has for the past eight years carried on the business of an auctioneer in this city and was well known and highly esteemed in this community. Previous to this he was auctioneer in Port Hope for some years.

The deceased was a member of the Methodist church, and in politics a strong Conservative. He leaves to mourn his loss two children both of this city, Mrs. D. O. Waring and Mr. Ed. Gardiner.

Rev. Mr. Pearson conducted the service at the residence, after which the remains were sent to Hope for burial. Many beautiful flowers were in evidence, among them a large wreath from the Conservative Club of this city, of which the late Mr. Gardiner was a member. He was fifty-seven years of age.

JUSTUS DUNN.

The city lost another of its old residents Saturday night, when Justus Dunn passed away at St. Joseph's hospital at the age of seventy-five years. The late Mr. Dunn had been ailing with spinal trouble, and two weeks ago he met with an accident, which fractured his hip. He was taken to the hospital, but was unable to withstand the shock and death resulted. The deceased, who was born in North Adams, Mass., came here sixty years ago, and for many years worked at his trade of carriage maker. For fifteen years he had conducted a grocery business, but retired about three years ago owing to ill health. In 1862 he was married to Annie Simons, who, with an adopted daughter, survives him. The late Justus Dunn was a Liberal in politics, and in religion a Roman Catholic, attending St. Peter's Cathedral.

The funeral will take place Tuesday morning at nine o'clock from 165 Charlotte street to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

The Winnipeg and Spencer Junction of the G.T.R. will be handed over to the G.T.R. in August.

PETERBORO CIRCLE PASSED RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE

The following resolutions of condolence were passed by Peterborough Circle No. 193, Canadian Order Home Circle, at the regular meeting on Friday night and have been forwarded to Dr. Coughlin and Mrs. Roszel, respectively:—

Peterborough, May 13, 1910.
Dr. C. B. Coughlin,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—It is with deep regret that we have just learned of the death of your daughter. We, the officers and members of Peterborough Circle, No. 193, desire to express to yourself and family our sincere sympathy in this your hour of sorrow.

We trust you will find in Him who breatheth all our sorrows a comforter, and although family ties are broken here, our prayers are that we shall meet in heaven where there is no parting, for in heaven we part no more.

Signed on behalf of Peterborough Circle No. 193, Canadian Order Home Circle.

Past Leader—Wm. Kemp.
Leader—J. W. Carey.
Secretary—Elizabeth Wright.
Treasurer—J. A. Morgan.
Financial Secretary—O. S. Matchett.

Peterborough, May 13th, 1910.
To Mrs. G. I. Roszel and family;—

We, the officers and members of Peterborough Circle No. 193, C.O.H.C., desire to express to yourself and family our sincere sympathy in this your hour of sorrow. Your late husband was very highly esteemed by us as a friend and a brother who lived a true and blameless Christian life, and we shall not soon forget him, but shall mourn his departure from our midst. We can best offer our consolation to you by pointing out that we believe that he has gone to a better home prepared by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. We know that your loss and ours is his gain, and although family and fraternal ties are broken here, our prayers are that we shall meet in that heavenly home where there is no more parting, for in heaven we part no more.

Signed on behalf of Peterborough Circle No. 193, C.O.H.C;
Past Leader—Wm. Kemp.
Leader—J. W. Carey.
Secretary—Elizabeth Wright.
Treasurer—J. A. Morgan.
Financial Secretary—O. S. Matchett.

FORMAL OCCUPANCY OF THE SOCIETY'S NEW QUARTERS

T.A.S. Held Initial Meeting in St. Alphonse's Lyceum—Retirement of Recording Secretary—Twenty-Five New Members Initiated

St. Peters' Total Abstinence Society formally opened its new quarters at St. Alphonse's Lyceum yesterday afternoon when the first meeting was held in the new home of the society. Ald. Duffus, the president of the T.A.S., was in the chair. There was an excellent attendance of members, and twenty-five new members were initiated.

The chairman in an interesting speech, said that the society might well congratulate itself on its splendid growth and on having such fine quarters.

Rev. Father McColl expressed the hope the kindred societies of the church—the C.M.B.A., the Catholic Order of Foresters, and the Hibernians—would do full justice to the splendid opportunities presented them by having such fine new quarters. He spoke in the highest commendation of the society's progress and looked for steady further development under such favorable aucpices.

Mr. Joseph Maher, the recording-secretary, handed in his resignation, as it will be impossible for him to fill that office longer owing to the fact that he is leaving the city. Mr. Joseph Picard was chosen to succeed him.

Mr. Maher told of the regret he felt at having to withdraw from such pleasant and uplifting associations, but said he would always be a member of the society and live up to his obligations in that respect.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Maher for his useful offices in the work of the society.

FAREWELL RECITAL BY HAND ORGAN ON SIMCOE ST.

Henceforth the handorgan game is a dead one in this city. The swarthy gent with an assortment of boxed music, two white mice and a cockatoo, and who has been gathering a harvest of coppers during the past two weeks, got in wrong Saturday night when he became lippy towards P.C. Newhall, who asked him to kindly vacate a position which he took up on Charlotte street. Whether it was the music or the manufacturer that attracted passersby is a disputed question, but anyway they stopped and blocked up the sidewalk. Somebody called up the police station and the result was that the musical troupe was given the order to move on. The conductor did move on, but stopped again on George street, and the order had to be given again. The next stop was on Simcoe street, but the proceedings were brought to a sudden stop, and the outfit with the owner take to the police station. The copper king was later given his liberty on promising to appear in court Monday.

This morning he was on time, and accompanying him was Mr. B. Laster. The charge was unlawfully loitering on Simcoe street and causing a blockade.

Explanations were attempted, but P.C. Newhall went into the box and swore that the prisoner had been told to move on several times during the evening. In each case traffic on the sidewalk was blocked.

Mr. Laster wanted to know if it wasn't the Salvation Army that caused the crowd on Simcoe street, but the officer replied that the man and the handorgan had been there after the army had gone.

The fine was $2.00, with $4.50 costs, or fifteen days in jail.

Mr. Laster paid.

REGINA LOSING NEW INDUSTRIES

By Failure to Build Spur Track—Ackerman's May Go to Saskatoon

The Regina Standard says;—While the Board of Trade and Greater Regina Club are doing their best to induce new industries and wholesale concerns to come to Regina with headquarters offices for Saskatchewan, the City Council is holding up the spur track proposition and Regina is losing good industries. It is stated by one who is familiar with the situation in Regina that $100,000 worth of building has been held back this year owing to the non-settlement of the spur track trouble, and the "Standard" has learned on reliable authority that there is a strong probability that the wholesale harness and saddlery firm of B. F. Ackerman & Sons will not come here after all.

Mr. Ackerman was in Regina yesterday and went north to Saskatoon. It is understood that he is so dissatisfied with conditions here that he seriously contemplates starting his western branch at Saskatoon instead of in Regina. Information has also come to hand that Mr. Ackerman's case is not the only one of its kind.

NEW HALL NOW OPEN TO MEMBERS

Commencing to-day the rooms of St. Alphonse's Lyceum will be open to members of the societies occupying the building. The rooms will be open all day up to ten o'clock in the evening.

The gymnasium is not yet equipped for use, but a committee has been appointed to make arrangements in this connection and will meet on Thursday evening for that purpose.

Peterboro Chimes

At noon to-day the treasurer's statement of subscriptions received was as follows:

Previously acknowledged	$2,810.25
Received since	15.00
	$2,825.25

May 16th, 1910.

STOCK ISSUE WAS OVER SUBSCRIBED

One of the features of the week in local financial circles was the allotment of the $200,000, of 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock of Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, recently offered to the public by Cawthra Mulock & Company.

The total offering it is understood was over-subscribed by over 60 per cent. and this resulted in it being very difficult to grant even very small applications in full.

The distribution that has been secured is of the widest character and the new company will start with shareholders in every section of Canada right from Halifax to Victoria.

At the offices of the Guardian Trust Company it was learned that the new Company would, when allotment is completed, have over 850 shareholders, making the average holding less than 25 shares per holder.

Such a result is sure to be enthusiastically received by Toronto Bankers and Brokers, as it proves what an important centre Toronto has become for attractive industrial flotations.

S. A. Excursion

The annual Salvation Army excursion will be held next Tuesday to Idyl Wyld on the steamer "Otonabee." This will be the Otonabee's first trip of the season.

S. A. BAND WILL HOLD CONCERT

Sacred Memorial Programme at Central Park on Friday Afternoon

The Salvation Army Band will hold a sacred memorial service at Central Park on Friday afternoon at three o'clock. The band will occupy the bandstand for the concert and there will be a programme of sacred memorial music exclusively.

The programme to be given will be announced later.

AN AUTO TRUST IS COMING

Who is this newcomer in the ranks of the nation's capitalists? He is the maker and seller of a toy—of the most popular toy of the ages. With a hand of magic he devised that modern sensation and wonder, the automobile, and he proclaimed its merits so effectively that he has swept the nation into a frenzy of buying. So great has been the success attending his efforts that if he should be able during 1910 to meet the demand already made upon him for his product he could truthfully boast a volume of business near to a quarter of a billion dollars. As it looks now, his probable production for the coming twelve months, according to conservative estimate, will reach a total of around $160,000,000. And for his entire output—if he lives up to his reputation — he will get CASH!

Now the maker of the automobile has pursued the typical American policy in placing his product upon the market through the independent retailer, but he has not "financed" his distributing agencies. As a matter of fact, from the beginning, the distributing agencies have "financed" him. With their contracts for cars the agents have been compelled to surrender a considerable bonus to the manufacturer and to pay in ready money the remainder due when the cars are delivered. The automobile maker has been "getting the cash" and with this cash he has built up his marvelous industry.

There is much speculation to-day as to whether the price of the motor car will remain where it is. Many predict that the day of overproduction is not far off; that we shall before long see automobiles a drug on the market and the price cut almost in two. People point back to the bicycle and declare that motor car manufacturers will be as anxious to dispose of their product as were the makers of the two-wheeled pleasure vehicle—that they will strike out on a desperate hunt for buyers; that when the realization comes that the number of consumers is limited, competition will loosen up the terms and hammer down the closing figures of a bargain. To those, however, who are closely following the development of the motor car business such a culmination seems hardly probable. Organization, consolidation of forces, is incessantly at work in this new industry. With the passing of the ownership and control of accessory plants turning out the more essential parts into the hands of the big makers, the competition of the small producer—who is merely an assembler of parts—will become nominal, only and may be entirely wiped out in case of any sudden slump in the demand. The "powers that be" will regulate the supply to meet the capacity of the public to consume. Thus the price of the product will remain where it is, enabling the motor car magnate to continue to reap bonanza dividends based on his "expanded" capitalization.—From "Our Billion Dollar Toy," in June Technical World Magazine.

INJURED IN C.P.R. WRECK

Havelock Man Had Hand Broken and Side Bruised

Special to the Review.

Havelock, May 16.—Mr. Frank Hooper, of town, was injured, although not seriously, in the C.N.R. wreck a mile and a quarter from Richmond Hill, on Saturday, when a mixed train, consisting of three cars of lumber, a baggage coach and passenger coach, left the rails on a level piece of track. He was a passenger on the ditched train coming from Sudbury to Havelock, and as a result of the accident had one of the bones of his left hand broken and had his left side bruised. He was able to continue his journey, and arrived at Havelock on Saturday night.

Several others received slight injuries, including the engineer and baggageman on the derailed train. About 300 ties and 25 rails were torn up.

BODY ARRIVED FROM THE WEST

The body of the late Miss Lulu Cathcart, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Cathcart, of Springville, arrived at Kendry from Oxbow on the C. P. R. midnight Saturday. The deceased's sister, Miss Lillian, and her uncle, Mr. William Cathcart, accompanied the remains.

The late Miss Cathcart, prior to her departure for the west a few months ago, was an esteemed member of the Springville choir.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from the home of her parents Springville, to the Little Lake cemetery.

TRADES COUNCIL MEETS TO-NIGHT

A meeting of the Trades and Labor Council will be held to-night at eight o'clock in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Simcoe street. Organizer J. A. Flett, of Hamilton, will be in attendance and a large attendance is looked for.

AN IMPORTANT APPOINTMENT

Col. G. M. Fitzpatrick is Inspector General in Australia

Colonel G. M. Kirkpatrick, who married the third daughter of Mrs. James F. Dennistoun, formerly of this city, and now residing at Winnipeg, has been appointed inspector-generla of the commonwealth military forces in Australia. During the past four years Colonel Kirkpatrick has been assistant quartermaster-general on the staff of Lord Kitchener in India, and he recently accompanied Lord Kitchener upon his Australian tour when a new scheme of organization of the Australian forces was proposed and adopted.

It is a matter of congratulation that the first inspector-general of Australia should be a Canadian. Colonel Kirkpatrick has had a most distinguished career in the army and has succeeded from one staff appointment to another until he has now attained the highest position in the gift of the Commonwealth.

LATEST NEWS OF THE COMET

The Astronomical Society will meet in the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday night, when the most recent views of Halley's comet will be shown and the most recent information concerning the comet will be given. The evening will be an interesting one to the general public. All are cordially invited.

CHIEF BOND NOT TO COME HERE

The report that Chief Bond has accepted a position on the police force of Peterborough is not correct. The chief will remain in Port Hope.—Port Hope Guide.

St. Luke's Announcements

To-night a meeting of the Chancel Guild will be held at St. Luke's rectory at 7.30. All members of the Guild as well as others who wish to take an interest in chancel work are requested to attend.

At 8 o'clock to-night the Girl's Auxiliary will meet at the rectory.

A special meeting of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's will be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the infant class room to make special arrangements for the proposed trip to Springville which had to be postponed last Friday on account of the cloudy sky.

The usual week night service on Wednesday at 8 o'clock.

On Friday, according to the King's command, a memorial service in connection with the funeral of the late King Edward VII. will be held at St. Luke's church at 10 o'clock. In order not to interfere with the public service to be held at 11 o'clock at the armories the hour of the service has been decided upon at 10 o'clock to comply with orders received from the Archbishop of Canterbury at the request of His Majesty. The service at St. Luke's will be of memorial character and will only occupy a half hour, in order to give ample opportunity to those who wish to attend, to be present at the union service at the armories at 11 o'clock.

The Mission Band intend holding an entertainment on Friday, May 27th, and all friends of the church are requested to give their loyal support.

At the evening service last night the rector and the congregation of St. Luke's offered special prayers for the recovery of Mrs. Pogue.

Some Good News
Mr. A. Claverie

The celebrated Specialist from Paris, so well known in Peterborough, will be at the ORIENTAL HOTEL
from
MONDAY, the 23rd inst., to WEDNESDAY, the 25th.
From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., and 6 to 9 p.m.

This is surely good news. I need not state again the incomparable advantages of the method and apparatus of Mr. A. Claverie and the POSITIVELY MARVELLOUS results secured with them.

Mr. A. Claverie is too well known in Ottawa to need any further introduction than this.

There are hundreds and hundreds of ruptured people in Ottawa and surrounding district who have already seen him to secure his treatment, and numerous instances could be cited of persons who had tried everything without the least relief and who have been RESTORED TO HEALTH BY MR. CLAVERIE.

I will simply recall that the patented appliances of Mr. A. Claverie are officially approved by the highest medical academies, that they are the only ones which are PERFECTLY COMFORTABLE, very soft to wear and at the same time ensure SERIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC TREATMENT FOR THE DISEASE.

All the ruptured will grasp this opportunity to examine and try these marvellous apparatus, adopted now by nearly A MILLION PATIENTS in every part of the world, and who have made the happiness of so many unfortunate ruptured in Ottawa and the surrounding district.

Go one and all to the Oriental Hotel from Monday, the 23rd, to Wednesday, the 25th.

THE COMMISSIONER HAS SPLENDID QUALIFICATIONS

Mr. H. W. Duggan, of Montreal, has been appointed to the position of industrial commissioner of Peterborough, and has arrived in the city to assume his new duties. For many years Mr. Duggan was vice-president and general manager of the Dominion Mercantile Protective Co., resigning that position to come to this city. Mr. Duggan is a thorough business man, having held several positions of importance in connection with mercantile establishments. On account of his splendid business training, he is eminently fitted for the position of industrial commissioner. It requires a man of wide business ability, dealing as he must, with important problems that must from time to time come before him. Judging from Mr. Duggan's personality and past record the right man has been secured.

AGONY OF HYDROPHOBIA AT A LONDON HOSPITAL

Victim Wished Physician to Cut His Throat in Order That He Might Breathe—Terrible Dread of Water.

London, Eng., May 14.—One of those terrible but, fortunately now rare, cases of hydrophobia claimed attention of a Hackney coroner's jury. The victim was a young ex-soldier, George Edgar Seaman, aged 24 years, lately living at Trelawney road, Hackney. He was attached to the Norfolk Regiment, and while stationed at Gibraltar six months ago he and another man were bitten in the street by a mad dog.

Seaman's mother told the court that both men were sent to the Pasteur Institute at Paris. When her son returned home he showed no signs of hydrophobia until he complained of pain in the elbow of the same arm which was bitten. The pain spread to the shoulder, and then to the back of the neck.

The mother went on to say that her son's condition became very desperate, and he could not swallow, and said he was going mad. At 6 o'clock he became so bad that a constable had to be sent for to restrain him, and he was then removed to the Hackney Infantry.

Dr. John Joseph Gordon, medical superintendent of the infirmary, said Seaman was very violent when admitted. He was a man of splendid physique, and complained of having to die so young from the bite of a dog. He had entered for the city police, and had been medically examined and passed. After his admission to the hospital, witness decided that the best thing to do would be to give him a hot bath. He was put into the bath, but jumped out like a cat. He ordered his attendants to put him in again, but again he jumped out, and sat on the edge of the bath and cried.

He suffered from a frightful thirst, and witness gave him a glass of water. He had no sooner got the glass into his hand than he had a terrible spasm of the muscles, and jumped into the air. From that time onward the mention of water was sufficient to give him other spasms, as would also a slight draught under the door. Witness heard that he had been treated at the Pasteur Institute, but there was a delay in getting him there, as the North German Lloyd Steamship Company refused to take him, and he had to wait for the P. and O.

Seaman cried like a child because Dr. Cowell (witness' assistant) would not cut his throat and end his sufferings. He said he could not breathe, and if they cut his throat he could breathe. Eventually Seaman's agonies became so terrible that they had to inject morphia to quieten him. He died after an awful night's suffering.

THE SERVICES AT ST. PETERS

Yesterday being the Feast of Penticost, the religious services at St. Peter's were carried out with all the ceremonial due to so great a feast. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor sang Pontifical High Mass with Father Meagher as deacon, Father Toner sub-deacon, and Father McColl as assistant priest. During the Mass His Lordship gave the Pontifical Blessing, to which is attached a plenary indulgence.

At the evening service His Lordship sang Pontifical Vespers with Father McColl as deacon, Father Toner, sub-[illegible] master of ceremonies. A very eloquent sermon was preached on the Holy Ghost by Father Meagher, taking for his text, "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they began to speak according as the Holy Ghost gave them to speak." Acts II 4. The church was filled with pious worshippers for both services.

Harrison, of Toronto, and Head Advisor Cinnamon, of Lindsay, will be present and take part.

THE SPREAD OF THE GOSPEL

Throughout the World Was Topic of Dr. Talling's Sermon at St. Paul's Last Night.

Those who availed themselves of the opportunity of listening to Rev. M. P. Talling, Ph.D., yesterday, in St. Paul's church, were greatly helped and inspired by the brief, thoughtful sermons at both services.

In the evening he preached from the second chapter of St. Luke, taking as his text, "Christ is our Salvation." In referring to the misapprehension under which the Jews labored regarding the coming of Jesus, Dr. Talling said that the Jews expected a Messiah who would deliver them from all oppression, and one who would come in glory and in splendor to save them from afflictions. The gospel was exerting a widespread influence wherever it was preached to-day, and when it had been proclaimed in every land the world would be revolutionized.

The speaker also told how the Jews had rejected Christ, and that it was the Gentiles who were to-day carrying the news of salvation through Christ to the nations of the Orient.

Every nation that had heard the gospel has been uplifted, the Sabbath respected and barbarism given place to refinement. In conclusion Dr. Talling urged every person to be saved through Christ, giving a pathetic reference to the way young men and women to-day are slaying and crucifying Jesus by failure to allow Him to direct their lives.

Miss Helen Davies sang very acceptably at both services. In the evening her rendition of "The Holy City" was greatly appreciated and sung in beautiful voice and with expressive feeling.

SPORTING NEWS

HAVELOCK CHAMPS DID NOT SCORE AGAINST C.G.E.

The C.G.E. Midland Leaguers took another game on Saturday evening when they put the Havelock champions away by a 4—0 score. The visitors attributed their defeat to the lack of practice, as Saturday's team had never played together and several of the players had not kicked a ball till the game at Brinton's Meadows. The contest was called at 5.30 o'clock, and during the first half play was pretty evenly divided between the two teams, and it looked to the spectators like a no-score game. But no team can stand ninety minutes' play when they have had no practice, and thus the Havelock bunch were at the mercy of the C.G.E. during the last twenty-five minutes of play. Havelock brightened up at intervals and made it real interesting for the Peterborough team, but were unable to put the ball between the stakes.

The C.G.E. have a fast team, and they displayed splendid condition, and their work was such as would lead the spectators to believe that the players had been practicing faithfully. Havelock had more goals scored on them in the game than during the entire 1909 season.

The teams were:—

Havelock—Goal, Stewart; backs, Andrews and Tomlinson; halves, McKay, Kindred, Tomlinson; centre, Hitchens; wings, McPherson, Neil, Lancaster, Brown.

C.G.E.—Carlton, goal; Evans, Forrett, backs; Paggett, Milburn, Sparrow, halves; Miller, centre; Hampton, French, Williams, Baird, wings.

BRINTONS, 4; BETHANY, 2.

In the game at Bethany the Brinton team was victorious by a 4—2 score. The contest was warmly contested and was witnessed by a large crowd.

GOOD WORKOUTS HELD BY CITY LEAGUE TEAMS

The four City League baseball clubs had a large turnout of players at practice Saturday, and the ball was batted and fielded in a manner that points toward fast ball for the fans this season. Each club will produce a formidable line-up at Riverside next Saturday afternoon when the league opens. Very little change will be noted in the champion T.A.S. team, but the P.A.C. West End and Strathcona management, having been trying out a lot of material in the practices held of late, stronger teams will work in the race for the Spalding trophy than was the case last year.

Saturday the T.A.S. and West Ends practiced at Riverside, the P.A.C. at their grounds in the south end of the city and the Straths at the Oval. Several batteries were tried out by each club, as men to fill these positions are scarce, and the managers are not slow to give a trial to any player who shows any signs of being a good one.

Hickey, who jumped into senior company last season with the Straths, shows improvement this season and should help the Metheral outfit considerably. In the practice game Saturday he pitched for five innings without a run being scored against him, and only two men made third.

Practices of all clubs will be continued this week, and with fine weather to permit of such, and with good baseball weather for Saturday, the double-header will no doubt attract a large number of fans. The West Ends and T.A.S. meet in the first game and P.A.C. and Strathconas in the second.

CITY LEAGUE

The Strathconas will wear a white uniform with red trimmings.

The following P.A.C. players are requested to be at the P.A.C. ball grounds on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights for a final work-out before the City League games on Saturday afternoon: Jack Pilling, C. Pilling, Jas. Pilling, J. Mahoney, Thompson, Price, Halpin, King, Johnston, Pentland, Gordon, Winch, B. Dusty, Prest, R. Pilling, Simmons.

The sporting section of Saturday's Winnipeg Free Press contains a cut of Jerry Edmonds, who is backstoping for the Maroons.

Sav. Laing, of the West Ends dropped a foul ball on the brewery roof on Saturday afternoon during practive.

The West Ends will practice at Riverside Park to-night.

A LIKELY TRIO OF RECRUITS

Pitcher, Batter and Catcher Secured for Opening Ceremonies of City Baseball League

Aldermen Duffus, Bradburn and Buller this morning consented to take part in the ceremonies which will inaugurate the city baseball league season at Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon. Ald. Duffus will do the "flinging," Ald. Bradburn, the "swatting" and Ald. Buller the "juggling" with the big mit and will incidentally be called upon to wear that piece of face covering which in many ways resembles the now famous dog muzzle. The fee of admission will not be increased.

Y.M.C.A SPORTS

The junior boys had a large turnout to their "hyke" up the canal Saturday. Mr. Thompson, the physical director, accompanied the boys and when about three miles out everybody got busy and made camp. Bon-fires were lighted and the raw potatoes were soon in the fire. The pork and beans were got ready and dinner was enjoyed by all. After dinner baseball was played and scouting was engaged in. All returned about 4.30 p.m. tired but delighted with the day's outing. Plan to be at the next one.

Tuesday and Thursday from 4 to 6 will be junior days at Riverside Park Baseball and athletics.

TENNIS.

Have you played off your games in the Y.M.C.A. tennis club tournament. First round must be completed this week.

ATHLETICS.

Tuesday and Thursday at 6.30 at Riverside Park athletics will be taken up in the various branches in preparation for the competitions which will be held throughout the summer months.

BASEBALL

Toronto lost both games of a double-header on Saturday.

Dave Croft, a catcher of the West Toronto City League, will be given a trial with the Leafs.

Grimshaw still leads the Eastern League batters with 373.

In the opening of the Western Ontario Baseball League at Berlin, the Brantford team won 9—2. "Dubbie" Shea played for the winners.

No Bowling Game

The Peterborough ten-pin bowlers failed to put in an appearance at the Palace bowling alleys last evening, and consequently the large crowd of spectators went home disappointed.—Lindsay Warder.

MALIBRAN'S CAPTIVITY.

A Romantic Incident In the Career of the Great Singer.

The following incident is told of Mme. Malibran, whose voice once upon a time excited the most unromantic to folly.

She was resting in her dressing room at the theater after singing in the part of Desdemona, her passionate soul still quivering with the emotion of the part and the tears and applause of her listeners. A person entered and begged her to go to her mother, who had been taken ill. A carriage, not her own, was at the door. She was whirled through the streets and led, much to her surprise and fear into a strange house and to an excellent boudoir, hung and carpeted with rose colored silk.

Here the beautiful songstress was left alone after being assured by her attendants that her mother was well, that the message was a subterfuge and that her captivity would last until she sang something.

On a low seat sat a lyre such as that which thrilled in Malibran's fingers as she sang Desdemona's touching song.

At first she determined to resist, but after a short time her mind reverted to the evening, and almost unconsciously she took up the instrument and sang the "Romance de Saule." As she concluded sounds of enthusiastic applause and trembling accents of delight came to her through the silk hangings, and she was then conducted by liveried servants to her carriage and to her home.

The next morning she found on her table a casket containing a magnificent pair of earrings, and inside the cover, written in diamonds, was the word "Merci." But the event remained a mystery to her forever.

Martial Law In Argentina.

Buenos Ayres, May 16.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday voted a proclamation of martial law throughout the republic, owing to threats of a general strike during the centenary celebration of Argentina's independence. The opening of the celebration is fixed for May 25.

Washout on Rideau Canal.

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 97 per cent. of hair troubles.

These pernicious, persistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that Wm. Madill, who is the agent in Peterborough, guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and all over Canada.

YOUNG OFFICER'S TRIP

LT. ETHERTON TELLS OF JOURNEY IN FORBIDDEN LANDS.

He Spent Three Months In Making a Four Thousand Mile Expedition on Behalf of the Government Into the Country Behind the Himalayas—Tells of Kalmuck Women Who Make Love on Horseback.

Lieutenant Etherton, the young officer in the Garhwal Rifles, who has just arrived in England after completing a secret service mission on behalf of the British Government, spent three months in his overland journey from the Himalayas, through Chinese Turkistan, Mongolia, and Siberia, to the Trans-Siberian Railway, a total distance of nearly 4,000 miles.

After suffering almost incredible hardships and privations, Lieutenant Etherton finally carried his mission to a triumphal conclusion. At the end of his journey he received a cable from England announcing the death of his mother.

Some idea of the remarkable nature of Lieutenant Etherton's explorations may be gleaned from the fact that he encountered:

Strange nomad women in Chinese Turkistan who ride bucking horses in thigh-boots with high French heels, and are wooed and won by being captured on horseback. As many as a dozen suitors frequently take part in an exciting "chase of love";

District officials who were completely won over by the gift of a bottle of preserved gooseberries or a box of assorted crystallized fruit;

Mongolian natives who were utterly cowed by the daily "telescoping" of the explorer's collapsible bed;

A mysterious deserted lake, near the Russian frontier, eight hundred miles in extent, but of unknown depth, in which no fish swim and no boats float.

A press representative who visited Lieutenant Etherton at his home in Hampshire, whither the young officer had gone to recuperate for a few days after his trying ordeal of anxiety, hunger and intense cold, found a slim, dark-haired young man of middle height, dressed in service khaki.

Lieutenant Etherton, though only thirty years of age, has already traveled extensively in the United States, in Australia, and in South Africa, where he served with Kitchener's Fighting Scouts, and was awarded the medal with several clasps.

"This is good after Siberia," he observed as he entered his study from the garden, drinking in the warm sunlight and balmy air of a perfect English spring day.

"No one who has not experienced it can realize what it means to travel for months in a desolate country, all rocks and snow, with the thermometer sometimes 46 degrees below zero, in a fierce blizzard.

"I wore on my journey a heavy overcoat of black leather, lined with thick fur, a fur jacket and trousers, a fur waistcoat, and thick felt boots, but the knife-edged wind sometimes cut right through these as if they had been so much paper.

"One such blizzard caught us in the Altai Mountains, and as a result of this experience I was badly frostbitten. My legs suffered the most, but by cutting away dead flesh, by snow-massage, frequent bandaging, and the attention I received at a small Russian military post on the Russo-Chinese frontier, I saved both legs, although I still feel the effects of frostbite.

"We started from Lansdowne, in the Himalayas, on March 15, 1909," said Lieutenant Etherton in describing his journey. "The expedition, in addition to myself, consisted of ten men, all of whom, however, with the exception of my sturdy little Garhwali orderly, who is here with me now, were changed from time to time.

"My presents for officials and others in the territory through which I had planned to travel had been carefully chosen. They included the following:

Twelve one and two-pound boxes of crystallized fruits.

Twelve one and two-pound bottles of preserved fruits.

Six large hunting knives.

Four large bottles of liqueurs.

Four small bottles of liqueurs.

One silver watch.

A plentiful supply of paper money.

"The liqueurs were for the 'Ambans' or high Chinese officials encountered along the line of route, the crystallized and the bottled fruits for the 'Begs,' or smaller officials. I found my gifts most effective.

"A bottle of milk punch which I presented to one official and a bottle of cherry brandy which another received from me, had especially good results.

"Our itinerary, which can be readily followed in outline on any map, was as follows:

"From Lansdowne to Rawalpindi, Kashmir, Gilgit, Honza, over the Pamirs—'the Roof of the World'—and by the little-known Yarkand River into the Kulan Urgu Valley; thence into the Asgar Sai Valley, and on to Yarkand, continuing through Chinese Turkistan, over the Tian Chae Mountains to Mongolia, across the Altai Mountains to Siberia, and so to the Trans-Siberian Railway—which was struck at Novo Nicholaevsk Station; thence by rail to Moscow, Warsaw, and Berlin, and so through Hanover to England.

"The journey, by the route I followed, had never been made before.

"From the time we left Kashmir until we touched the Trans-Siberian Railway it was all marching or riding—except the last 750 miles through Siberia, which were accomplished by sledge.

"During most of the journey our diet was confined to the following articles for every meal of the day: Mutton, rice potatoes.

"I never want to look at mutton again. How I longed for a decent civilized meal and a mug of good Pilsener! What I regretted most of all, however, was the absence of any fellow-being of my own race with whom to talk."

Ivy from Washington's tomb will form a wreath to be placed on King Edwards' tomb.

Second Drowning In Week.

Halifax, May 16.—The second drowning accident within a week occurred Saturday afternoon, when David Lockedale, an employe in the Imperial Publishing Co., lost his life while out fishing with a companion named Bishop, on Williams' Lake, about two miles from this city.

Rich Placer Find.

Victoria, B.C., May 16.—Rich placers have been found in northern British Columbia, near the head waters of Taku Inlet, and miners are taking out five cents a pan. Jack Myland trader, who arrived from Telegraph Creek Saturday, brought authentic news of this find.

Premier Scott Better.

Ottawa, May 16.—Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, is here for a few days. He is greatly improved in health and returning home from a European trip.

French Disperse Natives.

Paris, May 16.—A despatch to the Minister of Colonies from Monovo, Wadai, Central Soudan, reports that a French punitive column numbering 200, encountered and dispersed the enemy at Agredah. The natives abandoned 100 dead, including eight chiefs and three flags. The French had 12 men wounded.

Gave Children Dog Poison.

Demopolis, Ala., May 16.—Because she was refused permission to go to Birmingham, a ten-year-old negress, emplayed by Davis Collins, a wealthy planter, as a nurse for his two small children, gave dog poison to them. The younger, aged three months, died in agony.

Bishop Supports Him.

Windsor, May 16.—Bishop Fallon, new head of the London diocese, in a strong sermon at Our Lady of the Lake Church, Walkerville, declared he would support Rev. Father Beaudoin, parish priest, in his campaign against road houses in the vicinity of the church in Sandwich East. At the close of the service, Bishop Fallon administered the pledge to a large confirmation class to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors until 21 years of age.

THE WAR OF THE KISS

A Message That No Woman Could Resist.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, having traveled from Munich by post to the Prussian capital, was received at the palace of the king as befitted his rank and shown to his apartments. There the prince, having thrown off his traveling clothes and put on evening dress, left his rooms, walked through the corridor and was descending the main staircase when he met coming up a lady so plainly dressed that he supposed her to be some one not of royal blood on duty at the palace.

But the girl was ravishingly beautiful. Her complexion was a mingling of white and red roses, her brows two delicately penciled arcs under which were eyes blue as heaven's vault, her hair a wreath of finest yellow silk tinged with old gold, her cameo cut lips vermilion.

The prince looked at her enraptured. Under his admiring gaze she lowered her eyes. Following an impulse he could not resist, he bent forward as he passed her and imprinted a kiss on her damask cheek.

He had no sooner committed the act than he was startled at his own rashness. A quick movement in the corridor above admonished him that some one had witnessed the kiss. The lady without a word passed on up the staircase. The prince went on down and entered a room where members of the royal family were waiting for him.

An hour later dinner was announced. When the royal party were assembled Prince Ferdinand saw at the other end of the apartment the lady he had met on the staircase and had kissed. She was a princess of the blood.

If she was beautiful in ordinary apparel her beauty was a hundred times enhanced by the court costume in which she was now robed. Prince Ferdinand knew that his act had been witnessed. He was sure that he would be called to account, but as to how or by whom the blow would be dealt he was entirely ignorant. He was ready to meet it.

At the dinner a rigid court ceremonial was observed. The conversation was dull, and there was little of it. The prince's eyes when he was not observed were fastened on the woman he had kissed. Once, and once only, during the dinner she turned her eyes upon him, kept them upon him for a few moments, then turned them away. In them he sought for some expression of feeling, whether of reproach, forgiveness, contempt, irritation. There was nothing but two beautiful eyes without emotion.

FIRED TOWARD THE HEAVENS, THEN SANK DOWN ON THE GROUND.

After the dinner Prince Ferdinand was received by the king and queen and obliged to speak a few meaningless words in their august ears. Then he strolled away. In a card room he saw a young man covered with decorations, some of them worn only by royalty, hanging over the woman he had kissed. His face was pale, and his lips were set firmly, as if repressing some strong emotion. But neither he nor the princess looked at Prince Ferdinand.

As Ferdinand was about to go up to his suit of apartments an officer in the uniform of the royal household guard stepped up to him, bowed ceremoniously and asked if his serene transparency would accord him a few minutes' interview. Ferdinand knew that the blow was about to fall. He graciously granted the request and asked if the officer would visit him in his apartments. The officer assented and followed him.

In Ferdinand's reception room, after many ceremonial observances, the officer said:

"I am the bearer of a message from his royal highness the Crown Prince Adolph of Meklen-Swinitz, asking satisfaction for the insult offered by you to the Princess Maria, the grand duke's betrothed. From the nature of that insult it will of course appear to your serene transparency that no apology can be accepted."

Prince Ferdinand replied to the message as became a prince of the blood and referred the officer to the Duke of Zwingen, whom Ferdinand had entertained at Munich. The two seconds arranged a meeting for the next morning at sunrise in a wood in rear of the palace where the dishonor consequent upon the kiss could be washed away in blood. There Prince Ferdinand and the crown prince met the next morning, and as soon as the former set eyes on the latter he recognized the man he had seen the evening before hanging over the Princess Maria.

He had been waiting for his betrothed as she mounted the staircase and had seen the kiss.

In those days the rapier was the usual weapon in such affairs, but Prince Ferdinand chose pistols. They were clumsy affairs, and the crown prince scowled when he heard of his opponent's choice. The principals were posted and the signal given. A single shot was heard, that of the crown prince. Ferdinand slowly raised his arm and fired toward the heavens, then sank down on the ground.

Moved by Prince Ferdinand's refusal to defend himself, his opponent went to him and with the others bent over him sympathetically.

"Will your royal highness be the bearer of my apologies to the Princess Maria and tell her that I regard the price paid for what I received a mere bagatelle."

Prince Ferdinand lay at the point of death for a time, then slowly recovered. When able to travel he was taken back to Munich, where he eventually regained his lost strength.

There were at that time strained conditions among the German states. Bavaria and several other principalities in the eastern portion of Germany were chafing under certain breaches of treaty by the king of Prussia, who headed a coalition of the more western sovereigns, among whom was the Grand Duke of Meklin-Swinitz. The king of Bavaria, incensed at what he conceived in the serious wounding of Prince Ferdinand by the crown prince of Meklin-Swinitz to be an insult offered to a guest, broke off negotiations that were pending and declared war against the grand duke. This involved all the powers concerned in the existing status and precipitated a general conflict.

Prince Ferdinand took a prominent part in the conflict, in which the eastern principalities in time conquered a peace. When the capital of the grand duchy of Meklin-Swinitz lay at the mercy of the opposition allies the sovereign sent his most skillful diplomat to discover on what terms they would evacuate his territory. The ambassador found himself compelled to treat with the king of Bavaria.

"Go and tell your master," said the king sternly, "that the only terms on which his territory will be evacuated are that he will support our application to the king of Prussia for the hand of the Princess Maria. If he refuses by tomorrow evening I will bombard his palace."

The grand duke of Meklin-Swinitz was only too glad to save his dukedom on such terms and informed the king of Prussia that the engagement between his son and the princess must be broken off. The crown prince, who had been so important a part in the cause of the war at this stage, was not even consulted. Nevertheless he was bitterly moved at having to give up a woman he loved.

It was expected by those who knew best that the announcement that a treaty of peace had been signed would be simultaneous with an announcement of a betrothal between Prince Ferdinand and the Princess Maria. Such was not the case. There could be no objection on the part of the king of Prussia to transfer his niece from one prince to another. But no formal application was made. The armies were withdrawn, and the sovereigns retired to their different kingdoms, dukedoms and principalities to enjoy themselves each in his own fashion, while his chancellor of the exchequer raised money to pay off the debt incurred during the war.

The king of Prussia waited, expecting every day to receive a formal application from the king of Bavaria for the hand of his niece on behalf of Prince Ferdinand. Not that the king of Prussia cared especially whom the princess married, provided the alliance was with a royal house, but after the demand of the king of Bavaria that the grand duke of Meklin-Swinitz should support him in an application of her hand for Prince Ferdinand a failure to make such a demand was to be regarded as an insult.

As the king of Prussia was about to organize a cabal of states to aid him in resenting the insult an ambassador arrived at the Prussian court bearing a letter from the king of Bavaria asking if a visit from Prince Ferdinand would be agreeable. A favorable answer was returned, and in due time Prince Ferdinand appeared. It was of course to be supposed that he had come to make the application in person, and all thought of another war was abandoned.

And so it was that Prince Ferdinand a second time alighted before the royal palace and was formally received and shown to his apartments.

The Princess Maria from a window saw him enter. Taking position on the floor below the prince's suit, she waited till she heard him leave his room, then walked slowly up the main staircase.

They met midway, the princess blushing scarlet. She turned her eyes upon him; he bent forward and touched her cheek with his lips. But this time he did more—he encircled her with his arms, and her head sank upon his breast.

"Did Adolph deliver my message?" he asked.

"He did. No woman could resist it."

The marriage between Prince Ferdinand and the Princess Maria was understood all over Europe to be a love match.

Pueblo Indians in New Mexico are on the warpath and a massacre of white ranchers is feared.

QUEEN MARY DESCRIBED BY HER OWN MOTHER

What the New Queen Was Like As a Little Child—Her Popularity With the British People—Fond of Charity Work

The new Queen is an English princess born and bred—British by training and habit. No British woman has become the mother of the heir of the throne since the date, a little more than two hundred years ago, when the Lady Anne Hyde, daughter of the Lord Chancellor of the day, was wedded by the prince who was then heir apparent to the throne, afterward King James II., and became the mother of two queens, Mary II. and Anne.

Her Royal Highness Queen Victoria Mary Augusta L[illegible] Claudine Agnes, is a great-granddaughter of King George III. Her husband is a generation lower down, for he is a great-great-grandson of the same king, but this is easily accounted for by the fact that the mother of the duchess was fourteen years younger than the late Queen Victoria, and, moreover, was not married till she was thirty-three years of age. King George III. had fourteen children, but of these there were singularly few descendants in the second generation.

The Queen's grandfather, Prince Adolphus, Duke of Cambridge, was one of those who married to oblige the nation when he had reached the age of forty-two, and he had three children, the Duke of Cambridge, who became commander-in-chief of the army; Princess Augusta, who married the grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Sterlitz, and Princess Mary Adelaide, who married Duke Francis of Teck, and became the mother of the present Queen, as well as of three sons.

NAME SHORTENED TO MAY.

The good humor, gayety, and affability of Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck, caused the new Queen to inherit popularity with the nation. The Queen was born in Kensington Palace at one minute before midnight, May 26, 1867, in a room adjacent to that in which Queen Victoria first saw the light of day, forty-eight years earlier.

From the first her name was shortened into May, she having been born in that month, and also because the number of Victorias in the younger generation of princesses was embarrassing.

Between her mother and the future Queen of England there existed the fondest devotion. In writing of the baby to a friend in March, 1868, the Duchess of Teck said:

"She really is as sweet and engaging [illegible] as you can wish to see, full of life and fun, and playful as a kitten; with the deepest blue eyes imaginable, quantities of fair hair, a pink and white complexion, and a most perfect figure. In a word, she is a model of a baby. You must amicably overlook her mother's fond conceit in her own child, though I must say May wins all hearts by her bright face and smile and endearing ways. Her papa is in a quiet way thoroughly devoted to her, and she adores him, though her mamma is her best playfellow."

MUSIC HER ACCOMPLISHMENT.

The little princess grew up at White Lodge, Richmond, the property of Queen Victoria. She was taught several languages from her infancy upward, having a German governess and a French maid, and when she was only nine years of age, her mother wrote of her:—

"May is quick and clever, understands German, and is musical."

Music is one of the Queen's greatest accomplishments, she having a beautiful soprano voice and singing with great expression. She was a pupil of Sig. Tosti.

The friendship between the Queen and her husband began at an early age and there was much visiting between the two families. Though King George and the Queen were both lively children, it is said the gentle and more melancholy elder son of the then Prince of Wales, the late Duke of Clarence, was more attractive to the little princess at that time.

Economy forced the Duke and Duchess of Teck to live abroad about 1883, and they passed the greater part of their period of absence in Florence, and there Princess May, then in her teens, studied art under the guidance of her mother.

CHARITY AND INDUSTRY.

After an absence of eighteen months she returned to London and attended her first Royal drawing room in the spring of 1886. She early developed notable characteristics of her mother charity and industry. Her charity, too, is of a practical nature. One incident is recorded of her helping an old woman to gather dried sticks, and another, when the future Queen and her mother lifted a little wagon over a hedge to oblige a poor girl, who was thus saved a long journey around. Chief among their interests, however, was the Needle Work Guild, which bound each member to make at least two garments a year for the poor.

In 1887 the Duchess of Teck wrote a friend:—

"May and I threw ourselves into the guild work, which took up nearly all our time through the whole of November and the early part of December, though we had most excellent helpers. The guild clothes had been pouring in ever since about the middle of October, and had overflowed the children corridor, anteroom, inner schoolroom and next room. So you may imagine what a tremendous business the unpacking, sorting, arranging, and repacking was, independently of the dividing and distributing. May knelt so long at first over the huge parcels and bundles that she nearly gave herself housemaid's knee. Indeed, she worked too energetically. May contributed 461 articles."

Her charitable work won general recognition, so when, in 1891 it was announced that the then heir to the throne, the Duke of Clarence, was betrothed to his cousin May, public satisfaction was great.

Less than a month after the betrothal the Duke of Clarence was taken ill with influenza, and died in a week. It was more than a year later that it become known that the Princess May would be the bride of the heir to the throne, after all, and on July 6, 1893, the marriage took place in the chapel royal, St. James. The bridal dress was of satin, woven in Spitalfields, as one of the charitable efforts in which the bride had taken great interest was the revival of English silk weaving, and the bringing of home manufactured silks into general use in Britain. The tweeds in the trousseau all came from Scotland, the flannels from Wales, and the lace from Ireland.

The Duchess of Teck died the year following the birth of the new Prince of Wales, and the Queen's father has died since.

DISSERTATION ON HALLEY'S COMET

The regular meeting of Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society will be held in the Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Took Place From a Waggon on George St. This Afternoon

What might be called an impromptu spread was accidentally provided for passers-by this afternoon, had they been disposed to avail themselves of it. Part of a load of buscuits and small cakes belonging to Perkins, Ince wholesale grocery, was spilled while the waggon was being driven down George street.

Several of the boxes were broken open and their contents scattered on the road. Most of the boxes were safe however, and the driver was able to pile the biscuits back and proceed on on his way.

Lessons From the Comet

Last night at the Springville Presbyterian church Rev. Dr. Marsh, the pastor, spoke of the lessons to be learned from Halley's comet.

A TEMPTATION.

How a Young French Girl Undertook a Bit of Diplomacy.

By GWENDOLEN ADAMS.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

A ball was in progress at the Austrian embassy in Paris. The host approached one of his guests, Mlle. Elise de Guillemette, a girl of twenty, offered her his arm and led her to a secluded spot.

"Mademoiselle," he said, "would you like to improve the deplorable financial position of your family?"

"I certainly would, your excellency."

"In my country the government helps those of noble blood who have lost the wherewithal to retain their proper station. A republic does not. It is in my power to help you."

The ambassador paused and looked searchingly at the girl's face as if wondering if he dared propose what he had in his mind. Then, with a plunge, he continued:

"There is a certain state paper that has been left in the keeping of the American minister. It is in the immediate care of Mr. Hugh Hildreth, the secretary of legation. Mr. Hildreth is a bachelor, his mother and sister doing the social honors of his house. It is in my power to secure you an invitation to his house. Go there, find out where he keeps this paper, secure possession of it without his knowledge that you have done so, copy its essential features, replace it, bring the copy to me, and I will give you 500,000 francs."

"Why does your excellency select me for this work?" asked the astonished girl.

"Because you are sufficiently beautiful and attractive to compel any man to love you. Love is the key we diplomats use to unlock state secrets."

Mlle. de Guillemette was as pure a girl as ever lived, but she was young, and the wily Austrian used a process of devil reasoning which, with a certain fascination such a work had for her, secured her to his purpose. He introduced Hugh Hildreth to her, who spent the rest of the evening in her company, and the next day she received from his mother a formal invitation to visit at her son's country seat.

The Austrian ambassador gave her certain data by which she would know it, the most important of which was that it related to the "open door" in China. Mlle. de Guillemette was received with every attention by her hosts, and young Hildreth was from the first devoted to her. Indeed, so kind were they all that she found it impossible to attempt to extort the secret for which she had come.

"I HAVE BEEN BEHIND THAT CURTAIN."

Furthermore, she had neither that cold, conscienceless nature required for such a work nor diplomatic experience to enable her to bring it to a successful termination. She felt that any word uttered with a view to lead up to the subject of the state paper would result in a detection of her object. The result was that she spent a week with the Hildreths without having made the slightest progress and announced that she would leave the next day.

But Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth, instructed by Hugh, would not consent to her departure. The poor girl would have been glad to remain, but away from the malign influence of her employer the fact that she had come for a dishonorable purpose oppressed her, and she wished to wash her hands of what she had undertaken. But so pressing was the invitation to remain longer that she consented.

The same evening Hugh Hildreth led her into his library and fell to asking her questions as to her family. She told him what they had been before the revolution—how her mother had struggled to maintain at least a respectable position and how she longed to assist her mother, but was powerless. Then Hildreth began to talk of himself and his aspirations in public life. Shame at the contemptible work she had come to his house to accomplish prompted her to avert her gaze and cast her eyes upon the floor.

Her host turned the subject to literature. For awhile he discussed books and their authors. Then, going to one of the shelves that lined the room, he showed her a book that he said he desired especially she should read. Then after a trifle more of conversation he left her and went upstairs.

As soon as he had gone she took the book he had referred to from the shelf and, sitting down with it, began to read. It interested her, and she continued her perusal of it for some time. Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth bid her good night as they went up to bed, and she was left alone.

Between the leaves of the volume she read was a bit of paper evidently intended for a temporary bookmark. Something was written on the paper in pencil, and a natural curiosity prompted her to read it. The words were, "Behind volume 2, 'Racine.'"

The words seemed to mean something. She went to the shelves, found the works of Racine and removed the second volume. Passing her finger along the wall behind where it had stood, she encountered a raised button. Removing several more books that stood beside the first, she saw what she had felt—something that looked like the button of an electric bell. She was tempted to press it, but dared not, fearing to ring.

While thinking it occurred to her that this might be the entrance to a secret space for keeping valuables—perhaps state papers. Might not the paper she had found in the volume be a memorandum of where the chamber lay. Doubtless Hildreth had inadvertently used the slip as a bookmark and forgotten to remove it. Moved by curiosity alone, she nerved herself to press the button. The door of a little safe a few inches square flew open. Within lay a paper. She took it out and read there in pencil on the outside, "The open door."

What she had come to do and had not tried to do had been done for her. Here was the document she required. On a desk in the same room were pen, ink and paper. She alone of the family remained below. She might take the paper to the desk, copy its essential points, which was all her employer required, replace it, put everything back as she found it, and who would be the wiser?

Another plan suggested itself to her. She might take the paper to her room, copy it, steal downstairs, put it back in the safe and replace the books before it.

Mlle. de Guillemette stood with the paper in her hand, thinking of the 500,000 francs that she could gain by taking a copy of its contents to the Austrian ambassador. With the money she could place her family at least beyond want. Her employer had told her that such were the methods in vogue among European diplomats; that he would not scruple himself to obtain the document surreptitiously; that she would be unwise to let pass such a means of re-establishing her family.

Then she thought of the Hildreths—mother, daughter, son. They had with true American warmth taken her to their hearts. They had pitied her for the position she occupied of one born to a station she could not support. Hugh had that very evening told her of his ambition. That ambition she would shatter by stealing the contents of an important paper which had been intrusted to his care. He would never be forgiven for the leak, for he would be considered either a fool or a knave.

She thrust the document back into the safe, closed the door, replaced the books before it and, taking up the volume that had been recommended to her, sat down all of a tremor.

"How do you like it?" said a voice behind her.

Turning, she saw Hugh Hildreth advancing.

"Something is wrong with you," he said sympathetically.

She burst into convulsive sobbing.

"Tell me your trouble, little girl," he added, drawing a chair up before her.

"I am not fit to be in the home of such kind people. Please send me away!"

"On the contrary, you have achieved that which I have never achieved—you have resisted a terrible temptation. I myself have been tempted and usually succumbed. And mine was not half the strain you have borne."

She looked at him through her tears in astonishment. "How do you know that I have been tempted?" she asked.

"That Austrian's methods I know well. He would give millions for the contents of the document you have just handled."

"You saw me!" She was trembling from head to foot.

"Yes; I laid a trap for you. When the Austrian introduced me I knew he had a motive. I saw at once that you were not the girl for such work, and when you were going away without even an attempt I determined to put you to a severe test. I wished to see how you would act with the object in your hands for which you had come. I called your attention to the volume I wished you to read and [illegible] left a guide in it to my safe and left the safe unlocked. Then I went upstairs by the main staircase and came down by a rear one. I have been behind that curtain, where I could see and not be seen. I have witnessed your temptation and your triumph."

"You mean my degradation at having listened to such a temptation."

"Not at all. That Austrian fiend could start an angel on a downward course. You are excusable for the starting and to be commended for the ending. I confess I have been under the rack myself lest you should yield. If you had yielded it would have broken my heart and I should have regretted tempting you. As it is, I rejoice that I did."

The De Guillemettes, at least that branch of the family consisting of Mlle. Elise de Guillemette and her mother, were benefited some time after this occurrence by a marriage between Mlle. Elise de Guillemette and the wealthy American diplomat, Hugh Hildreth.

NIECE SUSPECTS THAT LOVE WAS THE MOTIVE OF CRIME

Suggested That Baldwin Killed Thompson Because He Wanted to Marry Mrs. Thompson—The Stamford Township Tragedy.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 17.—That John Baldwin, whose dead body was found in a cowshed on the Thompson farm in Stamford Township on Wednesday, May 4, was in love with his employer's wife, was hinted at the inquest into the death of Benjamin Thompson, who died May 7.

Baldwin was often in company with Mrs. Thompson, according to the evidence of the dead farmer's niece, who swore that a relative feared that Baldwin wanted to marry his wife.

After deliberating forty-five minutes, the jury brought in the following verdict: "That Benjamin Thompson came to his death from arsenic poisoning, administered by some person or persons unknown."

Thompson died after drinking poisoned cider. Baldwin, a farm hand, died three days before, supposedly a suicide. Dr. R. J. Tremble of Queenston testified to having been called on Monday, May 2, to attend Thompson, about twenty-four hours after the latter claimed to have drunk the poisoned cider. The patient complained of a burning sensation in his stomach and constant vomiting since three o'clock Saturday.

Thompson told witness he and Baldwin had hidden the only package of Paris green on the premises, its whereabout being unknown to the others. Thompson had objected to notifying the police, saying: "He's a good man; he wouldn't have done it if he hadn't been drunk." Thompson believed Baldwin was angered because the cider had been locked up. The men had quarrelled Saturday afternoon, April 13. Mrs. Thompson did not discuss the matter with the witness.

"Do you believe Thompson died from poisoning?" asked Coroner McGarry.

"From the appearance of the pitcher containing sediment, presumably Paris green, from symptoms and post mortem results, I believe Thompson died from arsenic poisoning," was the reply.

Mrs. Margaret Bracken, Thompson's sister, swore that Mrs. Thompson had said: "I don't see why John would do it," when discussing the poisoning of her husband. Baldwin had asked the witness Tuesday if she believed her brother had been poisoned. "If Ben was poisoned, he was poisoned when he was sick two weeks ago," she replied. She told of a similar illness Thompson had a fortnight previous to the fatal attack, but knew little of the circumstances. Thompson had told his sister he couldn't see why Baldwin would poison him, because he had left a better job and begged to be employed by him.

"I was vomiting my heart out and Ida never came near me," Thompson told the witness Monday.

"Were relations between Thompson and his wife happy?" asked the coroner.

"I never heard anything to the contrary," replied the witness.

Miss Loretto Thompson, niece of the dead farmer, testified that her uncle said Monday: "Isn't it terrible that a fellow should poison me after all I've done for him."

"What's the matter; has uncle been poisoned?" witness asked Mrs. Thompson, when she arrived at the Thompson home Monday.

"Sure," replied the sick man's wife, breaking down crying.

Tuesday morning the witness met Baldwin on the road and asked him to tell Mrs. Bracken that Thompson was apparently dying. Baldwin seemed nervous she thought. She told of finding Baldwin's body in the cowshed Wednesday morning, and missing the carbolic bottle from the kitchen. The dead man's body was still warm when found.

The most startling evidence given was when Miss Thompson declared her uncle had said to her: "I wonder if that fool thought the old man would let him run the place and marry Ida if he got rid of me?"

Archie Thompson, the eight-year-old son of the dead farmer, told of a quarrel between his father and Baldwin in the barn on the Saturday previous to the farmer drinking the poisoned cider.

It is understood that the provincial police will further investigate the two mysterious deaths on the lonely farm near the river.

Rebels Give Up.

Constantinople, May 17.—Peace pour parlers have been under way between the Turkish Government and the leaders of the Albanian rebels for five days, and there has been no fighting for a week. Advices received yesterday indicate that the rebels will surrender, accepting the Government's peace terms.

Bribery Case Adjourned.

Chicago, May 17.—The trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, the state representative charged with bribing other representatives to vote for William Lorimer for Senator, went over to May 24 yesterday. Judge McSurley ruled that on that date he would hear a motion to quash the indictment against Browne.

Double Drowning.

Vancouver, May 17.—Walking along the edge of a 50-foot cliff, Miss Tement slipped over into the whirlpool of the Capilano Canyon on Sunday afternoon. Attracted by her screams, her brother, Thomas Tement, aged 25, tried to rescue her, but both sank in the chilly glacial stream.

Soldier Suicides.

Halifax, N.S., May 17.—Sapper Watson of the Royal Canadian Engineers, while in the guard-room early yesterday tied a string to the trigger of a loaded rifle, pointed the muzzle to his head, and pulling the string with his foot, blew the top of his head off.

COL. WM F CODY. "BUFFALO BILL"

"Buffalo Bill," long the beau ideal of youth, the hero of the small boy and the admiration of thousands who love the stirring days of the Western frontier, is saying his farewell. No more will his faithful rifle send leaden messengers to burst in pieces the flying spheres, and no more will the spotlight play on those rugged features, on that broad sombrero hat and the buckskin shirt. He has played his last New York engagement in "The Wild West" in the Madison Square Garden, New York.

It will be hard for young and old to see him go, for he has been for years an American institution and recognized as such wherever his enterprise led him.

In these days, when Denver has nearly as many electric lights as New York, and oyster trains go across the continent with New York counts, it is hard to realize what the West was in earlier days.

COMET GETTING NEARER TO THIS WORLD OF OURS

To-morrow is the Day That it Passes Between the Earth and the Sun—Astronomers Dispute About the Tail.

Toronto, May 17.—To-morrow evening Halley's comet passes between us and the sun. After that date it will be in the evening sky, setting after the sun.

In the next few days thereafter the celestial visitor should present a magnificent spectacle in the evening sky, with a tail pointing up from the horizon one-third of the distance to the zenith. Each night the comet will set later, getting fainter and fainter, until it bids us au revoir for another seventy-five years. This will be probably in the latter part of June.

Those persons who have been making their wills and bidding their families a tearful good-bye in the expectation that the earth will plunge through the comet's tail to-morrow and be submerged in poisonous gases will be relieved by the declaration of Prof. David Edgar Rice of Columbia University, New York, that the tail will approach no near to the earth than 13,000,000 miles.

"The comet's tail and the earth are now 20,000,000 miles apart," says Prof. Rice. "Although they are moving 'head-on' at a relative speed of forty miles a second, I am sure they will not touch. No bona fide astronomers have predicted that they will meet. In fact, many astronomers believe the tail which we see is only an optical illusion caused by the sun's reflection."

"The earth on May 18 will be 93,000,000 miles from the sun. The comet will be between the earth and the sun—13,000,000 miles from the earth."

Despite Prof. Rice's soothing statement, astronomers all over the country are still figuring that the tail will sweep over the earth on Wednesday.

ROOSEVELT SEES KING

George Fifth Welcomes Ex President to London.

London, May 17.—Theodore Roosevelt, special U. S. ambassador to the funeral of King Edward, arrived in London yesterday morning, and was received by King George at Marlborough House, and later visited the throne room in Buckingham Palace, where the body of the late King Edward is privately lying in state.

The entrance to the city of Mr. Roosevelt was a quiet one. It was Whit Monday holiday, but, despite the fact, the popular crowd at Victoria Station was a small one. There was no cheering, but as Mr. Roosevelt alighted from the train and was escorted by Ambassador Whitelaw Reid to the royal carriage, which had been sent for him, those who looked on silently lifted their hats.

At Queensborough, Mr. Roosevelt was joined by the aides-de-camp appointed by King George to attend upon him, Lord Dundonald and Commander Charles E. F. Cunningham-Graham, and by Vice-Admiral Sir George Neville, commanding a division of the home fleet, who received the former President in the name of the King.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Rain has checked the forest fires in Minnesota.

Mrs. Robt. Johnston of Woodburn was run over and killed at a railway crossing at Gananoque.

Thirty-five negro convicts lost their lives in a fire which one of them started in an effort to escape from an Alabama stockade.

A Black Hand man who tried to extort $15,000 from Caruso at New York was sentenced to a term exceeding three years in Sing Sing Prison.

Fort Frances citizens held a mass meeting and passed strong resolutions against allowing the export of electric power to build up United States industries.

A. M. Parkin, the witness who failed to appear at the Alberta Railway inquiry, has been arrested at St. Paul on a charge of defrauding hotels out of board bills.

The great bell in the clock-tower of the Houses of Parliament at Westminster will toll to-day as the body of King Edward is passing through the streets to Westminster Hall.

At a meeting of the National Manufacturers at New York a proposal was made for the establishment of closer trade relations with Canada. It was also suggested that it would pay the United States to contribute liberally toward the construction of proposed Canadian canals.

KANSAS CITY DOCTOR FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

Gave a Capsule Containing Poison to His Wife's Wealthy Uncle—Ten Other Charges of Trying to Exterminate Family With Typhoid Germs Dropped—Life Imprisonment.

Kansas City, May 17.—Dr. Hyde was found guilty at 10.23 o'clock yesterday of murdering Col. Thomas H. Swope. His punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

"I will file a motion for a new trial and then take an appeal in the case," said Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel for Dr. Hyde.

The verdict came unexpectedly. Every attorney in the case had given up hope of the jury, which had been out since Friday night, reaching an agreement.

It was reported yesterday morning that one juror vowed he would "vote for acquittal until I die of old age."

Dr. B. Clark Hyde has been under suspicion in connection with the mysterious illness and deaths in the Swope family ever since the death of Col. Thomas B. Swope, on Oct. 3, 1909.

The death of Col. Swope followed soon after he had suffered a severe convulsion, and this convulsion, it was charged by members of the Swope family, followed immediately after the administration of a capsule given by direction of Dr. Hyde. Dr. Hyde said it was a digestive tablet.

DR. B. C. HYDE.

It was proven at the trial that Dr. Hyde had purchased cyanide of potassium in five grain capsules, and he was prosecuted in the belief that he gave one of these capsules to Col. Swope. Dr. Hyde claimed he bought the cyanide capsules to kill roaches in his office.

Two days before the death of Col. Swope, Moss Hunton, a cousin of the millionaire philanthropist, died at the Swope home, following a stroke of apoplexy. Dr. Hyde and Dr. G. T. Twyman of Independence, treated Hunton. The patient was bled profusely, it is charged, at the suggestion of Dr. Hyde. After six pints of blood was taken from the body the bleeding process was stopped, but not till Dr. Twyman had repeatedly protested that too much blood was being taken from the old man.

Beginning early in December, an epidemic of typhoid fever broke out in the Swope household, during which ten members of the family were stricken, after taking a capsule given at Dr. Hyde's direction, and after suffering a convulsion similar to the one that attacked Col. Swope.

Margaret Swope, Christian's sister, who was also treated by Dr. Hyde, had a convulsion soon after taking a capsule, but she was given an emetic at once by Dr. Twyman, and recovered.

On Jan. 7, 1910, the body of Christian Swope was secretly exhumed and four days later the body of Col. Swope was removed from its tomb and the viscera of the bodies taken to Chiciga for analysis. Strychnine was found.

In all Dr. Hyde was indicted on 11 counts, the remaining indictments charging him with trying to murder members of the Swope family by introducing typhoid germs and poisons into the medicines administered by him.

Boats Have to Tie Up.

Ottawa, May 17.—The washout at the Rideau Canal locks at Hog's Back will occasion much inconvenience to navigation. It may be a week or ten days before the bulkhead can be repaired, and meanwhile the boats plying between here and Kingston will be obliged to lay up until the damage is righted.

Believed to Be Suicide.

Chatham, May 17.—T. Sterling, aged 22, was found in bed at his home on South Queen street, at 11 o'clock Sunday, suffering from corrosive sublimate poisoning. Sterling had had a quarrel with his mother earlier in the day, and is thought to have taken seven capsules with suicidal intent.

Lutheran Young People.

Berlin, May 17.—At the convention of the Canada Conference of the Lutheran Young People's and Sunday Schools' Association, in session here yesterday, Rev. E. Hoffman, Berlin, was re-elected president, and Rev. O. Kloehm, Stratford, secretary. About 150 delegates are in attendance.

DIED OF BLOOD POISONING

London, Ont., May 17.—J. D. Wilson, ex-mayor of London, and one of the city's most prominent physicians, died yesterday morning after six weeks' illness with blood poisoning.

While operating on the throat of a child he contracted the disease through a slight cut on a finger. Expert advice was obtained from leading surgeons at Toronto and Baltimore, but without avail.

He was 52 years of age and was closely identified with many charitable and other public institutions of the city.

TO EXPLORE MATTAGAMI

Cobalt, May 17.—After recruiting a substantial force at his headquarters which have been established at the Matabanck for the summer, Prof. Baker of Kingston left last week on a four months' journey into the woods to examine Mattagami coal. Four men were taken to help carry food and erect tents.

The party left Haileybury for Cochrane, where they will take a train down the Transcontinental to the Mattagami where canoes will be used for a distance of 80 miles down the river.

HAS BEEN MADE A MAGISTRATE

Ottawa, May 17.—E. C. Kenkler, formerly legal adviser in the Yukon, has been appointed stipendiary magistrate of the Northwest Territories, with headquarters at Pas Mission.

This appointment is made in advance of construction work being commenced on the Hudson Bay Railroad, so that the administration of law may be provided for in the district mentioned from the beginning of operations on the new road.

Taffy for Billy King.

Ottawa, May 17.—Senator H. C. Long, chairman of the special committee of congress, on the "increase in prices," has sent a letter to the Labor Department expressing great appreciation of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King's speech on combines in the House of Commons at the time of the introduction of the new combines bill here.

DIPHTHERIA AMONG THE IMMIGRANTS

North Bay, May 17.—A special train with about 600 passengers from the steamship Empress of Ireland, for the west, arrived here Saturday afternoon. Two cars for Minneapolis were taken off and while being couple on to the Soo express on Sunday morning, two cases of diphtheria were found in one of the cars.

It is reported that the mother of the two patients and another sister were detained at Quebec on account of illness. The passengers in the car are Swedes.

CUSHIONS FOR THE CONGRESS

Montreal, May 17.—The constant effort being exerted toward the success of the Eucharistic Congress had another example when the women of St. Anthony's, St. Gabriel's and St. Leo's congregations presented Archbishop Bruchesi with one hundred and thirty-five cushions for the use of the visiting church dignitaries during the great September celebration. The sum of four hundred dollars in gold was given with the kneeling cushions.

MAKING WARLIKE PREPARATIONS

Lima, Peru, May 17.—A Government transport carrying a regiment of artillery, a hospital corps, and a big cargo of ammunition and other munitions of war, sailed yesterday from Pumbeg, a port on the northwest coast of Peru, not far from the northern boundary.

Official advices received from Ayavaca, just south of the Ecuadorian frontier, report that troops of Ecuador can be seen approaching.

IMPALED ON CHAIR BACK

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 17.—Mrs. Joseph White of Buckton, near here, fell backward from an improvised scaffolding while papering the ceiling of a room. Farm hands, returning from the fields for dinner, found her struggling feebly, with the upright sticks of the chair piercing her body. She will die.

MAPLE SYRUP IS SEIZED

Sherbrooke, Que., May 17.—Customs officers have made a large seizure of maple products from Lee Hicks, who lives just across the Canadian line, near Richford, Vt. The authorities seized a whole carload of maple sugar at Enosburg station, and a quantity at Lee's home, to the value of $4,000.

Met Death on Track.

Belle River, Ont., May 17.—While attempting to board a Grand Trunk train at Ruscomb Bridge near here, a young man named Alfred Belinger fell under the wheels, resulting in instant death, both legs and one arm being cut off and the body horribly mangled.

SEEING THE BIG THINGS

Washington, May 17.—Although Mrs. Eliza Simpson has spent the 65 years of her life in Alexandria, Va., only eight miles from the national capital, yet she saw for the first time a President of the United States. Seventeen have sat in the White House since she was born. Furthermore, Mrs. Simpson never used a telephone until Sunday, and has never been to a theatre or circus. Yesterday she visited both the theatre and circus.

MORE TROUBLE IN CHANGSHA

Washington, May 17.—Another uprising at Changsha, China, is very much feared. The commander of the U. S. gunboat Helena has telegraphed the State Department from Hankow to the effect that the conditions at Changsha were most serious, and that all foreigners were notified officially, on the 11th instant, to seek refuge on the ships that were available. The war vessels in the river are believed to be sufficiently strong to control the situation.

KING ALFONSO'S LUNG TROUBLE

Bordeaux, May 17.—King Alfonso of Spain, who arrived here at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, en route to London to attend the funeral of King Edward, will probably be examined by Prof. Moure, a noted lung specialist, before leaving the city.

An effort was made to keep the King's appointment with Prof. Moure a secret, but it leaked out through a statement of one of the members of Alfonso's suite, who said Alfonso had recently shown evidences of pulmonary weakness.

The news occasioned considerable excitement, and it is barely possible that the King will cancel the engagement, now that it has become public, to allay alarm among his Spanish subjects.

SMALL BOY'S HEROIC DEED

Thamesford, May 17.—The four-year-old daughter of James Forbes, two miles south of here, had a close call from being burned to death on Sunday. To celebrate her birthday she and her brother of six years built a bonfire, around which they were playing when her clothing ignited.

The brother gave the alarm and manfully beat the fire out as best he could with his hands.

DISMISSED THE SERVICE

Washington, May 17.—F. M. Kerby was dismissed from the Government service yesterday by a special delivery letter sent to his home, and signed by Secretary of the Interior Ballinger. It is stated that he was dismissed because he was "unworthy to remain" in the service, in that he divulged information confidently obtained as a stenographer to the Secretary of the Interior.

POISONED MACARONI

Chicago, May 17.—Five carloads of macaroni, shipped from St. Louis to Chicago and alleged to contain a poisonous coloring substance, were ordered destroyed by Judge Landis in the U. S. District Court here yesterday.

Witnesses testified that frogs, guinea pigs and dogs, into which the coloring matter had been injected, died from the effects.

NOT GUILTY OF HOMICIDE

Sherbrooke, Que., May 17.—Joseph Clark and wife, who were arrested on a charge of culpable homicide in connection with the death of W. B. Morgan, Island Brook, were discharged at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, Judge Melvent holding that the evidence was not such as to show criminal intent.

Will Not Change the Date.

Washington, May 17.—The House yesterday declined to give the necessary two-thirds vote in favor of a change of the date of inauguration of President and Vice-President of the United States from March 4 to the last Thursday in April.

Montreal, May 17.—The directors of the Societe des Arts, who were found guilty of defrauding clients out of half a million dollars, were yesterday sentenced to a fine of $1,000 each and imprisonment of six hours.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

LATE KING'S BODY CARRIED TO WESTMINISTER HALL

Special to the Review.

London, May 17.—With solemn pageantry, which drew upon the royalty of Europe for its actors, the body of Edward VII was to-day borne through the streets of London from Buckingham palace to the historic Westminster Hall. Here it will lie till Friday, by which time it is expected more than 750,000 will pass by the oak and lead that encase the monarch's body. Hours before the time for the start of the procession the streets were crowded with solid banks of humanity for mile upon mile. A sullen, cloudy sky added to the funeral air of the throngs. King George rode behind his father's coffin, with his sons at his side, the Duke of Cornwall and Prince Albert. Then came two foreign kings, Frederick of Denmark, and Haakon of Norway, brother-in-law and son-in-law, respectively, of Edward. With them was the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late ruler. Behind these kings came fifteen princes, all afoot walking four and three abreast. The numerous ranks of the royal household of Edward and Alexandra followed, preceding the nine carriages that bore the ladies of the royal families. In the first rode Queen Mother Alexandra, with her sister, Dowager Empress Marie of Russia and the Princess Royal. Behind King Edward's widow rode Queen Mary, the Princess Mary and Prince Henry. There were no foreign ambassadors in to-day's procession, which was restricted to the royal mourners. King Edward's coffin lay upon a gun carriage in the passage from the palace to the hall.

London, May 17.—Over a million people saw the procession. Pickpockets from all over the country reaped a harvest and numerous arrests were made.

THE PRECEDENCE OF THE FOREIGN SOVEREIGNS

New York, May 17.—The World's London correspondent cables: Precedence among the seven Sovereigns who are to follow King Edward's body to the grave caused such extreme difficulty for the Earl Marshal that King George himself was called on to solve the knotty problem.

Ordinarily precedence goes by seniority, but that would put King Haakon of Norway, before his father, the King of Denmark, and place the German Emperor in third place.

On the advice of the Queen-Mother, Alexandra, King George has decided that relationship to the dead Monarch shall determine precedence. This gives first place to the Emperor William the son of Edward VII.'s eldest sister. Under King George's ruling the visiting rulers will follow the body in the order given below, relationship to the dead King and year of accession to the throne, which commonly fixes the precedence, being indicated in parentheses, as:—

The German Emperor (nephew,—1888); the King of Greece (brother-in-law—1863); the King of Denmark (brother-in-law—1906); the King of Norway (son-in-law—1905); the King of Spain (niece's husband—1886); the King of Belgium (son of grand uncle—1910); the King of Portugal (descended from grand aunt—1908).

It remains to be decided whether or not the Sovereigns shall walk behind the coffin on Tuesday, when the body is removed from Buckingham Palace to lie in state in Westminster Hall, in the Parliament building.

The feeling is growing that it was a mistake to delay the funeral until Friday. The consequent disturbance of business is very serious, and the loss sustained in almost every direction is great, with no prospect of any improvement until after the funeral. The theatres are half empty; the restaurants are deserted; all that life that means expenditure of money in London is at a standstill.

FIELD CROP COMPETITION

The farmers of the community are reminded of the Field Crop Competition that is being conducted by the Agricultural Society. All entries must be in by the twenty-fifth of the month and may be left either at the office of the secretary at the court house, or at the store of Mr. George Gillespie, Simcoe street. The prizes are $15, $12, $10, $8, $5 and $2.

Apply Zam-Buk to all wounds and sores and you will be surprised how quickly it stops the smarting and brings ease. It covers the wound with a layer of protective balm, kills all poison germs already in the wound, and prevents others entering. Its rich healing herbal essences then build up from the bottom, fresh tissue; and in a wonderfully short time the wound is healed!

Zam Buk's popularity is based on merit. Imitations never work cures. Be sure and get the real thing. "Zam-Buk" is printed on every packet of the genuine. Refuse all others, 50c all druggists and stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ENTERPRISE

Last winter there were several very serious snow slides along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the Rocky Mountains. With its usual enterprise, the Canadian Pacific Railway is now preparing to prevent a recurrence of these disasters. Instead of wooden snow sheds, great steel structures are to be erected, strong enough to sustain snow loads thirty feet in depth. Plans have already been prepared, and the work will be completed before the snow flies.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has always aimed to make travel both comfortable and safe. There is no more enterprising corporation in the whole world to-day, and it has been so closely identified with Canadian progress that it has contributed to the success of many other Canadian enterprises.

POLITICS IN CIVIC AFFAIRS

Toronto Conservatives have decided to run municipal elections on political lines. Regular party candidates are to be chosen for the mayoralty, the Board of Control and aldermanic positions. We think the Toronto Conservatives are making a mistake, but it must be admitted that they have some good reasons for the course they are taking. The fact is that while talking independence in municipal affairs the Toronto Liberals have always made a party fight for civic positions. The Conservative vote would be divided, while the Liberals voted solidly for Liberal candidates. Moreover, when Liberals got into office in this way in a Conservative city, they were disposed to use their positions for the benefit of the Liberal party.

The Conservatives are simply openly recognizing the well-known fact that the Liberals have introduced politics into Toronto municipal affairs. They propose to meet the secret partisan methods of the Liberals with frank political warfare.

Nevertheless, we think it would be wiser for the Conservatives to use all their influence against the introduction of national politics into municipal contests.

The questions at issue in municipal and national affairs are so different that there is no reason why men should divide on the same lines in the two spheres. Men whose views are wide apart on the tariff question, for instance, may be agreed on a city improvement policy.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL

The Buffalo Health Department estimates that through lack of an isolation hospital the city lost from the epidemic of measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria, $215,000 in 1908, and $315,000 in 1909, that is $530,000 in two years—an amount sufficient to build a good hospital. These figures are worth noting, in view of the fact that Peterborough has now under consideration the building of an isolation hospital. Dr. Julius Ullman, writing to the Buffalo Express says: "Buffalo requires a modern hospital for the care of scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, erysipelas, built upon sanitary ground distant from the smoke and din of factories and the odor of malt houses. It should be built on at least five acres of ground, and on the pavilion system, each pavilion separate and distant from the other, in which separate diseases may be treated."

A MISTAKE ABOUT THE CAUSE

The Toronto Globe says that the "old stupid attempts" to lessen the burdens of farmers "by increasing duties led to the lamentable stagnation of 1896." As a matter of fact the tariff was lowered in 1894 and the stagnation of 1896 followed the lowering of the tariff. Mr. Foster, who was Minister of Finance in 1894, yielded to the cry for tariff reduction at a time when the whole civilized world was passing through a period of commercial depression. This lowering of the tariff intensified the depression and threw thousands of men out of employment so that there was great stagnation in 1896. If instead of lowering the tariff at that time Mr. Foster had raised it so high as to largely shut out foreign goods there would have been work enough to keep most of the men employed in our home factories.

The lowering of the tariff by Mr. Foster in 1894 was one of the principal causes of the defeat of the Conservative party in June, 1896. The Liberals had abandoned their commercial union or unrestricted reciprocity agitation: they had given private assurances to manufacturers that they would make no radical change in the tariff, and there was a general feeling that in view of the lowering of the tariff by the Conservatives the two parties had come so close together on the tariff question that this was no longer the fighting ground. Then by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's false promises thousands of Conservatives were led to vote against their party on the school question and so the Liberals got into power. They made a very slight reduction in the tariff, but immediately afterwards there was a world-wide revival of business, prices went up and the duties, being largely ad valorem, went up automatically with the prices, so that while the Liberals intended to slightly decrease the protection it was actually somewhat increased except on a few articles. One of the lines on which the protection was actually decreased was woollen goods. The result was that a large number of woollen mills throughout the country were shut down and thousands of men employed in them were driven out of the country or into other occupations.

To the Grand Work Dodd's Kidney Pills are Doing

Fishermen Regard Them as a Boon to Mankind — Mr. Frank Banfield Tells How They Cured His Backache.

Garnish, Fortune Bay, Nfld., May 16.—(Special.)—Among the fishermen here, who through exposure to wet and cold are subject to those pains and aches which come from diseased Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are looked upon as a positive boon to mankind. They are never tired of telling how their Backaches and their Rheumatism vanish before the great Kidney remedy.

Among many others, Mr. Frank Banfield, after years of suffering, has found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills, and here is what he is telling his friends:—

"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best medicine for Backache I have ever used. I only used two boxes and they cured me of Backache I had had for five years. It started through a strain. My father's back also bothered him, and he got some relief from one pill I gave him. They were too precious to give him more. All persons suffering from Backache should use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Why do Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Backache? Simply because Backache is Kidney ache, and Dodd's Kidney Pills positively cure all Kidney aches and ills. This has been proved in thousands of cases in Canada. If you haven't used them yourself ask your neighbors.

IN BOER LAND.

Young Woman Tells of Family Life In the Transvaal.

"Life is not lonely or dull on a South African farm, although town folk, accustomed to getting up at 9 o'clock in the morning and dawdling through the day, pretend to think it is," writes a young woman of that part of the world to a London newspaper.

"There is always something to be done. Before sunrise my brothers are up and out with the men, looking after the flocks, mending fences, inspecting here, improving there. Our farm has 30,000 acres and carries roughly 9,000 sheep and perhaps 1,000 head of horses and cattle.

"There is no place for children like a South African farm. We were out in the open all day long. Every tree on the farm we climbed, and in the orchard, too, eating the apples before they were ripe, for which we were soundly whipped. That also was good, for the green apples did us no harm, and the whipping taught us to respect our elders.

"In a creek by the river stood a willow tree which we used like a flip-flap. Bending its point over to the bank, one of us would get on and be switched across, but if on the other side the branch was not caught and held, then the luckless rider would oscillate like a pendulum of a clock put upside down, till at last he (or she) must fall into the water. Then he would be fished out and we would all sit on the bank while his clothes dried in the hot sun.

"Every animal on the farm we rode, ponies and cows, and even ostriches. There is nothing so comfortable as an ostrich, warm and soft, and it moves like a feather bed on springs. You tuck your knees well below the outstretched wings and take a firm grip, and when they let the bird go you are floating in the air. As for dismounting, it is quite easy; you have only to fall off backward.

"Far from being lonely, my recollection of our home in those early days is that it was like a small hotel. The farm lies on the high road between Bloembontein and Jagersfontein, and people traveling from one town to the other seemed to take it for granted that they could stop there for the night.

"One night, I remember, we entertained the Hon. St. John Brodrick, who was at that time making a tour of South Africa. After supper our talk turned upon the prickly pear fruit, and our visitor expressed a desire to see one. A Kaffir boy was sent out to get some, and when they were shown to him Mr. Brodrick incautiously took one up and put it to his mouth, covering his face and hands with the tiny, irritating prickles. I have thought since that the incident was typical. We Boers are somewhat like the prickly pear, sound and kind at heart, but sticking all our spikes into those who handle us the wrong way!

"It may be supposed that housekeeping under such circumstances was not very easy, for our Kaffir girls, though they are plentiful and willing, are very stupid and need to be constantly overlooked. I never heard, however, of any Boer lady who broke down, and had to indulge herself in a rest cure. The air of the veldt is in itself better than any 'cure.' Ah, such air! When you breathe it, everything seems possible, even the most impossible things. I think that was really how the war—that most impossible war—came about.

"No one wants to speak about the war with England now; only to forget it. One of my brothers fought from the first; then, when we were harder pushed, the second joined the commando, too. My third brother, who was a doctor, served on our ambulance. As for me, I was in England at the time, but it did not seem right for me to live there, so I went to Holland, where at least they understood our Taal tongue. And after it was all over I went out to Africa again.

"Of course, my brothers came back to the farm: they could not have gone to any other country, any more than my father could have gone in his day. So they began the farm all over again. Our house had not been burned down, but it had been abandoned to stray raiders and to the elements for over two years."

The Oldest Pitwoman.

At the time of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, 1897, there were fifteen or sixteen women living in Tranent who had worked underground in the coal mines. Now the number is reduced to three—Janet Murdoch, Helen Reid, and Isabella Sommerville, better known as Bell Somers, and widow of the late Sergt. John Harrison, the enlister of Hector Macdonald.

Sommerville is now in her eighty-sixth year, and may safely be set down as the oldest pitwoman in the world. She was born at Old Craighall, in Mid-Lothian, was taken down below at Edmonstone Colliery when between six and seven years of age, and had to learn "slype drawing," crawling on hands and knees among mud with a tail-chain attached to the empty or full slype, and pulling it behind her like a pony. She afterwards worked at Harley Muir till the women were expelled from the pits in 1843.—Glasgow Herald

His Majesty's Hint.

It is well known that the King considers hirsute appendages as an unnecessary adjunct for a clergyman. Some time ago His Majesty, being on a visit to a well-known peer, observed that the chaplain, who was also rector of the parish, would be improved in appearance by removing his moustache. This criticism was told to the young cleric, who forthwith took the hint and appeared clean-shaven.

On the King's next visit he inquired as to the identity of the clergyman who was invited to dinner, not recognizing his changed appearance. Some very complimentary remarks and not a little amusement on the King's part followed the discovery of how His Majesty's former hint had been acted upon in so practical a manner.

LONDON, May 14.—London and Liverpool cables quoted live cattle (American) higher, at 14c to 15c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef steady, at 11c to 11 1-4c per lb.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, May 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 183 carloads, consisting of 3829 cattle, 141 hogs, 56 sheep and 53 calves.

Exporters.

Prices ranged from $6.50 to $7.50 for steers, and $5.25 to $6.25 for bulls.

Butchers.

Trade in butchers' cattle was inclined to be slow early in the day, buyers and sellers being wide apart, the former thinking they ought to get them at lower prices, owing to large receipts, while the latter having paid high prices in the country were determined to hold out for last week's quotations, which later on they finally obtained. Prime picked lots, $6.75 to $7; loads of good, $6.50 to $6.75; medium, $6 to $6.40; common, $5.25 to $5.75; cows, $4.50 to $6.25; canners, $3.50 to $4.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts were moderate and prices steady to firm, at $38 to $65 each.

Prices for veal calves remained about the same, ranging from $3 for inferior to $7 for the best. The bulk of the best sold from $6 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were light, only 56. Prices ruled as follows: Ewes sold at $5 to $5.50; rams, $4 to $5 per cwt.; spring lambs, $3 to $6.50 each, or an average of $5.50 each.

Hogs.

The hog market, according to dealers' quotations, was a little easier. Selects, fed and watered, $9.70, and $9.35 to $9.40, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 16.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts last week were 2700 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1450 hogs and 2575 calves. Offerings this morning were 900 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 300 calves. Cattle prices have declined 25c 100 lbs., due to increased supplies, and the falling off in the demand from butchers on account of the fact that the consumption is smaller, owing to the present high prices ruling. Owing to this reduction in prices, drovers in some instances complained very much, as some of them had cattle in the barns and stables that cost them 7c per lb. in the country. Consequently, at to-day's prices here, they would lose considerable money, and a few of them decided to ship them, as values in the old country markets are being fairly well maintained.

Choice steers sold at 7c to 7¼c; good at 6¾c to 6¾c; fairly good at 6c to 6¼c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and common at 4¾c to 5¼c per lb.

The market for bulls was dull, and prices for them were fully ½c per lb. lower than a week ago, with sales of choice at 5½c to 5¾c per lb.

The undertone to the market for hogs continues strong, and prices have scored another advance of 25c per 100 lbs., as compared with those paid a week ago. This is attributed to the falling off in the receipts again, owing to the small supplies available in the country, and an impression prevails that values will go still higher in the near future. The demand was good for all the offerings this morning, and sales of selected lots were made at $10.25 to $10.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars, and sellers for delivery later in the week were in some cases asking as high as $10.75, but packers were not disposed to contract.

Supplies of small meats were light, and the market in consequence was quiet, with a steady undertone. A few small lots of yearling sheep sold at 6½c, and old sheep at 5½c to 6c per lb. Spring lambs brought from $4 to $8 each, and calves from $2.50 to $6 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 400 head; fairly active; heavy, steady; butchers', 10c to 15c higher; stockers and feeders, a shade easier; prime steers, $7.85 to $8.10; shipping, $7 to $7.75; butchers, $5.50 to $7.65; heifers, $5 to $7.25; cows, $3.25 to $6.65; bulls, $5 to $6.75; stockers and feeders, $4.75 to $6; stock heifers, $4.25 to $4.50; fresh cows and springers, steady to strong, $30 to $70.

Veals—Receipts, 2100 head; active and steady, $6 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 13,000 head; active and 5c to 10c lower; heavy, $9.85 to $9.95; mixed and yorkers, $9.90 to $9.95; pigs, $9.90 to $10; roughs, $8.75 to $8.90; stags, $7.50 to $8.25; dairies, $9.75 to $10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 16,600; sheep, slow; lambs, active; ewes, steady; others, 10c to 25c lower; lambs, $7.25 to $8.90; yearlings, $7.25 to $7.50; wethers, $6.40 to $6.65; ewes, $5.75 to $6; sheep, mixed, $4 to $6.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 22,000; market steady to 10c lower; steers, $6.25 to $8.60; cows, $4.85 to $6.75; heifers, $4.25 to $7.45; bulls, $5 to $6.75; calves, $7 to $7.75; stockers and feeders, $4.75 to $6.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 37,000; market 15c to 20c lower; choice, heavy, $9.57½ to $9.62½; butchers, $9.60 to $9.65; light, mixed, $9.50 to $9.60; choice, light, $9.50 to $9.60; packing, $9.55 to $9.60; pigs, $9.30 to $9.50; bulk of sales, $9.50 to $9.55.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"'I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was smell and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost.'"

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no drudgery in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

His Courtship

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

The kindness of his tone as he called her "child" made her eyes grow suddenly misty, so novel it was to hear herself spoken to as though she were not a chattel or a slave. Her voice as she answered him was very low and sweet.

"I am anxious to have you tell me whether a girl like me could find a place out in the world where she could earn her living?"

It was to ask him this that she had come to him tonight. But would it not have been a more natural thing for her to have gone to Georgiana or Daisy with such an inquiry? He wondered why she had chosen to ask him in preference to them.

"It depends upon the sort of place you would want. Some sorts of work are easy to secure. Others are not. What kind of work do you mean?"

"That's what I hoped you could tell me—the sort of work there is in town whereby a girl like me could earn her living."

"Domestic service?" he hesitatingly suggested. But somehow in spite of her servitude to the farmer's family this struck him as utterly incongruous. "Places for domestic service can be secured easily—almost on your own terms. But if you are thinking of some other sort of occupation"—

He paused questioningly, but she said nothing. Only her repressed eagerness urged him on.

"I should have to know more about you before I could judge of your chances."

Again he paused, but she remained silent.

"If you will tell me something of yourself," he suggested.

She looked surprised. "But there is nothing to tell of me more than what you yourself have seen."

He looked at her with searching eyes. "Isn't there?"

"No," she answered with a frankness that ought to have carried conviction.

"Could you do any other sort of work than what I have seen you do—sewing and housework?"

"I don't know. What other things are done by women?"

"Well, there are shopgirls, stenographers, milliners, bookkeepers, teachers"— He turned and again looked at her keenly. "Would you like to teach?" he asked abruptly.

"But I haven't an education."

"Just how much schooling have you had?"

"I was taken out of school when I was twelve years old."

"And have had no instruction of any sort since then?"

"No."

"And never have been off the farm?"

"Never except the few times that I have been in town to the market for a half day."

"Then, Eunice," he inquired with impressive earnestness, "may I ask how you happen to speak a language so unlike that of the Morningstars?"

He watched her closely as he put the question. Her face, so near to him, gleamed like ivory in the starlight, and he could plainly see her countenance. His question brought a startled look to her eyes, and again he saw her bosom rise in a long, deep breath. She did not attempt to answer him.

"Well?" He pressed his inquiry with a tense interest.

"I—I didn't realize that it was noticeable—my not speaking as the rest speak," she faltered.

"And how does it come that you don't speak as the rest speak?"

"I—never thought about it. If I have come to speak like the—differently from the rest of the family, it has been unconsciously."

"Ah?" he commented thoughtfully. "Remarkable! Remarkable—that you should make use of a vocabulary that you have never heard spoken. Have you, possibly, come unconsciously to a speaking acquaintance also with French and German?"

"I should think that must be an impossibility—to come unconsciously to a knowledge of a foreign tongue," she answered seriously, evidently unused at least to the language of sarcasm.

"Not more so than what you would have me believe—that with no schooling after your twelfth year and with no environment or association except that of this farmer's family you should—well, to go no further, be acquainted with areas of the English language which would be as foreign to the rest of this household as Italian or Spanish. Now, then, how do you account for it?"

The little pucker in her brow indicated to him how his inquisitiveness troubled her. She turned to him with anxious appeal in her eyes. "Is it necessary to account for it—before you can advise me?"

"Yes, it is," he stubbornly persisted. "The more I know about you the better I can help you."

She dropped her eyes and did not at once answer. But presently, with evident great reluctance, she spoke. "If a talk in a more educated way than the rest of the family it is only because I have read a few books that came in my way."

I should think very few books indeed would come in your way on this farm?" He put it questioningly. "I have never seen you so much as look at my books when they have been lying about. What books ever come in your way? Mrs. Morningstar says this is the first summer she has taken boarders since she gave up keeping a hotel twenty-one years ago. And when, in God's name, do you get time to read, when even a chance newspaper has to be read surreptitiously between trips to the spring house for food? Look here; I heard you say last night that old Morningstar wouldn't let you read anything but the Bible on Sunday and that that day was the only time you had to read at all, and you declined Miss Ellery's offer of books."

The troubled pucker in her brow deepened, her chin quivered, and he had the alarm of thinking she was going to cry when to his astonishment a little ripple of laughter broke from her. He had never seen her even smile, and he would as soon have looked for a laugh from a Mater Doloroso. He was sure that Balaam was not more dumfounded when his ass waxed conversational than he was to hear this girl laugh. Somehow the bare idea of laughter was eliminated from the impression one gathered of her from day to day. But then no two things about her did fit together.

"I suppose there is a joke somewhere in this mixup," he said thoughtfully, "but it's cryptic to me."

"Now," he told himself, "if that word 'cryptic' isn't too much for her"—

"I should think your own joke wouldn't be cryptic to you."

"Eunice," he patiently argued, "put it to yourself. Would Ollie know what I was talking of if I spoke to her of 'a cryptic joke'? Yet I understand she had five more years of schooling than you had." He suddenly leaned toward her, a rare gentleness in his tone. "Come, trust me; explain yourself to me."

Again his tone of kindness flooded her face with color and light. He thought he read in her eyes an inward struggle between a longing to take him into her confidence and a fear of trusting him so far. That she had something to conceal seemed to him certain. The strangeness of it was emphasized by the fact that nothing could be more simple and open than the life of the Morningstar family.

"So this," she said softly, "is the mystery you find about me?"

"Well, isn't it a mystery?"

"The explanation is so very simple."

"I should like to hear it."

Again she dropped her eyes and hesitated.

"There is nothing to explain," she said at last, "further than what I have told you, Dr. Kinross. I have read a few books—which I have come by."

"Do you mind telling me how you 'came by' them?"

"It was—it is—quite by accident."

Suddenly she made a movement to rise from the ground as though to flee from his further questioning. But he instantly checked her. The dismay he felt at the thought of her going away fairly startled him. He was astonished also to find that for the first time in his life he was talking to a young girl with an instinctive ease and naturalness. He could not stop now to analyze it.

"I won't ask you another question—if I can help it. Believe me, I haven't meant to press your confidence in mere curiosity, but in my wish to help you, though I won't pretend that you have not made me extremely curious about yourself too. But now—about finding employment for you in town. Would you really make the break with these people here and go to the city if you could get a position there?"

The color that had come to her cheeks faded out, leaving them white. She looked grave, almost solemn, as she answered him. "I have weighed it and have talked with Abe, who assures me that, being of age, I am free. My ignorance of the world makes me fearful to go out into it, but I have come to feel of late that nothing which I may encounter in any other mode of existence will be more unbearable to me than my life here. And so," she concluded, her eyes drooping and her voice sinking to a lower key, "I have decided that I will go away."

"I suppose there is a joke somewhere in this mixup."

"Isn't it rather singular," he said, "that Abe should sanction and even urge your going away—he of all persons?"

"But he does not. He knows nothing of my determination." A startled look came into her face. "You will not tell him," she breathed anxiously.

"I! Well, hardly! But you say it is he who tells you you are free to leave here."

"He tells me I am free, not to go to town—he never dreams of my doing that—but free to marry him."

"Which you will eventually do? There! Pardon me—I promised to ask you no more question. Now, as to these Morningstars, of course there will be a row when they find you are going. Can you stand up against it?"

"It will be wearisome," she sighed. "But I shall not falter."

"You are sure you won't weaken when old Morningstar gets at you?"

"I am sure," she said quietly.

"He won't easily let you go, you know. You save money for the old skinflint. To spare yourself a struggle with him why don't you get away secretly and let him fight it out with himself after you are gone?"

"I have considered that way of leaving, but I have decided against it. I prefer to leave openly. But more than Mr. Morningstar I fear Abe."

"I should think so," he agreed. He wondered if this signified that she did or did not reciprocate Abe's devotion. It might be interpreted either way. Her caring for Abe was not more incongruous than some other things about her. Suddenly he decided to tell her what it was her undoubted right to know—that Hen Mucklehenny's visits were for her, not Ollie. It would be interesting also to see how she would take it. Would it prove a pleasant surprise to her?

"Perhaps your problem may be solved in an easier way than going to town to earn your living. I'll tell you something. Hen Mucklehenny's visits here have been meant for you, not Ollie. He wants to keep company with you. Perhaps knowing this you may reconsider your purpose to go to town."

The information made apparently very little impression on her, except to bring to her face a strange look of weariness and sadness.

"Did Hen tell you," she asked in a spiritless voice, "that he wanted to come to see me?"

He observed that she did not say "keep comp'ny." He wondered why the brightness had so suddenly gone out of her at the mention of Hen.

"No," he said; "I overheard him telling old Morningstar. I have meant to tell you."

"I've known it," she answered in an uninterested tone. "He writes verses to me."

"Verses! Hen Mucklehenny!"

"Yes. I find them sticking in the door of the spring house with a bunch of wood violets pinned to them."

"They don't appear to have moved you—the violets and the verses. Are the verses original?"

"You may judge." She drew a sheet of paper from her pocket. "I found these this evening. But you can't read them in this light."

He took a box of matches from his pocket, struck one and read aloud from the sheet of paper she held out to him:

"I give to you this wiolet
In token that we two have met
And hope that we already yet
Once more again together get."

He turned and looked at her. No wonder she looked weary and sad!

"I would not like to trouble you with commissions," she said, "but if I may ask a favor of you—you are always so kind to me"—

"I?" he said, surprised. "I kind to you?"

Her answer was spoken very low. "No one else has ever been so kind."

He was silent from astonishment. She was tearing up little blades of grass at her side with nervous fingers. He waited for her to go on. But she did not.

"The favor, Eunice?"

Her mournful eyes unveiled an instant and looked at him as he spoke her name, and again his pulse stirred as he met the soft fire of her look.

"If you should get an opportunity to speak to Hen, will you please tell him to quit it?"

"Quit writing poetry?"

"He will expose me to the wrath of Ollie and her father and mother, who have set their hearts on him."

"And you will not defy them and favor him? Or is it Abe that makes Hen's case so hopeless?"

She gazed at him, her mournfulness changed to utter despair. Was there, then, actually a real case of the heart and not of mere propinquity between her and Abe? Incredible!

Before he could answer the faint sound of a step on the board walk near the house made him turn to glance over his shoulder.

"Talk of the devil"—

Eunice sprang to her feet with the primitive instinct of a startled animal, gave one glance in the direction of the approaching footsteps on the board walk and without a word darted away around to the back of the building. Abe stopped short a few feet from the terrace, looking baffled at her disappearance. Then he shuffled up to Kinross.

He looked as though he had just got out of bed. His hair was tousled, his feet were bare, and he wore neither coat nor waistcoat.

"Say, that there was our Eunice settin' alongside of you. Ain't it was?" he demanded aggressively.

"Yes," Kinross curtly nodded, taking a fresh cigar from one pocket and a match from another. Abe had always been abashed in his presence, but his jealousy was evidently giving him unwonted courage. Kinross, feeling a pugilistic rage against him for having driven Eunice away, tingled to use his fists.

"What was she doin'?" demanded Abe in a tone of sullen suspicion.

"Doing? Nothing," Kinross responded, blowing a cloud of smoke from his mouth.

"What was she here fur, then?"

"Because she chose to be, I suppose."

"She went up to bed when I did a'ready. What fur has she snuk down again?"

"I might ask the same question of you, Abe."

"I heerd her when she snuk downstairs. So I put some things on and follered her up."

"What for?"

"I conceited I'd see what she was up to anyhow."

"Yes?" said Kinross in an absent tone, pushing back his hat and blowing up circles of smoke.

"She come out here and set alongside of you," pursued Abe. "I seen her!"

"So did I."

"What fur did she want to do that there?" Abe angrily demanded.

"It was queer taste, Abe, wasn't it?"

"She's my girl, and you ain't to spoon with her!"

"Go to bed, Abe," Kinross advised wearily.

"I took notice she run off mighty quick when she heard me comin'," he said, with dark suspicion.

"Not very flattering to you; that's a fact." Kinross conceded.

MARVELLOUS POWER OF FRUIT JUICES

Valuable in Many Diseases

"Fruit-a-tives," the Famous Fruit Medicine, is Making Many Wonderful Cures.

The whole world is beginning to realize the value of fruit in curing disease.

To Canada belongs the honor of discovering the one method by which the juices of fresh, ripe fruit could be rendered so active medicinally as to be an infallible cure even when drugs are failures.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the wonderful tablets made of fruit juices and valuable tonics—have proved their value in thousands of cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all Skin, Liver and Kidney Trouble.

To-day, the sales of "Fruit-a-tives" are enormous—due solely to the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" never fail when properly used.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE CONCERT TO MISS HALLIHAN ON MAY 27TH

May 27th is the date fixed for the complimentary concert to Miss Lavina Hallihan at the Grand Opera House. The concert is one of the most popular musical events of the season and there is a most encouraging sale of tickets.

Miss Hallihan has won distinction for herself and given Peterborough a most desirable publicity and an entertainment on her behalf, therefore, is one worthy of the most generous patronage.

IMPROVEMENTS ON THE CANAL

Mr. J. H. McClellan, the superintendent of the Trent canal, gave the Review to-day some interesting information regarding the general improvements that have been made to the canal at different points. At Kirkfield the approaches to the lock have been finished off, and the roads and grounds generally present a very attractive appearance. Electric lights have also been installed at the roughest part of the water there. The new lock at Rosedale has also been completely finished and will be open for traffic by Lake Simcoe boats and for other navigation.

SALUTE OF MINUTE GUNS ON DAY OF KING'S FUNERAL

101 Guns to be Fired at Central Park — Service Will be Held at Armouries at 10.30 Instead of at 11 O'clock—The Ceremonies That Will be Observed.

The memorial service at the Armouries was announced to have been held at eleven o'clock, but will take place at 10 30 instead in order to allow the militia, which will attend the service, time to turn out and form up for the salute of 101 minute guns to be fired by the 24th Field Battery at Central Park. This salute is to be fired in dress review order.

When the first and last guns are being fired, troops will present arms. During the firing of the salute they will be stationed with arms reversed. After an appreciable pause, during which the crepe will be removed from the colors and black from the drums, the royal salute will be given by the troops presenting arms and the band will play "God Save the King." The band will play during the firing of the salute "Chopin's Funeral March," and after a pause, "The Dead March in Saul."

ORDER OF SERVICE FOR THE MEMORIAL SERVICE FRIDAY

The following is the order of procedure for the memorial service at the armories on Friday morning:—

Dead March in Saul—The Band.

Hymn.
Resolution—Moved by Mayor Morrow, seconded by T. F. Matthews.
Benediction—Rev. Canon Davidson, M.A.
Chopin's Funeral March—The Band.
"The Last Post"—Bugle Band.

NEW KING AND QUEEN GOOD EXAMPLE FOR THE EMPIRE

"The new King and Queen" is the title of a most interesting appreciative article in the London Daily Express.

King George V. stands to-day not only as the first gentleman of England, but, in a sense more than usualy true, the first mourner of the illustrious dead.

Since the accession of the House of Hanover, the Heir-Apparent has been in constant and often open revolt against the monarch. It lay with the son of Queen Victoria to reverse this attitude and devote the youth and noontide of his life to ease the burden which might otherwise have crushed a life strained almost to snapping point by premature sorrow and constant care.

The example of King Edward has been copied faithfully and fully by the son, who is summoned, as a sequel to a pathetic tragedy, to prepare for the supreme office in the Empire.

It is no exaggeration to say that although the character, the circumstances, and the trend of mind of the father and the son differ very sharply, a bond of sympathy existed between them not often to be observed at a period when parental authority was at a discount. King Edward's will and wishes were the Prince of Wales' law. No detail of the younger life was too trivial, no plan or engagement too unimportant to be submitted to the close consideration of the man whose experience in human affairs probably stood alone.

King George mounts the throne of England with the knowledge that he has never left any filial task undone, or neglected to obey to the letter any wish imposed upon him by the paternal will. The unfailing memory, the personal acquaintance with distinguished foreigners of every nation and class, the marvellous gift of languages, the capacity for indentification with persuits and interests of the most varying sorts—all these were peculiar to the personality of the late King, and it would be unreasonable to suppose they are likely to be reproduced in any other individual. But it has been impossible for the most superficial observer not to be struck with the sense of responsibility incurred and of duty to be done which has marked not only the public occasions, but the everyday life of the new King.

The epithet which perhaps applies most correctly to a life that has already been crowned with incident, devoted to duty, and not devoid of character is "thorough." King George has been thorough under every condition and in every circumstance. Not too prone to adopt new methods or assimilate new ideas, he has never allowed himself to be switched off any duty undertaken or to swerve by a hair's breath from the path which, under wise advice, he has decided to take.

He has acquainted himself, at the risk of being considered insular, with everything affecting the welfare of Great Britain here and beyond the seas, so that while his knowledge of foreign politics may be distinctly inferior to that acquired by his great predecessors, he will be able to bear upon the splendid situation which he is now called upon to fill a knowledge derived by first-hand experience and by close study of all that makes, and is likely to make, for the good of England and the happiness of English men and women.

It is frequently said that a daughter is handicapped rather than helped by the possession of an exceptionally gifted mother, and it was the fate of the present Queen Consort for many years to be compared with a princess unique in social attributes, which rendered her presence, whenever and wherever it occurred, a cause of raptuous rejoicing. But if it is impossible to reproduce "Princess Mary," it is certain that she lives again in much of her daughter's character, in the forming of which she bore so personal and patient a part.

The engagement of Princess Victoria Mary of Teck to the then Duke of York was joyfully acclaimed throughout the length and breadth of the land. It was considered to be a step not only calculated to provide for the happiness of the young couple, but also likely to promote the happiness of their future subjects. No princess—indeed, no lady in Europe—could have been found to mate more happily and more advantageously with the future ruler of England. Their tastes, their interests, their sympathies have been so blended, as to be almost identical. Hand in hand they have performed their duties abroad and have lived their lives at home.

No word as to the present King and Queen should be written without emphasizing the fact that they have maintained at its supreme level the standard of domestic life. "Home" is obviously the centre of their affections, and the chief of their personal interests, and it is good to think that this pure and ennobling influence must, by sheer force of circumstances, throughout the coming years permeate every phase of social life. It may be said of the King and Queen that their best qualities and parts are those which form the foundations of their character, and that as foundation-stones they are withdrawn from view, but that, with time as their witness and their friend, when they seek the final verdict of posterity it will be found that they have nothing of loyalty and good-will to forfeit; everything that is grateful and honorable to receive.

BIG CONCERN FOR HAMILTON

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, Ont., May 17.—Hamilton has landed the industrial prize of a decade, the Canadian branch of the Oliver Chilled Plow Works of South Bend, Indiana, after weeks of negotiations between representatives of the firm and the municipal authorities. The Oliver Chilled Plow Works are the largest of their kind in the world, and the local plant, which will be situated on a ninety-acre site on the bay front, will be worth $1,500,000. Work will be started at once, and it is expected plows will be manufactured by December. Two thousand men will be employed at the outset, and when the export trade gets fairly started the number will be increased to 3,000.

STONES IN A TREE

Wm. Lounds, of Shrigley, had a real curiosity the other day. It was a section from the trunk of a tree he had been sawing on his farm, Melancthon, in March. About five feet from the ground the saw met with an obstruction. Investigation disclosed a couple of fair sized stones imbedded in the centre of the trunk. The trunk had a hollow in it below the stones, but was closed in above, although there were signs that there had at one time been an opening above. The section Mr. Lounds showed still contained one of the stones. The question is "How did the stones get there?"

An unknown man was killed by a C.P.R. switch engine on Brant street, Winnipeg.

SUMMER'S WORK WAS ARRANGED

At Meeting of St John's A.Y.P.A. Last Evening

At a general meeting of the St. John's A.Y.P.A. held in the guild room the work for the summer season was arranged. On Wednesday, May 26th, it was decided to heartily support the Mission Band Social and sale of home made candies and cakes as a considerable sum of money is wanted to complete the season's work.

On Wednesday, June 22nd, a lawn social is to be held on the church grounds, from the proceeds of which at least $25 is to be given to the fund for the chimes.

The tennis section will entail more expense this year and the fees were re-arranged to help meet the purchase of necessary articles. Last year the members' fees were raised, and this year the fees for all not members of St. John's will be, gentlemen $3; ladies $1.50.

A new marker at a cost of $4, has been bought jointly by St. John's and the Oval Club and the nets have been well repaired by J. J. Turner & Sons.

The city competition will be entered by the club, Mr. W. Coleman being the representative. All gentlemen who intend entering must hand in their name and fee of 50 cents to him, not later than Friday, May 20th.

No further notice will be given. Ladies who intend entering the city competition are asked to hand in their names and fee of 25 cents to Mr. R. J. Devey not later than Friday, May 20th.

STRUCK BY FREIGHT TRAIN AND WAS FATALLY INJURED

Insane Boy Deliberately Stood in Front of Engine at Blairton—Lad Was Being Taken to Orillia Asylum But Escaped from Brother's Custody—Died To-day at St. Joseph's Hospital

Special to the Review.

Havelock, May 17.—Roy Reasbeck, a lad 15 years of age, from Plantaganet, a village east of Ottawa, and who was being taken to the asylum at Orillia, escaped from his brother, in whose charge he was, and jumped from the early morning west-bound train at Blairton, 4 miles east of here. Before he was recovered he was struck by a west-bound freight train and terribly injured.

The boy's brother fell asleep on the train and did not notice his departure until Havelock was reached.

The engineer on the train that struck the boy had seen the victim of the accident on the track, and slowed up. The boy then stepped aside, and gave the signal for the train to go on, and when the train got started he stepped in front of it and was hurled down the bank into the ditch.

The freight train stopped and brought him to Havelock, where medical attendance was secured, and he was then sent on to Nicholl's hospital, Peterborough.

However, he could not be accommodated there as the hospital was full, and he was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

BROTHER'S STORY OF THE AFFAIR.

Charles B. Reasbeck, the brother who was in company with the young lad, is in the city to-day, and to a Review reporter gave these particulars of the affair.

"He was sleeping on the seat in front of me," said Mr. Reasbeck, "and it was about 5.10 a.m. when I leaned over and looked out of the window in an endeavor to see the comet. We were about five miles east of Havelock. I had my face shaded with my hands and I could not have been in that position more than five minutes. Turning around, I looked for the boy and found him gone. I called to the conductor to stop the train, but he said to have a look through the train. I felt sure that he had left the train, however, but the train, which was travelling about forty miles an hour, did not stop until Havelock was reached. On alighting, I sent a message back to the next station to tell them to be on the lookout for the boy, and then I started off down the track in search of him. I was too late, however, as he had been struck by the westbound freight. I was given to understand that he stood on the track as the train approached, and that he shook his fist at it."

The victim of the accident passed away this afternoon shortly after one o'clock. His left leg had been broken below the knee; the left arm broken below the shoulder, and he sustained a fracture of the skull, and was gashed about the face and head.

Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, attended to the injuries after the accident, and on being brought to this city Dr. Gray attended to the case.

The brother, Charles, claims that one of the doors of the coach was open, and he believes that the boy jumped from the train by this means. Strange to say, he apparently received no injuries.

This is the second death in the family on the railroad. Another brother, John, was killed in the wreck at Webbwood.

The remains will be sent back to Plantagenet for interment.

THE TRANSIT OF HALLEY'S COMET ACROSS THE SUN'S DISC.

To-morrow the comet itself will not be visible, because it lies below the horrizon.

Even if Halley's comet should be disappointingily dim after May 20th, its present return is destined to go down in astronomical history for no other reason than its transit across the sun's disc on May 18th-19th.

In the Eastern part of the Continent the transit will be invisible, because it will be nightfall. On the Pacific Coast, however, the phenomenon will be visible in the evening between six and eight o'clock to-morrow. The observers who have been sent to the Hawaiian Islands to study the transit will be most favorably situated.

A transit of a comet across the sun's disc is so rare that it may well be regarded as one of the most extraordinary happenings. In 1819 and in 1832 such transits occurred. In the first place, no one was quite prepared for it, so that it passed unobserved. In the second case, the comet was hopelessly lost in the sun's glare; for the solar rays passed right through its head as though it was as transparent as glass.

While the transit is being observed in the Pacific Ocean, the tail will whisk the earth. When a similar immersion in a comet's tail occurred in 1861 there were some who believed that they saw a strange auroral glow in the sky. Perhaps there may be some such display on the nights of May 18th and 19th. Inasmuch as some astronomers have collected evidence which seems to indicate that a comet's tail is tubular there is a chance that we may see two such phosphorescent glows, one when the earth plunges into the tail, and the other when it emerges from the tail several hours later. If the tail should really be tubular there will be no noticeable effect when we are right in the middle of it; for that portion is supposed to be dark.

Anticipating some such pyrotechnic display in the sky, Professor K. Brikeland, of the University of Christiania, Norway, one of the world's greatest authorities on the aurora borealis, has journeyed to Kaafjord, in Finmarken (the north of Norway) in order to take magnetic and atmospheric observations. He conceives that the tail of the comet may consist of highly electrified particles, which may be drawn in at the poles by earth magnetism. Should his view be correct, these electrified particles will exercise magnetic influence, especially marked in the polar regions. It is these effects in particular which he hopes to trace.

Just what [illegible] when the head of Halley's comet apparently crawls across the face of the sun cannot be foretold. It is not probable that the comet will greatly obstruct the sun's light. Indeed, there is good reason to suppose, as in the case of the comet of 1882, that nothing at all will be seen.

The astronomers will turn their telescopes upon the sun and closely follow that vanishingly small, specklike comet in the hope that they may learn something about the constitution of the core. Perhaps definite evidence may then be gathered to uphold their views on the nature of a comet's core, views which declare that a comet is in large part composed of solid particles as big as paving stones and also as small as grains of sand.

From the popular standpoint, the most interesting thing in connection with the transit of the comet across the sun's disc is that for several hours to-morrow we will actually breathe the comet's tail while we are whisking through it.

A locomotive dashing through a fog may be likened to our earth plunging through the tail of Halley's comet. The fog, however, is a thick blanket compared with the wonderful diaphanous texture of that tail. Indeed, the air we breathe or even the vacuum in an incasdescent lamp is far denser; compared with a comet's tail the filmiest of fabrics is coarsely dense. Hence it is that the atmosphere will not be appreciably contaminated by the tail. Indeed, except for a possible auroral glare and a few meteors, the passage of the earth through the tail will be uneventful.

To be sure there have been those, chiefly writers of fiction, and of what passes for popular astronomy, who have tried to picture the effects upon the earth if the tail were denser than it is. Thus it has been pointed out that if hydrogen were present in large quantities in the tail, the atmosphere would become a bubble of gas, which would ignite with a terrible explosion. An excess of cyanogen mingled with the atmosphere would also mean instant death. Were the vapors composing a comet's tail so to combine with the air that the nitrogen constituting eighty per cent of our atmosphere were to be converted into "dentist's laughing gas," mankind would dance deleriously happy to an anaesthetic death. Most of these nightmares have been luridly dwelt upon by the imaginary Flammarion. No scientist of repute takes them at all seriously; they have merely a literary value.

Title of to-morrow's article, "Famous Comet Scares."

REGIMENT HELD FIRST MARCHOUT OF SEASON

The regiment held the first marchout of the season last night and made a creditable showing. The inspection by Major-General Lake, which was to have taken place had been postponed. The orders for the week are as follows;

Headquarters, Peterborough, May 16. Orders by the Officer Commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers;

No. 1—Detail of duty for week ending May 23rd, 1910. Captain for the week, Captain McPherson; next for duty, Captain Cluxton; subaltern for the week, Lieut. J. D. Clarke, next for duty Lieut. Gemmell.

No. 2—The regiment will parade in divine service order, with both bands, signallers and stretchers at the Armories at 10 a.m., on Friday, May 20th, 1910, for the purpose of attending the memorial service in connection with the funeral of his late Majesty King Edward VII.

No. 3—Immediately at the conclusion of the above service the regiment will parade in review order to join with the other corps of the Peterborough garrison to hear read the proclamation set forth in militia order No. 177, dated Monday, May 9th, 1910, and for such ceremonies as may be set forth in subsequent orders.

No. 4—The commanding officer has made the following transfers;—Lieutenant Higgins from the signallers to C. company. Lieutenant Gemmell from C. company to D. company, and Lieutenant Rackham from A. company to the signallers.

No. 5—Lieutenants Hall and Leech are hereby detailed with sergeant, to be detailed by the sergeant-major as a color party for May 20th, 1910.

No. 6—Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Captain McPherson.

D. WALKER,
Captain-Adjutant.

While motoring to London from Brantford, J. L. Secord's car upset and Mrs. J. A. Wolf, of Tacoma, had two ribs broken.

DISSERTATION ON HALLEY'S COMET

WORKING GIRL'S PHILOSOPHY

The following are some of the philosophical sayings of Miss Rose Schneiderman, strike picket and organizer;

We don't expect chivalry from the men—we ask quality.

Work doesn't harm a girl. It only strengthens her.

Each of us has ten fingers to sell, and we want the highest price.

We don't get enough to live on, nor quite little enough to starve to death on.

Every girl dreams of a happy marriage, which inspires her to keep on struggling.

We can't afford divorce on the east side. We have more serious problems in life.

It's poor economy to waste the girlhood of the race and expect them to be the mothers of our future men.

There are 250,000 girls on the east side who are fighting for a better race, happier homes, healthier children.

PRIZES HUNG UP FOR CITY LEAGUE SWATTERS

To the first player in the city baseball league hitting out a home run, Mr. Sam Ray will present a box of cigars, and for the first player making four two baggers, Mr. Walter T. Belleghem will give a handsome framed picture. The doners when approached this morning, stated that they would be pleased to offer the prizes and it is now up for the local ball tossers to get their batting eye in shape. Last season similar prizes were offered and Yebbie Flaherty brought down the smokes while Ab. Quinlan was the winner of the picture. This season one more two-bagger will be necessary to carry off the Belleghem prize, but at the rate the local slab artists are travelling in practices, this year, neither prize will be won so easily as was the case last season.

ONE HIT FOR CENTRALS

St. Peter's Scored Shutout Against Centrals at the Oval—Losers Played Loose Fielding Game

St. Peter's evened up with the Centrals yesterday afternoon at the Oval when they scored a shutout and sent five counters across the pan. When the two teams met at Riverside the Centrals were winners by one run, but the Centrals could not do anything with Heenan yesterday, while their opponents hammered Smith for six hits, but half of this number would have been outs had his teammates used better judgment and covered more ground. Smith struck out six, while Heenan had four to his credit. St. Peter's scored in the first on hits by Murphy and Trombley and another in the fifth when Cavanah threw wild to third, Hayes going home. In the sixth three hits, a hit by pitcher, and two errors by the Centrals allowed St. Peter's to gather three more runs.

The losers could put men on bases, but scores were stopped by fast fielding and throwing by the winners.

DOES GOTCH RETAIN HIS FORM STILL?

Time Must Come When the Lion Tamer Will be Classed With the Has Beens

Chicago, May 18.—That champion Frank Gotch realizes that Stanislaus Zbysco whom he is matched to meet May 30th for a record purse, is going to give him a hard tussle is shown in a letter received by his manager, Emil Klank. Gotch admits the probability of a strenuous session, but does not fail to add that he does not fear him because the giant Pole is not aggressive.

"His defence will be hard to master," writes Gotch. "I am not going to take any chances, however, so far as condition is concerned." The champion has found an amateur wrestler named Barnes with whom he works forty minutes every day on the mat. He declares he is the best amateur wrestler he ever saw.

IS GOTCH GOING BACK?

As another wrestling season draws to a close and the match between Zbysco and Gotch is approaching a reality a question arises. This question may be anticipated a long way ahead, and it may be timely. The point is one than cannot be decided off-hand; not even by Gotch himself.

There comes a time in the career of any athlete when he goes back. He loses his keen edge, the height of speed, the ability to make his muscles respond to his mental power. All wrestlers being human, are open to the same possibilities.

When a grappler starts to slip back, he doesn't know it. He feels as good as he ever felt. He is convinced in his own mind that he is as good, because be it known, retrogression in athletic supremacy is not like suffering from some illness. It is unlike senility.

Such mat artists as Evan Lewis, Dan McLeod and others who were good, undoubtedly feel just as good as they ever did. They are healthy. They are moderately active. But they have lost that indefinite something that makes for class. They have slipped off on the fine possibilities.

An example of this mistaken idea is found in convalescents. Take the fellow recovering from typhoid. He is hungry. His appetite is the only thing that seriously absorbs his time. He believes he can eat—and he believes this irrespective of what he has learnin all previous years. But if he were allowed to follow out his desires, he would be principal in a long black affair that would make a one-way trip so far as he was concerned.

CHAMPION HAS NO EQUAL.

Frank Gotch might retain the championship for another ten years. He is vastly better than the next best—but at that it is not necessary that he lose ground very much to be open to defeat. Let us say that Gotch's wrestling ability is 100—the standard of world grappling. Let us say that next best is, compared with him, at about 85 or 90. A difference of one-tenth or one-seventh may not look great—but it is very great. Suppose Gotch remains as good as ever in strength, but begins to slide backward in speed, position or time. Let us say that of his ability of 100, the numeral seventy-five would represent his physical strength. The other twenty-five would stand for his science, his generalship. He may not retrogress any in the matter of strength, but he might lose considerable in the remaining twenty-five per cent.—the mastering twenty-five.

When a wrestler begins to slide in the wrong direction, he thinks at first, that it is temporary. He laughs away his fears. He does not go backward as speedily as a prize-fighter, for the pug is one likely to lose out wholly and finally in one match. But the grappler is sure he has been a little to the bad that once. He goes in again—and again finds he isn't up to snuff. It worries him some more, but each succeeding time proves to him a little more than the one before that he really isn't what he used to be.

THE TRYING ORDEAL.

We must not imagine that Frank Gotch will never retrogress. He is a big man: we grant that. He is powerful, and combines within him all that a grappler should have. But—he is human. He has had years of hard wrestling. He has defeated hundreds of men and many of these were rough, tough rascals. It all tells in time. Every match a wrestler has constitutes a sight draft on his prowess and staying powers—a draft "payable on demand," and that is apt to be collected suddenly and without previous notice.

These truths are set forth not as prophetic—not as having to do with what is going to happen, for Gotch will likely continue in his career for a long time. It is simply a carefully-weighed statement that Gotch, like all others, must eventually slip. It is as sure as any other basis fact.

It is not necessary to dynamite a piano to put it on the bum. Cut just one string and the instrument is out of commission. So it is with the human organization—the corporeal being. Let the wrestler lose out on one of his nerves and it matters not how good he may be in all other ways, he has been put beyond the pale of championship possibilities.

What He Really Said.

Mrs. Buffers—The teller at the bank says you are the meanest, stingiest—

Mr. Buffers—Great Scott! What—What is that? He says—

Mrs. Buffers—Well, he didn't say it in so many words, but that is what he meant, of course.

Mr. Buffers—See here! What did the fellow say?

Mrs. Buffers—He asked me to indorse the check, and when I told him I hadn't the ghost of an idea what he meant he said he presumed I hadn't had much experience getting checks cashed, so there!

Appropriate Verdict.

"Well, that's what I call an appropriate verdict," remarked Jilson the other evening as he threw down his paper.

"What is it?" asked his wife.

"Why," he replied, "you know the defaulting cashier at the bank, who committed suicide when the shortage was discovered?"

"Yes, I remember," said Mrs. Jilson, "but what of the verdict?"

"This morning," answered Jilson, "the coroner's jury brought in a verdict of death from exposure."

A Hard Lot.

Nicaragua has been distinguished even among Central American republics by the number of its revolutions. Discovered by Columbus, it takes its name from the chief who ruled it at the time of its exploration by Doirla, in 1522. Of its earliest rulers it has been said that "the first had been a murderer, the second a murderer and rebel, the third murdered the second, the fourth was a forger and the fifth a murderer and rebel." Nicaragua abounds in prehistoric remains, and in some parts, it is said, the inhabitants still supply themselves with pottery from the vast quantities preserved below the surface.

Off Duty.

Winfred, six years old, was tying paper boots upon the kitten's paws when his aunt remonstrated with him for teasing the kitten, saying, "I thought you belonged to the Band of Mercy." "Yes, auntie, I do," said Winfred, "but," he added apologetically, "my badge is on my other coat."—Delineator.

The Degrees.

"What are the degrees of a stingy man's married life?"

A CITY OF DANGERS.

Going Out at Night In Mosul Means Imperiling One's Life.

Mosul, on the western bank of the Tigris, is described in "The Short Cut to India," by David Fraser, as a place of some difficulty for the residents. Prices of every mortal thing are dearer than anywhere else in Turkey. Water is procured only from the Tigris, and every drop required must be carried therefrom in skins upon donkeys. Two pounds a month is a very ordinary expenditure on this essential and provides but a scanty bath.

To go out at night is to place one's life in jeopardy. To walk across the bridge in broad daylight is a danger owing to the frailty of the structure. The bridge is a wonderful affair and yields an income of some thousands of pounds annually to the contractor who farms it from the government. Three hundred yards of it is solid masonry and the remaining 150 yards a wooden platform laid upon a row of crazy boats.

Where the bridge of boats abuts the shore at one end and the stone bridge at the other are the points of danger, for owing to the height of the river when I was there the joinings were at a slope of forty-five degrees and consisted of narrow gangways up which people, sheep, cattle, donkeys, mules, horses and camels had to scramble. No wonder there were many fallings into the water—dangerous water, too—for it coursed like a cataract between the boats and swirled and boiled in fierce eddies and whirlpools below the bridge.

One poor Zabtie, with rifle slung and bandoliers strapped across his chest, was walking across when his horse slipped at the ascent to the boat part of the bridge, and both fell into the water. The horse was rescued, but the man was drowned. Life has small value in Mosul, however, and nobody bothered to mend the huge holes in the bridge or to make its passage less precarious.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE HERALD.]

ROWARDENNAN CAMP, Ben Lomond, Cal.

WITH the eyes of the sporting world centred for two weeks on James J. Jeffries' training camp up here in the Santa Cruz mountains the question on the tip of every tongue is this:—To what extent is the redoubtable old champion winning back the physical form of his best fighting days?

The only fair answer that may yet be made by friends, though unprejudiced judges, who have watched the big fighter daily at work and at play, is that he has made marked progress in that direction, but that he has a long way yet to go before he will be again the same Jeffries before whose prowess no other man could stand.

Whether or not he has it in him ever again to reach that goal is a question more likely to be determined by the last fortnight of training than by the first. No impartial observer of these first two weeks, however, can doubt the indomitable energy, the dogged persistence, the singleness of purpose with which the big fellow is striving to fit himself for victory over Johnson in what is expected to be the greatest battle in the history of the prize ring. If sincerity, patience and hard work were the only requisites, "Jeff" would almost hold a first mortgage upon victory already.

The one time champion's most bitter enemies, could they watch him at work here in the Rowardennan camp, would have to concede at least that Jeffries has not a lazy bone in his body and that he means to trounce the negro champion soundly on July Fourth, if he can.

Studying the man as he is to-day—and remembering always that he yet has two months in which much may be accomplished—some conclusions, in which his closest friends practically concur, though not always for publication, may be stated.

LACK OF SPEED.

"Jeff's" most serious shortcoming at present is lack of speed, a lack not so much in his footwork as in the work of his body and arms. During the few bouts in which he has put on the gloves with "Sam" Berger, his manager, or with "Bob" Armstrong, he has displayed much of his old time hitting power, plenty of aggression and no dearth of endurance, but his movements have lacked the agility which many good judges deem necessary in meeting so skilled a boxer, so shifty a fighter and so hard a hitter as "Jack" Johnson.

In the ring and stripped for action, Jeffries, save for a thinning of the hair on his cranium and the lines traced on the face by added years, looks to-day almost the Jeffries of old. He is nearly down to fighting weight. The gruelling work over mountain roads and in the Rowardennan gymnasium has left little superfluous flesh on the boilermaker's massive frame. The fearsome crouch, the resistless rush with which he forces his adversary to the ropes, the power of weight and seasoned brawn in the clinches are all in evidence. But the hooks and swings of his aggressive work and the guarding and blocking of his defensive tactics are comparatively sluggish. He does not seem to lack steam, stamina and power so much as he lacks the old time swiftness and sureness of judgment, the sinewy, catlike stroke of shoulder and arm.

"Bob" Armstrong put on the gloves and went three fairly fast rounds with Jeffries last Thursday. It was the first time the big negro had sparred with the former champion for years, but Armstrong not only landed some good sound blows on his principal, but he seemed to find little difficulty in countering or dodging many of "Jeff's" most dangerous wallops. The third round was finished in something like the old whirlwind style and the lithe negro was repeatedly forced back to the ropes under his chief's rushes, but it was obvious that at no stage of the bout were the ring resources of the negro, who was Johnson's sparring partner before they quarrelled, too severely taxed by his new employer.

CHARACTERISTIC PICTURES OF JEFFRIES AND JOHNSON IN TRAINING

WORRIED, SAYS BERGER.

Jeffries on that day showed the same lack of speed and of swift judgment in his work in the handball court. This was so patent to the onlookers that "Sam" Berger, who had been playing against the big fellow, did not hesitate to speak of it.

"I didn't like the way 'Jeff' worked to-day," said Berger. "He is worried, I know, but aside from that, he lacked life. In the handball game he might have won going away, if he had cared to, but he didn't try until the last few points, when he thought I was about to take him into camp.

"You see," Berger went on, "condition counts more than anything else in this fight. Some think that 'Jeff' can win if he's only half right, but I take an opposite view. Jeffries has to be absolutely perfect. He can't go into the ring carrying an ounce too much, considering his disadvantage of five years of inactivity. Mind you, I believe he's going to win—I feel sure of it—but it is all going to depend upon condition. He has a fight on his hands with a great scrapper, and if I thought he couldn't get right I'd throw up the fight in a minute.

"You know this fight means more to us than merely the championship and the money. Usually when a champion loses he becomes quite popular as a fallen ring idol, but in the case of Jeffries the reverse English is likely to be applied. He is a fellow who doesn't make many friends—principally because he likes to keep to himself and to his family, and a few intimates almost entirely—and the very fellows who have all but forced him back into the ring on a sort of issue of race supremacy, would be the first to rap him, should he suffer a defeat at the hands of the negro Johnson. They would be the first to shout that 'Jeff,' knowing he could never get right again, should never have made the match. No doubt this was an off day with the big fellow, but it didn't suit me at all."

WORKING UNDER HANDICAP.

In fairness to Jeffries it should be explained that on the day in question he was working under such handicaps as might have driven some men to idleness and brooding. It was the day when Mrs. Jeffries, at six o'clock in the afternoon, was to leave him to undergo in an Oakland hospital a serious surgical operation—the second within a few months. The big athlete had not slept well the night before and throughout all his day's work the uncertainties incident to the coming parting with his wife were ever present in his mind.

Jeffries' affection for his wife and for the few others whom he admits to the inner circle of his confidence and favor is as marked a trait of his primitive personality as is the almost boorish indifference with which he commonly meets the polite advances of a stranger. Mrs. Jeffries is the only diplomat in the Jeffries family. Her burly spouse, though the men who know him best never tire of telling how "square" a sportsman and how faithful a friend he is at heart, has about as much diplomacy as a grizzly bear and as much urbanity as a coyote. Mrs. Jeffries can do more to influence him in five minutes than manager, trainer and all the rest of the camp retinue can do in five weeks, and Mrs. Jeffries and the camp know it.

The fact is, Jeffries is his own manager and his own trainer. "Sam" Berger, in the one capacity, may plan and scheme, and faithful old "Farmer" Burns, in the role of trainer, may suggest and even protest at times, but in the end Jeffries will do just about as he pleases. And the chances are that he will please to do too much rather than too little, for the two weeks have proven beyond dispute that if he is blessed with a scant meed of courtesy, he is a perfect glutton for work. Mrs. Jeffries, in her quiet, womanly way, has done much to smooth over the rough spots in a rugged but crude character. The camp at Rowardennan will miss her presence there.

It is not slow to realize that an unfavorable result of the ordeal she went bravely to meet in Oakland might not only be a crushing blow to the big fighter, who has never known defeat, but would inevitably end all effort on his part for further triumphs in the ring. There is much depending upon the skill with which the surgeon's scalpel is wielded in Oakland this afternoon and upon the ability of a woman, uncommonly endowed with strength and vitality, to rally from the stress of a capital operation. So it is no wonder that Thursday was somewhat a day of gloom in the Rowardennan camp.

If, as Sam Berger said, it was an "off day" with Jeffries, the big pugilist might [illegible] for [illegible] shortcomings. But it was not a day in which he shirked. Here is a little outline of what the fighter, spurred, perhaps, by the desire to drive from his mind forebodings of ill by a maximum of hard work, actually achieved by way of physical exercise:—In the morning—a beautiful, cloudless morning, with the chill of the night gradually yielding to the spell of warm California sunshine—he started at five o'clock with "Farmer" Burns, Bob Armstrong and Dick Adams for his usual tramp and road run over the mountain roads before breakfast. "Jeff" is a good runner and an unusually fast walker. He must be a good man and one in fine condition who can hold the pace "Jeff" sets in these daily morning tramps and follow him within an hour back to camp, after an eight mile jaunt.

GOOD CONDITION NOW.

The big fellow does it day after day and comes home perspiring, but with wind and muscle in perfect condition. He often finishes in a fast sprint that easily distances his comrades. Martin Burns, his trainer, has repeatedly assured the HERALD correspondent that "Jeff" can do a hundred yards in twelve seconds at the finish of a five mile grind, which is "going some" for a big man.

"And," says "Farmer" Burns, "a man who can do that is in condition to-day, so far as wind and muscle and staying powers are concerned, to go forty rounds of hard fighting."

Burns is so well pleased with Jeffries' present condition that he has said a dozen times:—"I wish the fight were to be in three weeks instead of ten." He and "Sam" Berger both expect that the niceties of speed which are now lacking will be developed in due time when Jeffries has the benefit of sparring daily with such accomplished artists as "Joe" Choynski and James J. Corbett, both of whom, as well as Gotch, the champion wrestler, are expected at the camp.

After an abstemious breakfast of eggs and tea, Jeffries, with the aid of Burns and "Dick" Adams, sharpened his double-bitted axe and at half-past nine o'clock he started for a clump of redwood trees, through which a road is being opened for the new automobile, in which the athlete expects later to make occasional trips to Santa Cruz for a dip in the surf. He had already cut a broad swath through the timber at this point and he started in to polish off the job.

At wood chopping and stump splitting Jeffries is a veritable steam engine and saw mill combined. His terrific blows, scientifically delivered, cleave through the hard fibres and even the knots of a redwood eighteen inches thick with a few strokes of the ax. At this kind of a task he seems indefatigable. He never stops to rest and through it all his respiration is perfectly normal. The smaller sticks of timber he cleaves into firewood lengths with a single blow and he does it so rapidly that he keeps two or three men busy bringing up more material for him to work on.

CHOPS THREE HOURS.

For three hours he plied the axe steadily, his only diversion being an occasional turn at the long crosscut saw with which the heavier logs were cut into two foot lengths before he split them. The chips flew steadily, and when the big fellow finally paused, his comrades had stacked up something like two solid cords of firewood.

"I guess that will do for this morning," said Jeffries.

Then, just to show that he had plenty of vitality left, he executed a few quick dance steps over to the spot where "Dick" Adams was lolling in the sun, and seizing that faithful worshipper by the scruff of the collar, lifted him bodily with one hand while with the other he fiercely flourished the blade of the axe in "Dick's" face.

Scowling in mock fierceness, the big fellow bellowed:—

"So you are Jack the Giant Killer, are you? Well, I'm the giant, and I'm going to kill you!"

This was Adams' cue to plead for mercy, and after another flourish of the axe Jeffries tossed him lightly back to the ground, as a cat might play with a mouse. The big fellow's scowl relaxed into a grin as Adams rubbed the latest bruise on his long suffering anatomy.

This is the sort of "stunts" in which the brawny athlete often indulges when in playful mood and "Dick" Adams is his ever ready foil. Adams, who is a physical featherweight endowed with endless good humor and a very pretty wit, fills the post of the king's jester to perfection. He is continually doing or saying something droll to divert his big friend and to amuse the camp followers. The prosperous proprietor of a hotel not far from San Francisco, Adams, with a sincere friendship for the big fighter, has followed in Jeffries' train for years. Incidentally he is not averse to having his photograph appear in snapshots of the former champion. He will gladly spell out his name for newspapermen who desire to include him "among those present," and as he goes about the Rowardennan camp he finds time to affix to shingles and rocking chairs neat oval pasters advertising the hotel of which he has the honor to be the proprietor.

"Oh, yes, somebody can easily soak them or tear them off," says "Dick," "but the fellow who rips one off will have to read it."

But Adams is a genuine friend as well as an accomplished advertiser. There is no man of whom Jeffries is more sincerely fond, and it was to the little jester that he intrusted the task of personally escorting Mrs. Jeffries when she went to the Oakland hospital on Thursday.

AFTER DINNER WORK.

After dinner Jeffries got into his fighting togs in his dressing room in the gymnasium. For ten or fifteen minutes, just to warm up, he engaged in "shadow boxing" and skipping the rope. Then he went at "Bob" Armstrong for the three rounds of sparring already described. With less than a minute's pause he next attacked the punching bag, hammering it hard for twenty minutes, when the rope broke under one of his tremendous blows and the leather spheroid went sailing out into the grove like a thunderbolt released from the hand of Jove. "Farmer" Burns says that "Jeff" to-day is the hardest hitter in the world.

Stopping only to mop the profuse perspiration from his face with a towel, "Jeff" jumped into the handball court and played two or three lively games with Berger. When he ceased work for the day he had been at it violently and continuously for three consecutive hours, not to mention the road running and wood chopping of the morning. At no time was he breathing hard, nor did he appear fatigued.

Berger, his big manager, would be the better for more of this kind of gruelling work. He is overburdened with adipose tissue and badly out of condition. A fast game of handball causes him to puff like a porpoise, and three rounds with Jeffries a few days ago left him in a condition bordering on collapse. On that occasion Berger was fairly reeling at the end of the first round. "Jeff," who was standing easily in his corner, thought Berger about to fall.

"Shove a chair under him," shouted Jeffries.

Somebody pushed a chair under the rope and Berger sank down upon it, panting like a bellows. Despite his lack of condition, however, Berger had scored in the initial round the first good blow of the bout—a neat, clean drive to Jeffries' face. The manager landed again once or twice, but in the final round "Jeff" could easily have finished him had the fight been a real contest. The big fellow's only comment after it was over was:—

"You hit me a couple of good cracks, Sam. Did you hurt your hand?"

SOMETIMES TACITURN.

After his rubdown by "Farmer" Burns and "Bob" Armstrong, Jeffries dressed and devoted the rest of the afternoon to his wife. With the cessation of work his mood became taciturn and the worriment that beset him was more evident than before. He walked down to the railroad station with Mrs. Jeffries and "Dick" Adams, followed by the two faithful Jeffries dogs. While waiting for the train he alternately chatted with his wife and frisked with Teddy, the fox terrier, who is Mrs. Jeffries' particular pet. The camp retainers agree that Teddy is well named. He is impatient and jealous of other dogs and his insistent barks and yelps keep his presence well advertised.

The other pet of the camp is a fine wire haired Irish terrier named "Jeff." He is only a pup and has recently been tied up in disgrace, having nearly lost himself in the mountains through following the trail of an alluring fish wagon. The quadruped Jeff has much sympathy. He is the most sociable animal housed at the Jeffries cottage. He doesn't know any better than to show a friendly front to those who hail him fairly, and to a gentle salutation he will respond at least with a courteous wag of his stumpy tail. The dog has much to learn.

"Jeff"—that is the biped "Jeff"—sometimes varies his gymnasium routine by fishing for trout in the shallow waters of the San Lorenzo, which runs close by the camp. On these trips he is usually attended only by "Hy" Green, a fishing expert, whose talents have been chartered by the management for piscatorial purposes. The law limits a single day's catch to fifty fish. When Jeffries is asked "How many did you get to-day?" his invariable response, if he deigns to reply at all, is:—"Forty-seven."

A dam is being built across the San Lorenzo, so as to make a place deep enough for a swimming pool and broad enough to row a boat across. "Farmer" Burns says rowing is a fine exercise. So Jeff will also row.

Instead of handball Jeffries sometimes varies that exercise by stopping grounders which Burns bats out to him with great skill. "Jeff" is a clever shortstop and not many balls get past him. He is also an enthusiastic baseball "fan." "Wagner," Jeffries says, "is the greatest baseball player in the world."

When Dr. Porter, of Oakland, the Jeffries family physician, visited Mrs. Jeffries recently he utilized the opportunity to make a thorough examination of the old champion's condition. Dr. Porter reported Jeffries perfectly sound physically and said the stethoscope tests showed him to have the heart of a man of twenty-five years. The fighter is actually ten years older, and he passed his birthday—he could hardly be said to have celebrated it—yesterday.

New York "Experts" Expect Jeffries Will Win

New York, [illegible]

IF one really wants to get what Broadway is fond of calling "a general consensus of opinion" on the big fight for the heavyweight championship that is proposed for July 4, he will come nearer to having it made ready to hand at the corner table in the small side room in Shanley's than anywhere else in New York.

About the time when the theatres are flapping the wide valves outward and turning a score of rapidly flowing streams of humanity into Herald Square, that the little circle of veterans of the ring, litterateurs, politicians, present and former lights of the police force and dilettantes of sport began to gather, sometimes barely half a dozen, at other times twice as many, clustered about the several adjoining tables. It is then the fight talk begins to effervesce and one may get opinions that should have great weight because of the experience that backs them.

Through the smoke that begins to hang low over the tables as soon as the dishes have been cleared away, there is a rapid fire clatter as the different members of the party hurl the spears of their opinions into the centre of the conversation.

"But can he come back after five years? You see the smoke's only got one punch and that's a right uppercut, and if—no one ever knew Johnson to fight on the aggressive and he never fought a big man except Jeffries is a whale, he's not a human being at all"——

There's no talk but fight talk for hours after that. Every man there is an authority on the ring, either from experience within the roped square or from having followed the careers of the fighters for years.

At the head of the table sits a man whose reputation as a fighter in print extends from coast to coast. As novelist, magazine writer, magazine editor, historian and journalist he is known as one with a wallop, a hard hitting, hard fighting coiner of phrases that have become classic, and he it is, who is the range boss of the party and herds the conversation.

CHARLEY WHITE THERE.

Charley White is there, he who is most likely to be selected as referee of the big fight and a man whose decisions for years have been regarded as classic examples of what ring decisions should be. Mr. White is sphinx-like in his inscrutability, sitting aloof with somewhat the [illegible] one may notice in a [illegible] listening to a story that may be a bit risque, for Mr. White is strong for the proprieties and would point out that in his delicate position no expression of opinion may be expected from him.

"There is but one end to this fight," is the opinion Corbett offers. "Johnson is not and never has been in the Jeffries class."

"Jeffries is three men in one," is the comment of Kid McCoy. "He has the strength and vitality to fit out half a dozen fighters like myself."

Back and forth the opinions shuttle throughout the early morning, and when the party breaks up, some burrowing down into the subway while others scatter in taxicabs, it is generally agreed that it is going to be Jeffries' fight. Until July 4, however, the big championship battle will be a constant topic of discussion for this debating club that meets almost nightly in Shanley's grill.

CAVANVILLE NEWS

Cavanville, May. 17. — The many friends and acquaintances of Mrs. Henry Braithwaite, of Cavanville, will be sorry to hear that she is on the sick list. We all join in wishing her a speedy recovery.

Cavanville baseball club met last week and decided to play again this season. They expect to have a stronger team than ever. They have rented a large field for the season and intend to practice every evening hereafter. The first scheduled game will be pulled off on the 24th of May, with Janetville as the opposing team. The game will be played in [illegible] on the Driving Park grounds. Peterborough and Bethany will play a football match on the same date.

Dr. and Mrs. [illegible] Sutton, of Omemee were visiting friends in Cavan last week.

The B[illegible] carpet factory boys were [illegible] out to Bethany on Saturday to play a return game of football. The Bethany team won in a sharp contest by two goals.

Miss Lulu Cathcart, daughter of Mr. John Cathcart, of Cavan, passed away on Thursday in the west, where she had been residing for some time past. The body will be brought home for burial accompanied by her uncle Mr. William Cathcart. The funeral will take place from the home of her parents to St. John's cemetery, Ida.

The young people of St. John's church, Ida, have formed a club called the Young People's Anglican Association. They have a membership of 55 to date. They intend too hold social evenings, literary evenings, etc. They have secured the house of the late Mr. Jeffrey for a hall.

They are agitating a private telephone line for the 10th line of Cavan. A meeting will be held next week to decide what to do in connection with the matter.

How to Prevent Grip From Going Through the House.

THE CHANTICLEER CRAZE.

Barnyard Influences Pervade Whole Realm of Fashion — Roosters For Hair Ornaments—Individual Touches on Suits to Lift Them Out of Ready Made Class.

Dear Elsa—I'm going to wash all my pocket handkerchiefs hereafter myself. Why? I'll tell you. But before I begin my story I should like to ease my mind about the difference small things make in the success of household management. The amount of irritation, for instance, arising from the misplacement of a box of matches is out of all proportion to the cause of it, and I think some special genius presides over the fortunes of handkerchiefs.

Why has a little Jap housewife so serene a brow and such tranquil eyes? At this moment, when all my best handkerchiefs have gone astray at the "Sunshine" laundry, I should say that it is because people in Japan use paper handkerchiefs and burn them when they are done with them.

And whoever heard of "grippy" colds "going through the house" in the mikado's country as they do with us? To wash handkerchiefs at home is a real economy, and, as I stated at the beginning of this letter, it's the course I'm going to pursue. And I'm going to boil them with a piece of orris root in the water, so they'll have a delicious, elusive fragrance of the violet clinging to them.

But, to come back to the handkerchief as a grip distributer, a friend of mine who is a trained nurse recently told me that if mouchoirs used by members of the family suffering from colds were at once plunged into cold water plentifully supplied with salt there would be less danger of the disease spreading. You must put them into the water immediately and not wait for the regular wash day. Into this pail should be placed the pillowslips used by the sufferer, for if these things used so intimately are allowed to be put aside in the clothesbasket they dry and the microbes are released to go wandering off in search of pastures new. The salt water, the nurse said, cleanses and disinfects at the same time. On wash day take the handkerchiefs out of soak and rub over with castile soap, then boil. To do this place in cold water, add a little powdered dry soap or soap jelly and let them come to a boil slowly. Rinse and blue in water slightly colored with liquid blue. Roll up for ironing while still wet and iron after a good shaking and they will be exactly the right stiffness.

While on the laundering subject let me give you another tip. Never use a hot iron on silk handkerchiefs or those decorated with colored borders or embroidery. Salt water "stays" colors, and embroidery first dipped in salt water keeps its color intact through the rest of the process of washing. And it is well to know that faded colors revive in a final rinsing of vinegar and water—one-third vinegar and two-thirds water.

A Place For Microbes.

Don't think I'm a faddist on the germ subject. I'm not in the same class with the old lady at the pure food lecture who when the speaker of the afternoon opened her talk with the quotation, "The quality of mercy is not strained," called out in a shrill voice, "Well, if it ain't strained it ain't sanitary, and we don't want nothing to do with it." Still, I do agree that a wholesome horror of microbes is a good thing for a housekeeper to possess, and few of them have any too great an aversion to these dread invaders of our hearth. Some people, though, make themselves unnecessarily nervous about these microscopic enemies. It is just as well to remember sometimes that even microbes have their place and use in the economy of nature.

To change the subject abruptly, I am running on rather low fashion speed this spring and am economizing on my cloth suit. In fact, I've bought a plain hopsacking model in one of the new dark blue shades and am braiding the collar, cuffs, pockets and belt at my leisure. It is these accessories that "make" a costume of anything like dressy character. The ornamental work put on inexpensive tailor mades is of necessity cheap, while often the material and workmanship of the suit are very good. Just a handmade touch on the collar, cuffs, pockets and belt and the suit rises to the plane of the expensive model.

One would have expected that soutache, so abundantly used these many months and years, would decline in vogue this season. But here it is as much used as ever. My suit, which you will see reproduced in the drawing, owes all its distinctiveness to the work of my own fair fingers. The coat is of the new prescribed length and is a shape that is familiar among spring models. The belt crosses in the back and front, while the sides of the coat are plain. The tunic is also of the cross over order, and the hem of the skirt is trimmed with braid.

Chanticleer's Day.

And speaking of the shops reminds me that there is scarcely a counter in the New York department shops that does not display some article named for the noblest of birds, the chanticleer. In fact, in all the fabrics, from heavy linen to the finest of silks, the vivid chanticleer color which is derived from the comb and wattles of the lord of the barnyard has already found its place. The authentic shade is a bright watermelon pink, bordering on the cerise, but one finds any startling red, from a vermilion to a scarlet, posing as such, and the color is introduced in the most unexpected places, blue coats, shepherd's plaid dresses, dotted foulards, hats, wraps and hair ribbons being livened up with a piping or an edge of it. The cock and the hen pheasant have their portraits done in silk and water colors on parasols and hand bags, and on cushion tops and trimming bands the noble bird also appears. Stockings have chanticleer lace insets, and there are little roosters to be worn in the hair if there is to be found a woman with sufficient nerve to carry out the style seriously.

There is, dear, no such thing as a chanticleer hat, for any hat trimmed with a whole bird or even wings or quills of the golden pheasant colorings is called a chanticleer. And, let me whisper in your ear, we Americans are the only people making a fuss about the rooster anyhow. In Paris the craze was a nine days' wonder and is now safely passed. Dorothy D., who has just come over from the French capital, tells me that as a vogue fashion the chanticleer is a thing of ancient history. Devotedly,

Good Icing.

Boiled Frosting.—One cupful of granulated sugar, ten tablespoonfuls of boiling water and the white of one egg. Boil the sugar and water together without stirring till it hardens when dropped in cold water. Try it as soon as the bubbles become large. Have ready the white of an egg well beaten. Pour the hot sugar on it and beat till stiff enough to ice the cake. Enough for one large loaf.

Orange Frosting.—Beat the white of an egg and add gradually one cupful of pulverized sugar. Beat till stiff and then stir in the juice of one large orange.

Cocoanut Frosting.—Same as orange frosting, substituting three tablespoonfuls of grated cocoanut in place of the orange juice. The white of an egg and one cup of sugar, with any flavoring you may desire, will make enough frosting for one loaf.

Water Icing.—To two tablespoonfuls of boiling water add enough confectioner's sugar to make thick enough to spread. Any flavor.

Chocolate Frosting. — Melt two squares of chocolate and add three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of milk. Cook in double boiler till smooth. Add the yolk of one egg and let cook one minute. Spread immediately.

Opera Caramel Frosting.—Cook in a double boiler one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of thin cream and one-half tablespoonful of butter. When a ball is formed by dropping mixture in cold water remove from the fire. Beat until ready to spread.

Exercises For Children.

Exercise is absolutely necessary for children. Without it is impossible to keep the little one's muscles and organs in a sound and healthy condition.

Outdoor games are really the best form of exercise, as the children's interest is held, while their muscles are being used, but brisk walks are good too. But let them also do a few simple calisthenics to strengthen the chest, as games do not provide for this.

Simply stretching the arms out in front and then slowly moving them from front to back and back again and then above the head and down to the sides a few times is quite enough. Teach them to breathe deeply at the same time.

The Winnipeg and Spencer Junction of the G.T.P. will be handed over to the G.T.R. in August.

Pat Donnelly was fined $200 at St. Catharines because his son sold liquor to an Indian.

APSLEY

Apsley, May 16.—The weather has been fine for the past two weeks and as a result growth has picked up wonderfully.

Mr. T. G. Eastland, of Apsley, who has been a very prominent merchant in this village for a number of years, has sold out his business and intends going west. We are sorry to lose Mr. Eastland, as he will be greatly missed in the village and surrounding locality.

To Mr. and Mrs. Willet Bound, of Lasswade, on May 8th, a pair of twin boys.

Miss Nellie Gilroy, of Coe Hill, is stopping with her aunt, Miss A. Hall, this summer.

The cheese factories around these parts began the season's business on Monday, May 9th.

The Apsley Telephone Company propose having a basket social on May 24th for the purpose of helping to raise additional funds with which to extend their "line" a little farther east—as far as F. J. Woodbeck's store. We wish them every success in their enterprise, as it will be a great advantage to all.

Mr. Archie McColl, of Lasswade, is erecting a new house on his farm in Methuen.

Mr. C. E. Dingman, of Apsley, is engaged as teacher again in S.S. No. 2, Chandos.

Mr. Wm. Hales, of Apsley, had the misfortune to lose a horse a short time ago.

Misses Ella and Jannie Phillips, who have been in Toronto for the winter, have returned home again, and their many friends are giving them a hearty welcome.

The comet has been creating quite an excitement in this locality of late, but then it will all fade away.

ONE BAD MISTAKE

Is Frequently Made by the Wisest of Peterborough People

It's a serious mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney ills. Fatal complications may follow. Booth's Kidney Pills act quickly to overcome kidney ills, do not delay until too late, it may mean Diabetes, Brights Disease. Read what a Peterborough resident says;—

Mrs. R. Duncan, of 115 McDonnel street, Peterborough, Ont., says;—"Some thireten years ago I suffered with a severe attack of La Grippe that had until this spring left me in weakened and miserable condition. The kidneys had been disordered through this and became so inactive that doctors had pronounced Bright's Disease and termed my case incurable. My back was very weak and the pains across the kidneys were most excruciating. The urine was highly colored and contained a quantity of whitish sediment. I had become so discouraged through my years of suffering that I had no care for anything. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at Madill's Drug Store and I tried them. The first box convinced me of their merits. I used five boxes of the remedy and I have been entirely cured. I am like a new person, well and strong and can sleep through the night and awake refreshed and ready for the day." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian agents.

Daughter of India's Viceroy.

Lady Charles Fitzmaurice, who is well remembered in Canada, was Lady Violet Elliot, youngest daughter of Lord Minto. Her marriage, which took place in India, was a very grand affair. Her husband, Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, is a son of Lord Lansdowne, and has also resided in the Dominion. Lady Charles has a little daughter whose christening took place the other day in London when several important people stood as sponsors.

LATE KING EDWARD'S BODY NOW LYING IN STATE

Huge Concourse of People Gathered to Watch Impressive Ceremony of Removing the Body—Brief Service at Westminster Hall.

London, May 18.—The body of King Edward VII., the peacemaker, was taken with stately pomp yesterday morning from Buckingham Palace on the first stage of the journey to the grave, and now lies in state in Westminster Hall, where hundreds of thousands will pay a last tribute to the dead monarch before the march through the streets of the capital on Friday.

The procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall passed through double lines of red-coated soldiers, flanked with rows of stalwart policemen, and a mass of silent black-garbed humanity. The German and other embassies in Carleton House terrace were covered with funeral palls of black and purple, relieved occasionally by green wreaths and bouquets of white lilies.

A guardsman, with sword reversed, came down the Mall at measured tread, two other guardsmen following closely behind. Then came the officers of the headquarters' staff, the Army Council and the Board of Admiralty. As these appeared, the troops came to a half salute, with reversed guns, and remained thus until Field Marshals Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, the admirals of the fleet, the Indian orderly officers in black uniforms, and the aides-de-camp of the late King passed.

Then came the casket and after it King George, who, like the officers and other members of royalty, was afoot.

The Duke of Cornwall and Prince Albert, two little figures in the natty uniforms of naval cadets, followed their father. King Frederick of Denmark and King Haakon, with the Duke of Connaught between them, came next, and then followed the other members of the British and foreign royal families in gorgeous uniforms, the only touch of mourning being the black bands on the sleeves of their coats. An array of officers of the late King's household, nearly all of them in bright uniforms, but a few in mourning dress, followed.

The greatest interest of the crowd was aroused at the approach of the first carriage, for in this rode the Queen-Mother, Alexandra, to whom the hearts of all Britishers have gone out during the past week. Her Majesty, wearing the deepest mourning, had lifted her veil, and the people reverently raised their hats to the pathetic figure. The Queen-Mother was accompanied by her sister, the Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, and her daughters, the Princess Royal and Princess Victoria.

Queen Mary occupied the second state carriage, having for the occasion surrendered the first place, to which, as Queen, she was entitled. Her Majesty was preceded by the sovereign's escort, the only mounted troops participating, with the exception of a few stationed along the route. Queen Mary was accompanied by her daughter, Princess Mary, and Prince Henry.

The spectacle at Westminster Hall, during the brief service when the casket was deposited there, was a solemn and moving picture of deep contrasts. The casket rested high on the purple catafalque in the centre of the hall, covered with a white and gold embroidered pall and draped with the royal ensign. Upon the ensign, at the head, were placed the jeweled crown, the orb and sceptre.

King George stood at the foot of the casket, with the Queen Mother, Queen Mary and the young princes. Behind them were the members of royalty, who had followed the body, and a group of twenty royal ladies in deepest black, with long veils, no touch of color relieving their garb, which was as the simplest and the most sombre that mourners wear. Around this body were stationed the officers of the court of the royal household, the earl marshal, black rod, silver stick, and others in their brilliant uniforms.

In the long rows on either side, and extending nearly the length of the hall, were massed the people, the members of more than 400 from each chamber. All of these, which included many of Great Britain's foremost statesmen, were in informal black dress. The others who made up the great assemblage that filled the hall, formed a shining field of color, in which gold and scarlet predominated.

Grouped at the foot of the elevation were a hundred of the greatest generals and admirals of the Empire. In the centre Lord Kitchener, tall and dark, towered over Lord Roberts, who is short and grey. Nearby was seen the grim face of Lord Fisher, one-time senior Naval Lord of the Admiralty.

At the opposite end of the hall was a great congregation of courtiers and officers, picked men, the finest appearing in England, and wearing a dazzling variety of uniforms and decorations.

The service occupied only half an hour.

After it was done, the Queen Mother Alexandra, who had been seated in a purple-covered chair while the others stood, rose and, taking a step forward, knelt beside the casket and with hands clasped remained for a moment in silent prayer. Rising, she beckoned for her son to escort her and moved slowly down the aisle, bowing slightly as she passed the guards of honor, who stood statue-like on either side. Queen Mary followed, also bowing, and the two preceded the others of the group of royalties from the hall.

COMET PILLS ARE TAKEN BY NEGROES

How the Hoodoo Doctors in Hayti Make Money Out of People's Credulity.

New York, May 18.—Unusual preparations are being made to celebrate "Comet Night," as to-night already has come to be known, and if the fiery tail of the astral visitor brings a cataclysm it is bound to be preceded by much joy.

The large hotels and restaurants in New York are making preparations for the accommodation of numerous patrons, and the theatres schedule special comet programs. The manager of one east side theatre aiming to reassure his patrons against the deadly oxygen gas from the comet's tail, announced yesterday that he will "blow an atmosphere of pure oxygen" into his auditorium on Wednesday evening and will have medical advisers present. The effect of an atmosphere of pure oxygen would probably be such as to require the presence of medical advisers.

Whatever the comet may do or whatever it may not do to this long-suffering old earth of ours, the negroes of Port au Prince, Hayti, are safe, because they know they are well protected with comet pills.

Comet pills are new to the pharmacopaeia. Word of their appearance arrived by the liner Allegheny, in from Port au Prince. Her officers said that all the negroes there, rich men, poor men, beggars and thieves, are running pell mell to the hut of a shrewd old hoodoo doctor just outside the city, who is selling comet pills faster than he can make them. The prescription is one pill for every hour up to the time the comet begins to recede from the earth, but many patients make doubly sure by taking one pill every half hour.

The comet doctor guards his formula closely, and he is growing rich faster than Col. Mulberry Sellers in his wildest dreams.

NOTED ACTRESS MAY BE BLIND

New York, May 18.—Clara Morris, the famous emotional actress of a generation ago, is said to be threatened with blindness at her home in Yonkers. She has also experienced a general breakdown and her condition is now serious.

Of late years she has done considerable writing for the press and for magazines.

WALL STREET GAMBLING

Albany, N.Y., May 18.—Senator MacManus offered a resolution in the Senate yesterday requiring the governor to transmit to the Legislature forthwith an emergency measure, urging the immediate enactment of legislation intended to prohibit gambling in stocks in the financial districts of the City of New York, commonly known and referred to as "Wall street gambling," such legislation to be as drastic and effective in preventing such gambling as that which has recently passed both Houses of the Legislature in relation to the gambling on horse races.

REFUSED THE APPLICATION

Ottawa, May 18.—The Railway Commission at traffic sittings here yesterday refused the application of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railways that tickets between Toronto and Hamilton be interchangeable. The board dismissed the application on the ground that a company can collect tolls only where it has filed a tariff, and if the C.P.R. took up G.T.R. tickets it would be without statutory authority.

A rate of 14 cents instead of 17 cents per hundred pounds was ordered for cattle shipments between Toronto and Smith's Falls.

Elevator Commission.

Winnipeg, May 18.—The Manitoba Government Elevator Commission was announced yesterday. F. B. McLennan, grain merchant; D. W. McCuaig, president of Grain Growers' Association, and W. C. Graham, manager of Mutual Hail Insurance Co., are the three gentlemen appointed.

Memorial Service at Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 18.—It was announced yesterday that a memorial service for Edward VII. will be held in Queen Victoria Park Friday afternoon. Arrangements are being made for the attendance of the militia, fraternal orders and school children.

Famous Architect Dead.

London, Eng., May 18.—George Aitchison, the architect, is dead. He was for a time professor of architecture at the Royal Academy, from which position he resigned in 1905. He was past president of the Royal Institute of British Architects.

PLOT TO KILL CHINAMEN

Victoria, B.C., May 18.—An investigation is under way at Vancouver to ascertain the identity of the men who nearly succeeded in an attempt to dynamite 120 Chinese who had just embarked from the Empress of China and had entered cars on the C.P.R. line for the trip across the continent.

The plan to kill the Chinese was discovered by a C.P.R. agent, who found a stick of dynamite inside the stove of each of the two cars which were to carry the Orientals across the country. In one case the stick was about to be lighted by the Chinese appointed by his brethren to do the cooking while on the transcontinental journey.

Ham Woo, cook in one car, had started removing and replacing paper and sticks in his stove preparatory to starting a meal, when C. L. Corning, the railroad agent, stopped him and took from his hand the stick of dynamite, which had been attached to a 60-pound explosive cap. The Chinaman was ignorant of the explosive's character, but Corning at once instituted an investigation of the other car, which resulted in one stick of dynamite being found.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The steamer Faustin, coal-laden, from Toledo, foundered off Bar Point. The crew was taken off.

Frank Lyons of Windsor was killed at Cochrane in a freight wreck on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Secretary Knox of the United States may make an attempt to preserve the peace between Ecuador and Peru.

King Alfonso of Spain and King George of Greece arrived in London last evening to attend King Edward's funeral.

The C.P.R. system, including the steamships, will all stop for three minutes on the day of the King's funeral.

Peter Verigen and his gang of Doukhobors have started a big grading contract on the Grand Trunk Pacific near Canora, Sask.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and four of his Ministers are in Quebec investigating the needs of the harbor and the Transcontinental terminals.

The Government's suit against the town of Sault Ste. Marie for transportation and pay of troops sent from Toronto to quell the riots there seven years ago was heard by Chief Justice Falconbridge, who reserved judgment.

ELEVEN BOTTLES TOO MUCH FOR HIM

St. Catharines, May 18.—Alex. Raymond, a journeyman confectioner, on the tramp, who gives his home as Toronto, was yesterday remanded for a week on the charge of breaking into the Grand Trunk freight depot here on Sunday night.

He was arrested Monday, lying beside the tracks with eleven bottles of port wine, which were missing from the building. Raymond, who had consumed half the wine, had on Saturday night attempted to rifle the cash register in Walker & Abbs' drug store while the clerk was engaged.

STEADY RAIN PUT OUT FIRE

Port Arthur, May 18.—Steady rain all Monday night and yesterday damped down the serious bush fires in this district. The worst was in McGregor Township, where three summer houses were destroyed. It was supposed to be incendiary. Frequent fires are reported at Silver Mountain and Stanley Junction, also along the line of the C.N.R. near Mattawin and Rowan. These fires destroyed considerable timbered land. No damage is reported to settlers' homes or personal effects.

Old Resident Dead.

Walkerville, May 18.—Henry Herbert, 72 years old, proprietor of the Riverside Hotel in Sandwich East, is dead, of cancer. Mr. Herbert was a practical fisherman and farmer for many years. For nearly a quarter of a century he and Alex. Campau rented fishing privileges at Belle Isle from the City of Detroit. He leaves a widow and nine children.

LAW LIBRARY FOR COLONIAL LAWYERS

London, May 18.—Acting on representations made by the Canadian authorities, the Government has decided to establish in the Privy Council building a general law library, containing necessary records relating to the whole dominions, India and the crown colonies. Counsel engaged in colonial appeals have frequently complained of the lack of such facilities.

BOY TIRED OF GIRL BRIDE

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 18.—Only a week of married life was enough to induce Leo Snell, the 18-year-old son of a Syracuse professor, who married 18-year-old Ruth Van Brocking of Syracuse here on Sunday, May 8, to seek annulment of the marriage. The wedding was a romantic elopement. The bride and her mother oppose the annulment.

CARLETON PLACE BURNING, WITH STRONG WIND BLOWING

Best Business Blocks, Zion Presbyterian Church and a Nnmber of Residences Already Gone—The Flames Spreading.

Special to the Review.

Carleton Place, Ont., May 18.—Fire, which started in McGonigle's butcher shop, Bridge street, shortly after midnight, from a cause unknown, and was fanned by a strong southwesterly breeze, rapidly spread, and is still burning fiercely, having done damage already estimated at fully $300,000. The best business section of the town is in ashes, the finest residential district has been gutted, and the handsome Zion Presbyterian church, recently renovated at a cost of $20,000, is burned to the ground. Almonte, in a response to an appeal for help, sent down its fire engine, manned by a competent crew, and with the two local engines, did its best to stop the spread of the fire, but the high wind made all efforts of no avail, as it carried cinders and burning embers in all directions. Besides Zion church, the Masonic Hall, the roller rink, Bates & Innes' mill, the Singleton block and a dozen residences and stores have gone.

FOUND LOST BROTHER THROUGH MOVING PICTURE

The Berlin News-Record of recent date contained an interesting item telling of the unique experience of Mr. Wm. Joannes, of that place, who recognized a long lost brother in a moving picture in the Berlin Theatorium, and was thus able to communicate with him.

The facts of the interesting case are given in the Berlin paper as follows:

Mr. Janannes' brother, Charles, with a roaming disposition, left Berlin six years ago for San Francisco. Two years later, in April of 1906, the terrible earthquake destroyed the city and killed thousands, and as no word had been received from him since the time of his departure, it was naturally supposed he had perished in the catastrophe.

About eight weeks ago George O. Philip secured a film of motion pictures along the C.P.R. line. Mr. John Schilling, cousin of Mr. Charles Johannes, was one of the many who witnessed these pictures at the Theatorium. The picture showed the railway station at Lagoon, B.C., and what was Mr. Schilling's surprise when the very likeness of Charles Johannes stepped off the train and came under the scope of the camera man. "There is Charles Johannes," was the thought that flashed through his mind. So positive was he of the identity of the man in the picture that Mr. Schilling immediately told his relatives. Mr. Henry Poepke, a brother-in-law, after seeing the picture likewise believed it to be their wandering relative. They learned from Mr. Philip that the pictures had been taken last summer. No thoughts other than that Charles Johannes, of Berlin, was still alive, were entertained.

Last month a card was received from him from Victoria B.C., stating he was alive and well, and would write a long letter shortly. During his absence he had travelled over the greater part of the continent.

THAMES RIVER IS FILLING UP

Chatham, May 18.—The steamer Ossifrab, on her return trip from Detroit on Monday evening, got stuck on one of the numerous bars in the Thames and was stalled for several hours. The Thames is fast filling up with sandbars and dangerous snags, and unless action is taken shortly to have the stream dredged, it will be only a question of time until it will no longer be navigable.

GETTING READY TO FIGHT PERU

Guayaquil, May 18.—More troops are being rushed to the frontier. An artillery brigade, splendidly equipped, left for MacHala in the southwestern part of Ecuador Monday night.

Congress will meet in extraordinary session on June 1 to deal with the trouble with Peru.

GIRL WAS SAVED FROM DROWNING

Chatham, May 18.—Little twelve-year-old Ella McDonald, who lives at 70 Barth street, was saved from being whirled away in the high water that still prevails in the Thames River, by the presence of mind and bravery of Fred Salisburg of 12 Pitt street. The little girl fell off the Kent Mills dock and it was only after a long, hard struggle that Salisbury succeeded in swimming out with her.

Roasted to Death.

Portland, Ore., May 18.—The famous man monkey, Charles Thex First, was roasted to death by the radiator in a baggage car on the Northern Pacific Railroad coming from Seattle to Portland on Monday. He had been appearing on a western circuit, and was booked for nearly one hundred weeks ahead, at $750 a week.

Railroad Clerks Strike.

Roanoke, Va., May 18.—A general strike of clerks on the Norfolk & Western Railroad was ordered yesterday by the Railroad Clerks' Union, after a vote which showed 93 per cent. of that class of employes in favor of it. The strike calls out about six hundred men.

Wanted by Buffalo Police.

Toronto, May 18.—William McHaney, alias James J. Ryan of Syracuse, N.Y., and Henry Dewsbury of this city, are held at the request of the Buffalo police, by whom they are wanted for breaking into a jewelry store. They will fight extradition.

Hunting a Murderer.

Yanceyville, N.C., May 18.—C. S. Hurst, the Danville, Va., meat dealer, who was shot by Luttshaw, a negro, here, died early yesterday. Governor Kitchen has offered a $200 reward for the capture of the murderer, and several posses are now in pursuit of the fugitive.

Died of Fright.

Lindsay, May 18.—While helping his father to dig a drain Master Mahoney, James Mahoney's son, met his death under peculiar circumstances. A large snake suddenly wound itself around the boy's legs. The lad dropped dead, but it is thought his death was due to fright. The snake escaped.

BANK TO BE WOUND UP

St. Stephen, N.B., May 18.—The annual meeting of St. Stephen Bank on Monday was a lively one. The directors recommended that it be wound up. Curator Kessen reported that several losses had been made which will absorb the capital reserve and profit and loss accounts. Large number of shareholders present severely criticized the former management. It was suggested that Directors Chipman and Whitlock follow the example of the president, F. Todd, who made a contribution of $100,000. A committee of shareholders was appointed to act with the curator.

WELLAND GETS NEW INDUSTRY

Welland, May 18.—Welland has landed another industry, the Canadian New Way Motor Co., Ltd., a branch of the New Way Motor Co., Lansing, Mich. The new company is capitalized at $50,000. It will manufacture air-cooled gas and gasoline engines, and will employ one hundred men.

Hotel Burned.

Ottawa, May 18.—A fire at Kirk's Ferry Monday yesterday destroyed Hellard Bros.' store, butcher shop and residence, the boarding-house belonging to John McAllister, and a temperance hotel, conducted by Mr. John McAllister, jr.

The loss will be about $14,000.

BODY TAKEN TO PLANTAGENET

The body of Roy Reasbeck, the fifteen-year-old boy, who was fatally injured by being struck by a west-bound freight train at Blairton yesterday morning, was sent to the deceased lad's home at Plantagenet on the C. P.R. midnight train last night. Interment will take place at Ventric cemetery, near Plantagenet.

STORES WILL BE CLOSED FRIDAY

The Retail Merchants' Association of the city have decided that the retail stores will be closed all day Friday, the day of the late King's funeral.

The stores will be kept open on Thursday evening.

3 SUBSTANTIAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Those interested in the chimes movement will be glad to know that three generous contributions of $50 each have been received from Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of Toronto, and Mr. J. J. Lundy and Miss R. Burnham of this city. This brings the total amount contributed to date to over $3,000.

A meeting of the committee was held last night and in the future will be held every Tuesday evening.

Mr. Wainwright, manager of the Bank of Ottawa, is treasurer, and subscriptions may be left with him.

SEVEN BOILERS BURST AT CANTON TIN PLATE WORKS

Thirty Men Killed and Fifty Injured by Explosion in Ohio Town—Flour Mills Destroyed—Bodies Blown Into Fragments.

Canton, Ohio, May 18.—With a roar that was heard three miles away, a battery of seven boilers at the plant of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Co. exploded yesterday afternoon, killing from 20 to 30 men, and injuring about fifty. Among the injured are a half dozen, who, it is said, will probably die.

The cause of the explosion is at present unknown. The fireman and engineer, who were in the boiler-room, are dead. No one else who survived the accident can give an explanation. One workman says that he heard three distinct explosions in quick succession. They came so close, however, that it was all over in a minute. The force of the concussion was terrific. The big plant is in such a state of ruin as to be practically a total loss. A mere eggshell of the building is left.

Identification of the men was difficult, because many of them were so mutilated that even their most intimate friends could not recognize their features. Heads were blown from several bodies. Arms and legs were torn from the trunks. Fragments of the bodies were blown several squares from the scene, and bits of human flesh have been picked up in porches, on roofs of houses, and in trees.

There were one hundred men at labor in the plant at the time of the accident, and only a dozen or so escaped some injury. These and others who rushed to the plant as soon as the disaster was known, worked heroically to rescue the injured from the ruins. The ruins soon took fire, but the fire department extinguished the flames.

The Dead.

The list of known dead is: Geo. A. Lemley, catcher; — Rover, engineer; Charles Dewitt, engineer; Walter Ringenberger, heater; George Bole, heater; Chas. Brown, heater; J. Henry, catcher, north industry; Jack Wheelam, Harry Baltzley, H. Lothamer, dubler; Peter Woolgoof, unidentified man, A. S. Wheeler, ash wheeler; F. Dunlap, Charles Richards, unidentified man.

A partial list of injured is: Hiram Stulz, left arm broken; Joe Rowe, right foot hurt; John Vorson, extent of injuries could not be learned, was operated upon; H. V. Perego, seriously hurt; Alonzo Steiner, right shoulder mangled; Chas. Gape, struck in chest with flying debris and badly scalded; Louis Hughes, fireman, struck by debris and leg broken; A. W. Kauffman, storekeeper, cut and bruised.

The superintendent of the plant last night put foremen and other trusted men at work to make a list of the dead, injured and missing. The task proved difficult, because the injured had been rushed to the three hospitals of the city and there was nothing which can identify them. Members of the bereaved families rushed frantically to the plant and thence to hospital and residences near the ruined shops, in an effort to find a trace of their loved ones.

It was thought at eight o'clock last night that all the dead had been removed from the debris. It was then stated that as far as known the dead number twenty, but this did not include any who had died at their homes after removal from the ruins.

The body of one man, unknown, was blown through a house over 700 feet from the plant. The body entered the house from the east side and continued in a straight line through a bedroom and out the other side of the house to Louis avenue. The torso of another man was found in the garden of a yard about 500 feet west of the scene. Arms, legs and parts of bodies were strewn about the neighborhood.

The bodies of seven men, mutilated beyond recognition, were found in the north end of the mill.

"For God's sake, hit me on the head and kill me," said one workman to a man who found him. The injured man had an arm torn off and a great hole in his side.

The plant had five mills. All the employes working at mills one, two, three and four were either killed or injured, while the men in mill No. 5, farthest from the boilers, esceped serious injury.

DIED WHILE TRYING TO SAVE HIS GRANDCHILDREN

Magistrate Holland, of Cobourg, Thought Children of His Daughter Were in Burning House and Went Into the Flames for Them.

Cobourg, May 18.—A tragic event occurred here last night, when Henry S. Holland, one of the best-known residents in this vicinity, lost his life while engaged in an heroic mission.

Fire had broken out about 10.15 p.m. in the residence of Kenyon Lett, a son-in-law of Mr. Holland, who was spending the evening with Mr. Sutherland, bank manager, when he heard of the fire.

Although past sixty years of age and rather heavily built, Mr. Holland ran some distance to the scene of the fire. Then, fearing that some of the children of the Lett family were still in the house, he bravely entered the burning building. It was thought he had emerged again, but about midnight, when the firemen were searching the ruins of the house, they found his dead body in an upstairs room.

Death was apparently due to suffocation, while the body had also been somewhat burned. Whether his exertion in running to the fire had overtaxed his heart or whether he was overpowered by the smoke an autopsy may determine.

Mr. Holland was police magistrate of the town, and had occupied that office for some years. It is only about a month ago since his brother, the oldest magistrate in the province, died at Port Hope. Deceased was a former law partner of the late Justice Armour, and was town solicitor and solicitor for the united counties of Durham and Northumberland. He was one of the most respected citizens and the town is deeply shocked at his tragic death.

He leaves a widow, formerly a Miss Frazer, two daughters, Mrs. Lett and an unmarried daughter, and a son, who is in the west.

The Lett residence is practically a ruin. The loss is estimated at about $5,000.

THE GIFT TO MR. FIELDING

As noted the other day when Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse, was offered a gift of $250,000 collected for her by the British people in recognition of her great services to wounded British soldiers in the Crimea, she refused the gift and suggested that the money be applied to the establishment of a training school for nurses. There would have been nothing wrong in the acceptance of this $250,000 by Florence Nightingale, for she held no official position, yet the world honors her for refusing the gift.

But Hon. William Fielding, as Finance Minister of Canada, holds a position which places it in his power to give rich rewards to some of those who contributed to the big $120,000 fund which was collected for him. Some of them have already received great favors from him.

ANOTHER LIBERAL QUARREL

It is stated that a serious quarrel has taken place between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior. It is certainly rather strange that while Sir Wilfrid Laurier goes touring through the West with Hon. George Graham and Mr. Pardee, Hon. Frank Oliver is going off on a trip down the Mackenzie River to the Arctic Ocean. It might be supposed that when Sir Wilfrid Laurier decided to visit the section of the country for which the Minister of the Interior is directly responsible he would have had Hon. Frank Oliver with him. Whether the Minister of the Interior is taking his long trip in order to be out of the way when the Premier arrives at Edmonton or whether he had planned the trip before Sir Wilfrid announced his intention of going west and was unwilling to give up his holiday to please the Premier is uncertain. In any case his absence will cause considerable comment.

WANT PARTNERSHIP IN OUR CANALS

The National Association of American Manufacturers, in session at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York city, have passed a resolution in favor of reciprocity with Canada. They have also passed a resolution endorsing the report of a committee to the effect that the United States Government should contribute to the cost of the Trent Valley Canal and the Ottawa and Georgian Bay canal. The report of the committee, which was adopted, said, in reference to these great canal projects:—

"The Welland Canal, which has recently been deepened, saves nothing in distance over the Erie Canal route; but another ship canal is contemplated by the Canadians to connect Lake Ontario by way of Lake Simcoe, with the head of Georgian Bay, thus saving some 300 miles of distance from the Hudson and Mohawk to the entrance to Lake Michigan or Lake Superior. They are discussing yet another deep-water channel, we learn—those most enterprising neighbors of ours—along the Ottawa and French Rivers through Lake Nipissing, which would be easier to construct and would give a still shorter way to Montreal and points farther down the St. Lawrence or beyond. Coming to the practical consideration of how these Canadian projects ought to affect our country and our Manufacturers' Association, we recognize that as the Canadian waterways form a cheap and direct communication between the Minnesota region and the Atlantic seaboard, the entire world is more or less interested. The question, then, is well worth considering, whether the United States would not gain far more than the outlay cost by contributing liberally for the construction of a deep-water canal through this most suitable part of the Province of Ontario, and by admitting the Canadians to unrestricted use of the deep-water route through New York State in return for equally free use of the Canadian canal by our merchant marine."

Canada will probably be willing enough to arrange for reciprocal use of Canadian canals by American vessels and American canals by Canadian vessels as a matter of courtesy, but no arrangement should be made allowing the Americans any treaty rights in the Trent Valley Canal or the Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal. The Canadian people can afford to pay for their own canals. To allow the United States Government to assist in paying for them would simply give the Americans the idea that they owned Canada, and should have anything in it that they asked for.

However, if the unrestricted reciprocity policy were adopted it would probably lead to annexation, and then all Canada's canals would belong to the United States.

SIR WILFRID AT PRINCE RUPERT

The Premier will be rewarded for many adverse criticisms aimed at him by his political opponents when he visits the Pacific terminus of the National Transcontinental Railway, the original conception of which is attributed to him by persistent Parliamentary tradition.—Toronto Globe.

Sir Wilfrid's visit to the Pacific coast will not alter the fact that if the Conservative leader's proposals for building the railway had been adopted there would have been a government-owned line from ocean to ocean, whereas by Sir Wilfrid's own plan the railway from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast is owned by a private company. The Conservative criticism was that as the people of Canada were guaranteeing nine-tenths of the cost of the railway between Winnipeg and Prince Rupert and getting nothing for it, they might as well guarantee the remaining one-tenth and own the railway. The Conservatives said that the Government was allowing the Railway Company to own the section which was easiest to construct and likely to be most profitable to operate. No one can deny that this was true.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier may dip his hands again and again into the waters of the Pacific ocean at Prince Rupert but he can never wash out the stain of the over-classification on the Government section of the railway between Winnipeg and Moncton by which contractors have been paid for clay excavation at rock prices.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier may smile serenely at the real estate agents of Prince Rupert, but that won't alter the fact that he said the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway would not cost the Canadian people more than thirteen million dollars, whereas it is now admitted that the eastern section alone is likely to cost over two hundred million dollars.

CAVANVILLE NEWS

Cavanville, May 16.—The Misses McNeil entertained a number of their friends last Monday evening. A very enjoyable time was spent by all.

Mrs. William Lough of Ida, has returned after a pleasant visit in Toronto.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. John Cathcart and family in their recent bereavement caused by the death of Miss Lulu.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Winslow were the guests on Sunday of the Misses Lough of Ida.

Mr. A. Odell, I. P. S., visited the schools in this section last week.

CURED BRONCHITIS

Mrs. Hopkins Says Her Life Was Saved—Choked and Gasped for Breath

"Some five years ago I was taken with a bad attack of bronchitis. I was affected with a bronchial cough and cold, the cough was generally much more apparent at night, and I would wake up choking and gasping for breath, and there seemed to be a terrible stoppage in my throat and tubes. My throat was tender and irritable, and had an aching sensation, which was especially bad at times. I doctored and used several remedies, but received no permanent relief until I used Hyomei. This remedy is certainly infallible, and it saved my life, and I accord it the credit which it deserves. There is nothing too strong for me to say regarding Hyomei."—Mrs. Ada Hopkins. 8 Cutter Ave., Coldwater, Mich., August 22, 1908.

Wm. Madill sells Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) and he guarantees it to cure bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, croup, hay fever, coughs and colds, or money back.

The price for a complete outfit is only $1.00, which includes a bottle of Hyomei and a neat hard rubber inhaler.

WOMEN AS SPIES.

All the European Powers Use Them For Secret Service Work.

A short time ago some valuable Admiralty plans disappeared from Chatham, England. Mr. McKenna, the First Lord of the Admiralty, admitted that they had been stolen, but a mystery surrounded their disappearance. It is now suggested that a well known international woman spy, who is ever ready to sell her services to the highest bidder, be it the Russian, German or French Government, was responsible for the disappearance of those plans. It is known that she was in England for some weeks prior to the incident and it is supposed that during that time she engineered the plot which resulted in the vanishing of the important papers.

It is only a short time ago that a beautiful and fashionably dressed teacher of languages, Fraulein Petersen, about 25 years of age, was arrested at Kiel, Germany, says Tit-Bits, on suspicion of being a French spy. She was said to have entered into a love affair with a non-commissioned officer named Dietrich of the explosives department for the purpose of inducing him to divulge important German naval secrets. Dietrich, flattered by the attentions of such a beautiful woman, could deny her nothing, and at the time of the arrest was said to have been supplying her with the formula for the manufacture of the German smokeless powder (one of the most effective yet invented) and the situation of the port mines.

In Russia, where the secret service is raised to the level of a fine art, the woman spy is recognized as an extremely valuable medium for obtaining information, not only about foreign matters but also concerning the various revolutionary movements going on at home. One of the most notorious of these feminine police spies is Mme. Jotchenko, who has been described as a female Azeff.

This person, posing as one of the Terrorists, took part in their enterprises, and discovering all their plans gave information to the police. For this work she obtained a handsome monthly salary. She began her nefarious trade at the age of 23, and her first big coup was when she betrayed the Responting plot against the Czar in 1895. Scores of those who had trusted her went into exile in Siberia on the plot being discovered.

She herself, to disarm suspicion, was sent away also, but was allowed to escape and rejoin the revolutionists in order to obtain more information. One of her victims was a handsome girl named Frania Froumkin, who was sent to the gallows after an abortive attempt to kill the perfect of Moscow. The arch traitress wormed herself into the confidence of families, with the result that numbers of persons were banished to Siberia.

Quite recently the French Government caused a large number of German women employed on the eastern frontier as barmaids to be expelled from the country. These women had been watched and found to be in the pay of German spies, to whom they gave the information that they acquired from listening to the conversation of drunken soldiers in the taverns.

A more serious affair was that at Reims. Seven men and three women alleged to be paid agents of the German War Office were arrested. The three women were in the habit, it was said, of making the acquaintance of soldiers and wheedling military secrets out of them, which information they passed on to the men. Compromising correspondence was found at their lodgings and seemed to reveal wholesale espionage by the women. As a matter of fact the arrest of these men and women is said to have disclosed the existence of a widespread organization of German spies throughout the country.

The People of Iceland.

Writing of Iceland, a traveler says: "The people are as a class extremely well educated, and many a young fellow you may see haymaking has been through the Latin school at Reykjavik and is studying law, medicine or divinity in the winter. He finds the means for his winter studies by working on the land during summer. Iceland is essentially a democratic country, and every one has an equal chance of coming to the front. It is singularly unspoiled by the vices of an older civilization, and its people are marked for their simplicity of life and manners. I should unhesitatingly describe Iceland as morally the purest country in the world."

One of Oswald's Jokes.

When a play written by a man who had roused Oswald's anger by reading a newspaper at a wedding of one of his friends was produced the French wit prevented its success by inducing 250 of his friends to attend it, carrying great books. These young men, who occupied prominent seats, read their books while the performance was going on, and whenever there was any applause each one of them, as if moved by clockwork, turned over a leaf. The rustling of the leaves and the spectacle of the men absorbed in reading made the performance a failure.

Prepared For It.

If young Mrs. Miller had not inadvertently used a certain bit of slang one day she might never have discovered what opinion her hitherto forbearing husband held concerning her attempts at cooking desserts.

Noticing when dinner was half over that Mr. Miller appeared downcast, the bride exclaimed suddenly:

"Cheer up, Frank; the worst is yet to come."

"What?" gasped the husband, taken unawares. "Have you made a pudding?"

Shaking Hands.

The custom of shaking hands originated in the ancient practice of adversaries grasping the weapon hand during a truce as a precaution against treachery. When two friends met they extended their weapon hands to each other as a sign that there was no need to stand on the defensive, and a handshake was but the natural outcome of a hearty and vigorous grasp.

Long Distance Horseback Riding.

One of the most remarkable accomplishments in long distance horseback riding was in the early part of the last century when Squire Obaldistone, at Newmarket, England, on a wager of $5,000, was to ride 200 miles within ten hours. The horses were changed at the end of the four mile circuit, some of them being ridden two or three times, and one, Franby, was brought out for a fourth mount. The squire had to mount and remount each horse from the ground, not using a mounting block, so losing time and taking more strain. In spite of this and the ground not being in good condition, the 200 miles were covered in eight hours and thirty-nine minutes. About thirty horses were ridden.

Not the Place For It.

He was writing the libretto for a comic opera. Suddenly he smiled.

He had stumbled on a brand new joke.

He was a student of jokes, a collector, a reviser, an adapter, a faddist. He subjected the joke to every known test.

Finally he gave it the third degree. There was no longer any doubt of its originality.

He read his manuscript over carefully and, sighing heavily, stared at the joke.

He realized there was no place for it in the libretto.

So he left it out and went on writing.

A resolution in the U.S. House of Representatives that the Presidential inauguration be in April instead of March was defeated.

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,

Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

"Are you leavin' her be?" Abe threateningly asked.

Kinross took his cigar from his mouth and measured the bucolic youth before him with cold eyes, which made the other's fall in embarrassment. Then, turning his back on him, he continued to smoke.

Abe scowled, hesitated and finally, with evident reluctance, gave up the fight and slunk away, going slowly back to the house.

CHAPTER XIV.

WHEN Kinross opened his eyes the next morning it was with a sense of pleasure that gradually, as full consciousness came to him, assumed the form of a desire to continue his interrupted talk of the night before with Eunice. As he lay on his back, his hands clasped under his head, the impression he had received of the charm of the girl's personality came back to him vividly. He complacently decided that he would take the first opportunity that day to see and talk with her once more.

But the day passed, and the opportunity did not present itself.

In the evening he betook himself to the terrace by the gate and sat waiting for her to come out to him. Not until his vigil had reached the hour of 11 unrewarded did he give it up.

"She's afraid of Abe," he decided as, with a keenness of disappointment that surprised himself, he went into the silent house and sought his bed.

The two following days left him still foiled of his purpose. It looked as though the girl herself tried to avoid him. The fact only aggravated his desire to renew his investigation of her. To defer it so long was like being obliged to wait a whole month for the next number of an interesting serial. There were many things they had not talked out that night she had come to him. It remained yet to decide what employment she should take up in town.

Kinross had usually found that his interest in a woman was in an inverse ratio to his intimacy with her. The charm of mystery or elusiveness quickly vanished on a closer view. But here was a case in which what at first had seemed a perfectly obvious character grew more mysterious and therefore more interesting each time she opened her lips.

As a diversion from his irritation at his continued failure to see her alone he one day asked Mr. Morningstar's permission to sleep that night in the haunted part of the house.

He was surprised at the effect his simple request produced. The farmer's wife turned white to the lips and trembled so that she had to pause in her clearing of the dinner table and sink into a chair.

"You couldn't hire me with dimons to go near there!" she gasped. "And I wouldn't be doin' right to leave you be so venturesome if you don't know better yourself."

He had lingered after the rest had left the dinner table to put his request, and he was alone with her. With his usual contempt for feminine logic, he would not waste time in reasoning with her on the point at issue, but at once put to her the one argument which he knew could scarcely fail to convince her. "I'll pay a dollar extra board this week for the privilege," he said. Delicacy in dealing with Mrs. Morningstar would have been casting pearls.

"What fur do you want to do somepin that dangerous?" she curiously inquired, weakening in her resistance, as he was sure she would.

"I never met a ghost. I'd find it interesting to make the acquaintance of one."

He suddenly started as he became aware of Georgiana's presence in the kitchen. She had come in at the door behind him and had walked into the room before he saw her. He cast a hasty glance upon her to find evidence of her having overheard his remark, delivered in his natural tone and language and not in that of his assumed character.

But Georgiana was not observant. She gave no sign of having heard him as, fanning her heated face, she languidly rested on the big wooden settee. Daisy followed and sat down beside her.

"We've decided it's too hot just now, at noon, to walk over to the woods. We're going to bed until it's cooler," Georgiana announced. "Why, what's the matter, Mrs. Morningstar?" she asked, for the landlady still looked pale in spite of the proffered extra dollar.

"Are you and Pete having a row?" asked Daisy, with relish, flinging a greasy cushion off the settee to a chair across the room.

"Och, me and Doc we're havin' a debate! He wants fur to sleep in the haunted room oncet. I ain't in fur it much. But," she said doubtfully, "I guess I must give in, too, seein' he's promised a extry dollar on his board fur the chanct."

The girls stared, puzzled, and Kinross had a look of being cornered. But even in his annoyance at such a "give away" the added liveliness of Georgiana's face in its rare self forgetfulness under her momentary surprise was not lost upon him.

"Board? Does he pay board?" asked Daisy, half reaching for her notebook. "A farmhand isn't boarded."

Mrs. Morningstar was confused. "Och, Doc," she stammered, "how's a body to answer 'em? Well, to be sure," she added, becoming resourceful, "a farmhand's board is counted as part pay."

"How fine of you, Peter," said Georgiana enthusiastically, "to rise above this sordid, superstitious fear! Your spirit of inquiry, too, is fine. I am glad you are undertaking to do this, Peter. I believe we can rise to a plane where fear is entirely eliminated."

"There's a mouse," remarked Peter experimentally, pointing under the settee, and simultaneously the two girls, with genteelly repressed shrieks, sprang to their feet.

"It ain't no such a thing!" Mrs. Morningstar indignantly denied the reflection on her housekeeping. "It ain't no mices in my house. A mousy house —that there I don't have."

Daisy, holding her skirts high enough to reveal her pretty ankles and dainty shoes, and Georgiana, trembling, stood out in the middle of the room.

"Is mice eliminated from that there plane you referred to, missus?" Peter inquired.

Georgiana's smile was wan. "Do you mean to be facetious, Peter?"

"Supposin' the haunted room is—mousy," he suggested.

"The mice are no doubt the only creatures that haunt the place," Georgiana answered, still holding high her skirts.

"You will find out if you try sleepin' there," Mrs. Morningstar warned them.

Daisy dropped her skirts after a cautious glance around her and took up her notebook. "What are the facts about the case?" she asked, with a lawyer-like eye upon Mrs. Morningstar. "I'm awfully stuck on psychic phenomena."

"A mousy house—that there I, don't have."

"I don't know right what you mean," Mrs. Morningstar hesitated. "Is it that you want to know what it makes in the haunted room?"

"Yes. What has been seen there and by whom? And what is the story of the room? Usually there's a romantic legend attached to a place believed to be haunted."

Mrs. Morningstar was usually garrulous enough and liked nothing better than to gossip of her own and her neighbors' affairs to an interested listener. But she did not seem to greet these questions with her usual readiness.

"It don't come easy to me to tell about what happened there, fur all I'm used to it fur some twenty years now. If Eunice wasn't workin' out with pop and Abe this after in the fields over I'd change the subjec'," she said, using the phrase with a self conscious air of employing elegant language, "fur us we don't never talk anything before her about what happened upstairs there; it's near twenty-one years back a'ready. Eunice she was just a little over a year old."

She sat down to tell her story, and Georgiana and Daisy returned to the settee, the latter with her notebook open on her lap.

"We were keepin' hotel here and we had a-many comers and goers. Here one day a couple come, a man and his missus and their baby a year and a half old. They was tony people—that I must give 'em—and they had money a plenty. They sayed they'd stay a while, bein' as they liked my cookin', though to be sure they didn't eat much, neither one of 'em. The missus was always wonderful pale and she never could fetch a smile. She was always settin' and thinkin,' starin' in front of herself and not noticin' no person nor nothin'. She didn't seem to have no heart fur that baby of hern.

"She wouldn't mind, still, that it was settin' on her lap and she'd near leave it slip off. Him and her often had words up in their rooms. They rented two rooms off of us and they furnished 'em grand with such a bookcase and writin' desk and a bedroom suit. Me and pop us we used to listen outside in the hall still. We couldn't hear what they sayed much, but him he'd scold in a low woice, and her she'd cry faintlike so's no one would hear. The mister he used to go in town frequent, if not oftener, and I used to tell pop still, 'You mind if some day he don't come back no more. I kin see it at him how he's tired of her yet. Yes, he'll go off and leave her with that child to keep, now you see oncet if he don't,' I sayed to pop."

"The child was Eunice, I suppose?"

In his interest in her narrative, not merely for itself, but for any light it might throw upon Eunice, Kinross forgot to be Pete and leaned forward across the table, regarding Mrs. Morningstar with a thoughtful frown. The sound of his own voice brought him back to himself, and he again glanced with apprehension at the girls. But they, too, were so interested in the story that even the fact of the farmhand's idling in the kitchen while his employer and Eunice worked in the fields escaped their notice.

"Yes, it was our Eunice," Mrs. Morningstar answered, "but that don't come in yet. I mustn't get ahead of my story. Oncet when I could hear they was scrappin' I peeped in the keyhole—not that I wanted to be inquisitive, but a body likes to know, too, what's goin' on in their own hotel. Well, that there woman could have easy got a divorce cheap if she's of just brang up some remarks where he made."

"What remarks?" inquired Kinross.

"Why," she exclaimed, "he run at her with a razor!"

"Remarks?" he questioned hazily.

"And me, I hollered and run. And it was just the next night the crime was commit. It was the 27th of July. We was called to the room by the screamin' of the little baby, and we had to break the lock, and there we found the woman dead in her bed, lyin' in a pool of blood, and the man he had flew! There was a envelope pinned to the baby with some money in it. We conceited it was meant fur to pay any one where would keep the child. Well, us we didn't give no one else the chancet. Me and pop we took and kep' the child."

"How much money was there?" inquired Kinross.

"That ain't neither here nor there," she answered curtly, coloring and looking uncomfortable. "It wasn't so wonderful much, considerin' all the trouble we had to take raisin' the child and the trouble we're havin' now," she added vindictively, "with her runnin' after our Abe the way she's doin'. To be sure," she conceded, "we didn't raise her the way her mother was raisin' her. I never did see a baby tended the way she done—a clean white dress every day—now mind! Yes, indeed! Oh, that baby mustn't never get dirty when her mother had her! She must be clean all the time and get washed all over every day, mind you, 'stead of oncet a week, like us country people does to our babies. Then she practiced this here hy-geen on it—she must scald the milk to foomgate the germs, or whatever, and wash her mouth and eyes with borax water. You wouldn't believe anybody'd be that dumm to take all that there trouble, would you? But that there's hy-geen. I hear lots of towners believes in this here hy-geen. Well, after we found the dead corp in there I wouldn't do it to sleep at the hotel till after the funeral was. I slep' to the neighbors'. The news of the crime got put out all over the country, and we had a wonderful big funeral. But not one mourner," she added in a shocked tone, "not one crape weil! When there ain't no crape weils it don't remind me of a funeral, ain't not? Well, the preacher he had a wonderful solemn sermont. There was two or three sayed to me afterward how they felt under his sermont, and one sayed how she liked to hear a solemn preachin' like hisn on a funeral so that her heart gets affected.

"As a general I kin stand a good bit. I don't soon go to bed sick, but that there crime sent me to bed fur near a week, with all the work layin'. Pop he was so much fur tellin' all about it to comers and goers, and it would work me up so to hear him come over it all that I used to wish we didn't keep hotel so's there wouldn't be no comers and goers to tell it to."

She paused to take breath, but Kinross was ready with a question to urge her on.

"How do you know that it was not a case of suicide rather than murder?"

"The coroner's jury," replied Mrs. Morningstar, "sayed she didn't succide herself, but was murdered in the first degree."

"It is the murdered woman who haunts the room?"

"I don't know," she answered, turning white again. "I ain't never slep' there. Oncet, before we quit hotelin' and began farmin' this here place, we slept a travelin' man in that there room, and about the middle of the night he waked us all with runnin' through the hall, screechin' he'd saw a ghost. And after that we never put no one in there no more. Their furniture is all there yet too. The neighbors tells us that near every night any person passin' our place late kin see a queer light in the winder of that there room. Our Abe seen it oncet too."

"Peter," Daisy turned eagerly to Kinross, "are you husky enough to sleep in that room? If you are you'll tell us about the ghost, won't you, tomorrow evening—if you meet her?"

"Ain't you got afraid to sleep there now, Doc—Pete—after what I tole you yet?" Mrs. Morningstar asked incredulously.

"I'll tell you tomorrow morning," answered Kinross. "Maybe I'll cut and run, too, like the traveling man. You never can tell what you'll do when you're up against a ghost."

"Say," Mrs. Morningstar suddenly exclaimed, her eyes moving from one to another of her listeners with an anxiety amounting to distress, "look at here. Yous won't speak nothin' to Eunice, will yous, about this here? Us we always kep' it from her. It would be ugly to tell her her pop murdered her mom in the first degree."

"And," thought Kinross, "that her father left a sum of money for her support."

"Doesn't she ever ask questions about herself?" inquired Daisy. "If I were she it wouldn't take me long to get aboard."

"There fur awhile she did," Mrs. Morningstar said. "But us we put her off with just tellin' her her parents left her here a waif."

"If the whole neighborhood knew of it I don't see how you've kept it from her," remarked Georgiana. "Surely some one would be apt to tell her."

"We never let her go much. We kep' her close at home, just so's she wouldn't hear nothin'. We thought it would be so upsettin'."

"To learn how she's been slaving for her living which probably had been paid for," thought Kinross.

"I don' know what's made me speak all this here to you," Mrs. Morningstar continued, with increasing anxiety in her face and voice. "I don't often come over it. I don't like to. But I was took back so with Doc's—Pete's—astin' fur the dare to sleep in that there room that the whole thing come out before I knowed right I was tellin' it. And now mebbe yous will tell Eunice."

Kinross, who was watching the woman attentively, was sure that, judging from her habitual treatment of Eunice, her present intense apprehension was certainly not due to the cause to which she attributed it—tender compassion for the girl. She was evidently holding back something which if known would compromise her. What could it be? He was pretty sure that in spite of their greed neither Mr. nor Mrs. Morningstar would be deliberately dishonest. The Pennsylvania German, however "close," usually has integrity if for no other reason than because of his fear of hell.

"Perhaps," he reflected, "Eunice herself—contradictory and unaccountable as she is in so many respects—knows more about herself than any one suspects."

His lukewarm desire to investigate the haunted room had increased, with his knowledge of its history, to a keen eagerness to get at it, and he determined that that very night should find him in the shut off quarter of the house.

Mrs. Morningstar was now summoned from the room by Ollie's calling to her to "come lay over the dough."

"Gracious," cried Daisy, making a note in her book as the landlady departed reluctantly, "she's going to 'lay over the dough!' No more bread for mine!"

CHAPTER XV.

TEN o'clock that night found Kinross in the haunted bedchamber. He had come to the room without further permission from Mrs. Morningstar than the reluctant half consent he had extracted from her at noon. The subject had not been broached between them again, so he had taken the law into his own hands, and soon after the family retired he carried his kerosene lamp down the long corridor which cut off the haunted part from the rest of the house and reached the fatal room.

He was relieved to find that the door was not locked. Once across the threshold he did not even glance about him until he had carefully closed the door behind him. Then, turning, he raised high his lamp.

The ghost herself, if she appeared in the course of his vigil, would not give him a greater shock of surprise than he received as his eye fell upon the opposite wall of the room. The last thing he would have expected to find in the vicinity of the Morningstar farm confronted him—a bookcase filled with books, a little library of classics, for even across the width of the room he could read the gilt lettered names, Shakespeare, Milton, Spenser, Eliot, Browning and the rest.

BEING CHANGED INTO STORES

Alterations Being Effected at the Commercial House

The Commercial House, which has just been vacated, is undergoing some alterations with the object of making it into a couple of stores. Two large windows will be built in the front on either side of the door, which will remain where it is. The work is being done by Ald. James Graham, the local contractor, and will be pushed along rapidly. It is not known yet who will occupy the premises.

ATTENTION! IMPORTANT

As Friday the 20th inst. has been proclaimed a general holiday, our store will be closed all day. Our customers are therefore requested to send in their fish orders early on Thursday. W. J. OKE, 376 George St. Phone 18.

AN EXTRA WATERING CART AND TEAM WILL BE EMPLOYED

If Necessary, to Keep Down the Dust in the Summer Months—C.P.R. Granted Permission to Build Spur Line at Foot of Simcoe St.

At the meeting of the Board of Works last night Mr. Moore, who lives at the west end of Charlotte street, wanted some means afforded of keeping the dust down. A standpipe had been promised for Gilmour street. Moved by Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the standpipe be supplied by the water commissioners.—Carried.

A letter was read from A. W. Cressman, who found fault with the way the watering was done on the main street. The watering was not done frequently enough to have the dust laid throughout the day. The street should be watered early in the morning and the dust kept down all day as it had a bad effect on the fronts of the stores, and the shoppers were inconvenienced.

Ald. Hicks thought that an extra team and wagon should be employed for two months in the summer. This would shorten the routes of the other carts and provide a better general service. Moved by Ald. Duffus and Duncan, and carried, that the matter be left with the chairman, with authority to get an extra team and cart, if necessary.

The city engineer reported on the gravel it would take for Patterson street. On motion of Ald. Phelan and Graham it was decided that Patterson street should be graded and gravelled where necessary, at a cost not exceeding $138.75 as estimated by the engineer.

The city engineers' request to fill in ditches on Sherbrooke street will be dealt with at a later meeting when full estimates of the cost will be furnished by the city engineer.

The application of the C.P.R. to build a spur line across the front of Simcoe street was granted.

The G.N.W. explained in connection with a request that they remove their poles on George street that they would do so if the city paid the cost—between $600 and $700.

The engineer was instructed to report on the cost of supplying gravel for the two short streets running off Burnham street, and which are used a great deal by the Peterborough Lumber Co.

A request to lower trees on Gilmour street in front of W. W. Johnston's residence was not acted upon.

The chairman stated that Conroy Bros., the contractors for the new Smith street bridge, had offered to take down the old bridge by employing the present gang of men on the work. It was decided on motion of Ald. Phelan and Metheral that the bridge be removed as suggested by Conroy Bros., the city engineer to supervise the work and Mr. W. Martin to keep the time of the workmen.

HENDERSON'S CASE BEING CONSIDERED TO-DAY

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Ont., May 18.—The Justice Department has under consideration to-day the case of Robert Henderson, the 17-year-old youth who is under sentence of death at Peterborough, and for whom the jury added a recommendation of mercy.

Henderson is sentenced to be hanged at the Peterborough gaol on June 23rd, for the murder of Margaret McPherson, the old lady who died as the result of wounds inflicted upon her with an axe in Henderson's hands. The crime was an atrocious one, and under ordinary circumstances the condemned man would have been given no encouragement to hope for executive clemency. At his trial, however, medical experts testified that he was a moral imbecile and this and the fact that he was practically a boy no doubt were the grounds on which the jury were prompted to add the rider for mercy to their verdict.

APPARATUS WAS TO BE USED FOR MAKING LIQUOR

Witness Said he Knew the Law Was Being Broken But Quit Because the Apparatus Would Not Work—Much Evidence in "Illicit Still" Case

Six witnesses were examined at the police court this morning in connection with a charge read against Nat Pearson, who with Richard Bell, was arrested last week, charged with operating an illicit still. The charge was one of "moving a still" and the defendant pleaded not guilty.

Mr. D. O'Connell is representing the Department of Justice and Mr. W. S. Davidson is appearing for the defendants There will be several other charges preferred. The proceedings opened at eleven o'clock and at one o'clock an adjournment was made to 2.15.

The apparatus which was made by Lewis Spry, at his premises on Stewart street, were on exhibition in court. One was a copper boiler without a top and similar to an ordinary large milk can, such as used by butter factories. The other had a top with a spout on either side, and an arrangement inside. Both presented an appearance of having been used for some time.

THE EVIDENCE.

George Cochrane, High County Constable, identified the exhibits in court. He said he got the copper boiler (exhibit 1) on April 5th, at Lewis Spry's Stewart street, and took it to the Inland Revenue office. The other exhibit, a zinc boiler (exhibit 2) was received by him at Buckhorn from Constable Montgomery in April. This was also taken to the Inland Revenue office. In conversation with the defendant Pearson, at Buckhorn, he claimed to know nothing about the boiler. He said he got a milk can at Spry's. The boiler had apparently been placed in a fire for boiling purposes.

James D. Montgomery, a county constable, identified exhibit 2, as the one he secured in the township of Harvey at a camp. The camp was on the boundary line of Andrew Shearer and Nat. Pearson. The date was either the 9th or 11th of April last. It was lying outside the camp. Mr. E. R. Montgomery and his family occupied the camp. Mr. Fred Freeborn had told him that it was there. It was dirty when he got it and showed evidence of dirt and smoke. Mr. Cochrane came and took it away.

W. Rudkins, collector of Inland Revenue, said that licenses for stills for the five counties are issued at the local office. He produced a record of licenses for the past two years and it failed to show where a license had been granted Nat. Pearson. A permit would be necessary to move a still, but none had been issued to the defendant. Witness said he had been collector for the past two years. The two exhibits were brought to the office by Mr. Cochrane, the first part of April and had been in his possession ever since.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams said that Mr. L. Spry came to his office last September in regard to the matter of a claim for payment for copper articles which he made for a man named Freeborn. His bill had been $24, but he had only been paid $6 by Pearson, who took it away on his promise to make good. Spry showed him a paper which he said he obtained from Pearson. Witness said he wrote Mr. Pearson a letter asking him to attend to the payment of the account. There was no response and another letter was sent on October 8th. Some time later Pearson came to the office and said that he had no interest in the matter other than he was a stage driver and acting as a messenger. There was no settlement and on February 28th a suit was entered against Pearson and Freeborn. A few days before the filing of the dispute notice Pearson came to his office and said that he knew Freeborn would pay the amount if given a chance. A note for three months for the amount was taken away by Pearson and after some delay it was received signed by both men, Freeborn and Pearson.

Mr. L. Spry said he was a tinsmith and identified the two exhibits as two articles made by him, about May, 1909. They were made at the order of Frank Freeborn. He came alone and described the kind of article he wanted, but he did not say what it was to be used for. Witness had not made any others. Pearson and Freeborn came for them, two or three weeks after the order was given. It was Pearson who took them away.

Witness was asked by Mr. O'Connel about an inside rim on the lid of the copper boiler, but witness maintained that it was placed there to stiffen the outside rim. Witness did not know what the two spouts, one on either side of the lid, were to be used for. A man giving his name as Bell brought the copper boiler back for alterations. He wanted a hole cut in the top but this was not done. Bell said it did not work right and that "them fellows" did not understand how to work it and he was going to work it himself. He went away and never came back. It remained with him until Mr. Cochrane came and took it away. Witness said he never saw a whiskey still to his knowledge. He had made a "worm" about twenty-five years ago.

Francis J. Freeborn said he lived in Harvey and was a stonemason. He knew Pearson and remembered giving an order to Mr. Spry for some work. Mr. R. Bell gave him the instructions to go and see Spry and ask him to make two cans. He described the two cans and the two articles on exhibition were made according to the description given by Bell. Bell said it could be used for boiling maple syrup or herbs, but witness suspected that it was for the purpose of making liquor. Two weeks later, in company with Pearson, he went to Spry's shop. On the way to the shop, Pearson asked if it would be ready, and he replied that he thought it would be. It was the first conversation he had had with Pearson about the apparatus. Pearson also asked him to pay for it, but witness said he would not. This was in the morning, and after dinner it was decided to go and see Spry. On arriving there Spry went out to a back building and brought the apparatus to the front shop. When Spry was asked about the price he said that he couldn't make it for $20.00 and would have to charge $24.00.

Pearson said he would pay $6.00 and the balance a week from Saturday. He paid the $6.00 and left to go up town. Pearson returned and got the apparatus. Later witness saw the two articles at the camp. In the first place the articles were left in the rig at Pearson's shed. Witness never saw anything manufactured and was not aware of any goods being sold.

His wife had told him that Pearson had visited his home and presenting a note told her to sign his (witnesses's name.) She did this. After Mr. Cochrane came up witness went to see Pearson about it, and he did not deny doing as his wife had stated.

Witness said he knew he was mixed up in an illegal transaction, and for that reason did not make any protest to Pearson about his signature being put on the note. He was willing to pay the full amount and get out of the trouble. He wanted to keep the matter as quiet as possible There had been a discussion on the making of whiskey.

A letter sent to Spry in regard to the two articles was produced and read. Witness said that he thought it was Pearson's daughter who wrote it. He did not know who had signed his name. He was present at the time at Pearson's place.

To Mr. Davidson witness said that he saw Pearson take the apparatus to the camp. It was not tried that day. Later he was present when something was boiled in it, but Pearson wasn't there.

Mr. O'Connell again examined the witness and advised him to tell the whole truth about the matter. In reply to questions the witness said:

Pearson and I knew what the articles were to be used for. Whiskey was to be made. Bell, Pearson and myself were in the scheme. Bell and I were to get half of the proceeds, and Pearson was to buy the liquor. The apparatus was taken out to the camp for the purpose of making liquor but I couldn't say just what material was taken out. It was in one of the cans and was secured at Pearson's. Bell told me that the apparatus did not work as intended. I told Pearson that I wouldn't have anything more to do with it. I knew I was breaking the law, but the reason I quit was because the apparatus would not work. Goodfellow drove out with us the day we took the still to the camp, but he had nothing to do with it.

FINE LECTURE ON THE COMET BY DR. MARSH

The lecture on Halley's comet, given last night by Rev. Dr. Marsh in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, was listened to by a large and interested audience. The slides shown embraced a wide range of subjects, including some excellent ones of the moon craters, and of the larger planets. A very good picture also was shown, exhibiting the wonderful flaming rim of our sun, and the beautiful corona surrounding that orb.

Dr. Marsh stated that one of the theories advanced by scientists for the existence of comets was that they were caused by the fracture of great masses of flaming substance from the sun's rim. He showed some splendid slides of photographs and drawings of comets, amongst others, Biela's, Donati's and Drake's, and also one of Halley, friend of Newton, and discoverer of the comet that bears his name. Slides were shown of Halley's comet as it appeared in modern times, and also a grotesque one of how it appeared in 1066, the year of the Norman Conquest of England. Dr. Marsh evidently is not to be numbered amongst those who fear that the comet is going to work destruction on the earth, and as he is a great deal more versed in the knowledge of astronomy than we are, we can take comfort from adopting his point of view.

Rev. J. G. Potter made an excellent chairman. At the conclusion of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks, proposed by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt and seconded by Dr. Morrison, was unanimously carried.

FAMOUS COMET SCARES

Beginning to-morrow, look for the comet in the western sky after sunset. With atmospheric conditions clear, it should be visible to the naked eye.

By plotting the orbit of the comet which now bears his name, and by showing that some comets at least may as rightly be considered as members of our solar system as Mars, the Earth, Venus and the other planets, Halley forever swept aside the foolish superstition with which comets had previously been hedged. But instead of the idle fear which he thus destroyed, he gave the world more terrible food for thought in the dreadful possibility of a collision between the earth and a comet, a possibility which even the most riotously imaginative of old wives' tales had never conceived. During his cometary investigations he found that one fiery wanderer had approached the earth's orbit within about four thousand miles. If a comet could come as close as that, why not closer still? After a careful consideration of this peril he concluded:—

"If so large a body, with so rapid a motion were to strike the earth—a thing by no means impossible—the shock might reduce this beautiful world to its original chaos."

His calculations were based upon an assumption of cometary masses, quite unjustified, as we have now good reason to know. Still his conjecture is of interest because it was the first of its kind ever made. Halley even thought that the earth had passed through one such encounter at least, with the result that the North Pole had been shifted.

Ever since Halley's time the danger of a cometary collision has engaged not only the scientific but the popular mind. A learned professor, Dr. Whiston, who succeeded Newton at Oxford, went so far as to declare that the deluge had been caused by a comet. No doubt the great rising of the earth's waters with which the near approach of a comet was in that day supposed to be connected, had its origin in the erroneous supposition that a comet was heavier than it really is, and that it could, therefore, exert an attractive influence of corresponding magnitude. At all events, we find that the famous French astronomer, Laplace, was imbued with this idea of a comet's tidal effect, for we find him writing on the possibility of a collision:—

"The seas would abandon their ancient beds and rush toward the new equator, drowning in one universal deluge, the greater part of the human race. We see, then, in effect, why the ocean has receded from the high lands, upon which we find incontestable marks of its sojourn; we see how the animals and plants of the south have been able to exist in the climate of the north, where their remains and imprints have been discovered."

Later, another French astronomer, almost equally famous, the celebrated, Lalande, amplified this gloomy vision by picturing the effect produced by the approach of a very heavy comet, an effect attended by the upheaval of a tidal wave 13,000 feet in height. He painted a dismal scene of terrified humanity climbing the Himalayas, the Alps and the Rocky Mountains in a great planetary rush to escape death from drowning. Before his theory was ever published, the rumour of its purport spread terror through Europe in 1773.

The danger of such an encounter again set the popular imagination aflame in 1832. Certain calculations published by Olbers, showed that on October 29th, 1832, a considerable portion of the nebulous surroundings of Biela's comet would actually sweep over the spot occupied a month later by the earth. It needed no more to set Europe in a ferment. Astronomers after all could not be infallible, so the newspapers said. A trifling oversight might vitiate all mathematical computation. It was not until the learned Arago formally demonstrated that the earth and the comet could by no possibility approach within less than fifty million miles that the fears of the public were allayed.

Similar panics ensued in 1857 and 1872. Curiously enough both of them were fathered by astronomers, who really did make mistakes in their calculations.

Apparently it was Arago who first mathematically computed what chance the earth has of ramming a comet. He thought that there was just one in two hundred and eighty-one million. According to Robinet this is equivalent to stating that a collision is likely to occur about once in fifteen million years. A more recent estimate made by Prof. Wm. H. Pickering, of Harvard University, seems to indicate that an encounter with some part of a comet's head may occur in four million years. He argues that since life has existed in the earth for one hundred million years at least, the earth must have been hit more than once by a comet, evidently without producing any serious damage.

The possibility of such an encounter will be brought home to us to-night when the earth will pass through the tail of Halley's comet and the head will be less than fifteen million miles away, a distance, which, in the vastness of the universe, is less than the distance between a man's two eyes. Perhaps that impending approach is responsible for the many letters which are now pouring in upon the distracted directors of astronomical observatories, letters which anxiously ask whether the earth will really be destroyed and which indicate that the seed sown over two centuries ago by Edmund Halley has borne fruit.

BUGGY WRECKED AND HORSE BADLY INJURED IN RUNAWAY

On Lakefield Road Yesterday Afternoon—Animal Fell Exhausted on Simcoe St. and Was Taken to Veterinary Surgeon's—Lakefield Liveryman Wants Damages

Mr. Hendren, the Lakefield liveryman, has sustained a serious loss through an injury to a horse belonging to him. Yesterday a couple of riverdrivers hired a horse and rig from him, saying that they intended driving to Peterborough. The men had reached the second lock on the way down when the horse in some manner became startled, and broke loose from the rig, completely demolishing it, and the horse itself sustaining very serious injuries, which will probably result fatally. The animal is in charge of Dr. Johnston, suffering from an injured joint in the hind quarters, and also numerous deep cuts about the body.

Yesterday afternoon about 4.30 the horse fell, completely exhausted, at the corner of Simcoe and Water streets, and was brought by Mr. I. Eastwood, proprietor of the Palace hotel, to Dr. Johnston's surgery. The horse fell against the pavement, running through Ashburnham, and sustained serious injuries. There is a possibility that it fell several times during its wild career towards the city.

THE C.P.R.'S OBSERVATION OF THE DAY OF THE FUNERAL

Montreal, May 17—When the clocks strike three next Friday afternoon in Montreal the entire system of the Canadian Pacific from coast to coast will be shut down for three minutes as a silent tribute to the memory of the dead king. Not a wheel [illegible] not a propeller will revolve, either on lake or sea, during those three minutes, and the entire day will be given over to the thousands of employees as far as possible in order that they may join in the national mourning. The hour of 3 corresponds with the time the cortege leaves Westminster Hall on its long progress through the shrouded streets of London on the way to Paddington station and the Royal tomb at Frogmore. The action of the C. P. R. has no precedent in Canadian railway annals, and is a unique tribute of respect.

MILITIA ORDERS FOR DAY OF THE KING'S FUNERAL

Headquarters,
Peterborough,
May 19th, 1910.

Orders by the officer commanding Peterborough garrison:

No. 1.—The various corps and detachments constituting the Peterborough garrison will parade at the armories on Friday, May 20th, 1910, at 11.45 a.m., for the purpose of hearing read the proclamation set forth in Militia Order No. 177 detail May 9th, 1910, and participate in such other ceremonies as may be detailed in connection with the funeral of his late Majesty King Edward VII.

No. 2.—The above corps and detachments will also parade at the armories at 10 a.m. on the same day for the purpose of attending the the memorial service.

A. STEVENSON,
Lieut.-Col. commanding the Peterborough garrison.

It has been found necessary, in order to protect the greens and fair greens of the Peter borough Golf Club Grounds, to forbid further trespassing on the premises. Hereafter the public, with the exception of members, are warned against trespassing under penalty of prosecution. 3d

WILL CONDUCT NEEPAWA HOTEL

Mr. D. N. King the Popular Norwood Hotelman Has Purchased the Hotel Hamilton

In the departure of Mr. D. N. King for Neepawa, Man., Norwood will lose a thoroughly competent and obliging hotelman. Mr. King has purchased and will be proprietor of the Hotel Hamilton, a largely patronized and modernly appointed hostelry at Neepawa and with his family leaves Norwood for the western town to-morrow.

Up to the time of the disastrous fire which destroyed his premises, Mr. King was proprietor of King's hotel at Norwood.

SERVICE AT ST. LUKE'S AT 9.30

The memorial service to be held at St. Luke's church on Friday in response to the wish of His Majesty King George, as far as the Church of England is concerned, will be held at 9.30 instead of 10 o'clock, so as not to interfere with the union service, the hour of which has been put at 10.30 instead of 11 o'clock.

BIG DISCOVERY IN MUSHROOMS

Mr. W. A. Edwards, manager of the Crystal, stepped lively into the Review sanctum to-day with two glorious mushrooms in a large paper bag. Other than the fact that he got them this morning, Mr. Edwards would give no information concerning his find. He refused to reveal the location of the happy hunting grounds, as he wants to reserve it for his own selfish purposes.

He states, however, that the new found harvest field contains more mushrooms than the north country does cobalt pickings.

SIX CARS ON A RUNAWAY JAUNT

This morning at four o'clock or thereabouts, six Grand Trunk box cars which had been left standing over night at the top of the grade, behind the Quaker Oats Co., slipped their brakes in some manner and came down the slope at quite a speed. Fortunately there were no other cars on the track or a serious collision might have occurred. After running through the elevator gates at the back of the building, the cars came to a standstill a little further on, without causing any damage.

SEVEN MILES OF PEOPLE WAITING

Special to the Review.

London, May 18.—At four o'clock this afternoon the line waiting outside Westminster Hall to view King Edward's body, extended seven miles and they were six or seven abreast. Not half can possibly view the remains before the hall closes to-night, although they are being rushed past the bier at the rate of twenty thousand an hour. Thousands stood in the rain all night and dozens were removed in ambulances.

NEW PLAYER FOR THE BAND

Mr. Thomas Barker, of Galt, an E flat clarionet player, arrived in the city to-day and will be a valuable acquisition to the band. Mr. Barker is a splendid musician and played for a number of years in the regular service in India.

A full attendance of the members of the band is looked for at the rehearsal to-night at 8 o'clock, when Mr. Barker will be welcomed by his future associates.

24th Battery C. F. A.

The Battery will parade at the Armories on Friday at 9.30 sharp, 20th inst. A salute of 101 minute guns will be fired.

Members not having uniforms may procure same this evening, 18th inst., and also to-morrow evening, 19th inst., at the hour of 8 o'clock, on each day at the Armories, upon application to the Commanding Officer.

By order,
T. W. H. TAYLOR, Major
Commanding 24th Battery C.F.A.

PARADE OF PLAYERS BEFORE THE BIG GAMES

Arrangements have been completed for the big parade which will be held in connection with the opening ceremonies of the City Baseball League on Saturday afternoon. The players of the four clubs will meet at the new T.A.S. rooms on Simcoe street, at 1.30 o'clock in uniform and the procession headed by an automobile containing Ald. Duffus, Bradburn and Buller and Mr. H. A. Yenney, president of the league, will march to George street up to Hunter and east on Hunter to the Riverside grounds. It is important that all players be on hand at 1.30 o'clock sharp so that there will be no delay in calling the first game.

After a short workout by the T.A.S. and West Ends, who open the league, Aldermen Duffus, as twirler, Ald. Bradburn as batter and Ald. Buller as catcher, will perform their duties and the big doings will follow.

The Date is May 21st.

MUCH UNCERTAINTY AS TO HOLDING OF BIG FIGHT

Langford Beat Al Kubrak--Ketchel Won From Flynn—Gotch and Zyibscko Will Wrestle

San Francisco, May 17.—With the selection of Promoter Tex Rickard to preside over the Jeffries-Johnson battle on July 4th, the sporting fraternity barely had time to draw a breath of relief to-day before ominous rumors of trouble at Emeryville plunged them into uncertainty and apprehension regarding the scene of the championship contest.

A widely-circulated report from Oakland that the fight promoters have been warned that the authorities may not permit the contest to be held at Emeryville proved to be founded on something more tangible than idle gossip, for District Attorney William Donohue admitted that he was preparing an opinion on the law covering the law on right to hold the fight, and Sheriff Barnett stated he was awaiting the verdict of Donohue.

The most disquieting of the many rumors is that Thomas H. Williams, president of the California Jockey Club, who controls the Emeryville race track, where it has been planned to build a mammoth arena for the coming battle, has withdrawn his support from the pugilistic enterprise, and has informed Promoter Rickard that he must find some other place in which to bring the fight off. When asked to confirm or deny the rumor Williams refused to do either, saying that he did not care to discuss the matter at all.

The possibility of an enforced change of location for the holding of the contest has turned speculation to San Francisco itself, and many profess to believe that the promoters have turned their attention to this city. It is pointed out that two excellent locations for staging the big bout are to be had within the limits of San Francisco, where no hostility from the city officials would be encountered.

The choice of Rickard for referee following turbulent incidents enacted at yesterday's conference is construed by many as merely a tentative selection, to give the fighters a chance to get together on some one else.

LANGFORD WON THE FIGHT.

New York, May 17.—Sam Langford, the Boston negro, punished Al Kubiak, the Michigan heavyweight, so severely to-night that the referee was forced to stop a schedule ten-round bout at the Fairmount Athletic Club in the second round.

Kubiak outweighed the black by at least 40 pounds, but the shifty negro scored with such terrific body blows that the white man suffered keenly. In the second round he floored Kubiak for the count of four, and the crowd called to have the bout stopped.

KETCHEL BEAT FLYNN.

Boston, Mass., May 17.—Stanley Ketchel knocked out James (Porky) Flynn of Boston, in the third round of a scheduled twelve-round bout at the Armory Athletic Association to-night.

WILL MEET IN CHICAGO

Chicago, May 17.—It was announced to-night that the Gotch-Zybszko wrestling match will positively be held here on Memorial Day. If it is unable to get a permit through the courts, it is stated the bout will be put on at the old Harlem race track, which is outside the city limits.

MAY GIVE WAY TO YOUNGSTER

Chicago, May 17.—The present illness of Manager Frank Chance, of the Cubs, and the good playing of Fred Luderus, his understudy, at first base, may lead to one of the most radical changes that have been made since Chance took the management of the west side team and began winning pennants. It may lead to Luderus being placed on the team as regular first baseman.

Although the peerless leader is not eager to desert his favorite position, it is believed that the time for him to join the ranks of the bench managers is close at hand. He is not through as a player by any means, but the task of managing the team while playing an infield position has become so great that he may yet decide to turn over the sack to the efficient substitute.

Chance values the services of Luderus highly and predicts that he will become the best first baseman in the country. When the youngster broke into the major league late in the season of 1909 he made a place for himself immediately. Chance is in need of a rest, and so long as Luderus does his work on the field the manager need be in no haste to get back into the game.

There is not a playing manager in the American league, and only two in the National, Fred Clarke and Frank Chance being the only men who manage major league teams and play, too.

It is known that Clarke is seeking a left fielder to take his place. He says the task of running a team and playing is too severe. But the strain is even greater upon an infielder, and that is why Chance will create no surprise if he keeps on the bench and lets Luderus attend to first base.

Y.M.C.A SPORTS

The tennis tournament in connection with the Y.M.C.A. is coming along very satisfactorily. The teams are divided into two classes, A and B, and some interesting games are being played. The following are the names of the players in the games yet to be played:—

CLASS A.

A. Myers and H. B. Collier.
Dr. McPherson and F. Cressman.
G. Miller and F. D. Bennet.
F. D. Kerr and S. Hall.
H. Myers and W. H. Collier.
Allan and W. Richardson.

CLASS B

L. Turner and R. Glover.
B. Sharpe and J. J. Thompson.
S. Canniff and A. A. Perrin.
M. McCarroll and G. Martin.
D. H. Downie and C. E. Sisson.
Hoyt and R. Taylor.
Dawe and Gilbert.
Trebilcock and D. Ross.

Those wishing to reserve the courts for private games may do so by telephoning the physical director.

The Y.M.C.A. will hold a bicycle race on Saturday from Nassau to Nicholls Oval.

The trials for the relay race for boys will be held on the 27th of May. All contestants are expected to turn out for practice.

SPORTING NOTES

The standing of the teams in the senior school league is:—

LEAGUE NOTES

Yebbie Flaherty may be sent on the mound to dish up the slants for T.A.S. when the team takes the field against the West Ends' Saturday afternoon at Riverside.

The fans can help a whole lot by taking to the grandstand, which will cost five cents extra.

Every Saturday will be ladies' day.

The practice game, which was to have been played at the oval this evening between the West Ends and the Strathconas, has been called off.

The West Ends will practice at Riverside Park Friday morning at ten o'clock. A captain will be appointed and the team picked for Saturday's game.

No charge for the fair rooters.

The kids need not bother taking the rear entrance. One small nickel will gain a permit to pass the gatekeeper.

Ald. Buller guarantees to pick off the benders from Ald. Duffus anywhere within twenty-five feet. Ald. Bradburn also claims that he will connect with them.

Fair Fan.—No, certainly not. Bill Shaw has no serious intentions whatever.

All managers should see that their certificates are signed, as called for in the constitution.

Two games for fifteen cents! Who wouldn't be on hand for the excitement.

The West Ends, T.A.S. and Strathconas will wear new uniforms.

The May Rod and Gun

The May Rod and Gun

While fishing occupies prominent positions in the May number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont., there is no lack of variety, articles appealing to sportsmen of all tastes appearing in this issue. Anglers who are arranging their spring outings will find ample provision for their entertainment and will revel in the stories of good fishing trips told by their fortunate brethren. Mr. Bonnycastle Dale's studies of Wild Ducks in Canada will interest a vast number of people, and sportsmen particularly will find their knowledge of a fine game bird much increased by a perusal of this article. Catching Kids of Mountain Goats and White Water Men of the St. Maurice are stories none should miss. Big game hunting and protective work receive much attention, while camping and mountaineering have their delights pleasantly pictured. For variety and interest the number is excellent throughout and sportsmen should see to it that [illegible] accompanies them on every trip.

No Harm Done Yet

Up to the time of going to press the Review office was not annihilated by the comet. The earth will not be free from danger until after twelve o'clock, midnight, however, and there is still a possibility that there will be no issue of the Morning Times tomorrow.

Honor.

"Some men," said Andrew Carnegie at a dinner, "have very queer ideas of honor.

"I was once riding from Pittsburg to Philadelphia in the smoking compartment of a Pullman. There were perhaps six of us in the compartment, smoking and reading. All of a sudden a door banged, and the conductor's voice cried:

"'All tickets, please!'

"Then one of the men in the compartment leaped to his feet, scanned the faces of the rest of us and said slowly and impressively:

"'Gentlemen, I trust to your honor.'

"And he dived under the seat and remained there in a small, silent knot till the conductor was safely gone."—Minneapolis Journal.

INTERESTING and Instructive Stories of How Some Leaders in Finance, Commerce and Industry Humbly Started on the Way That Led to Eminence

POVERTY is a prison while you are in it, and a blessing—disguised—after you have escaped from it. Given a choice most of us would prefer to be born with a "golden spoon." Nevertheless the trite fact that the men of achievement began poor remains one of the truest of the copybook sayings, and one which history is constantly repeating. Self-made men are as common in New York city to-day as in the time of the first Astor, and for the most part they recall with pride what they endured at the outset of a successful career. It is the fault of the reader if the story proves unprofitable.

A clerkship in a country store, the smaller and more remote the store the better, has been a very common stepping stone among successful merchants. One who reads the biographies of the great merchant princes of the country is almost convinced that a man is greatly handicapped who has not one day swept out one of these modest establishments. Mr. John Archbold, of Standard Oil fame, is a conspicuous example of this numerous company. Born of Scotch parents in Steubenville, Ohio, about sixty-six years ago, young Archbold found himself while a mere boy face to face with a very practical question. He had received some schooling in Titusville, Pa. Without capital or friends in the great outside world who might assist him his opportunities were naturally limited. From the very first his ambition was to enter trade. His work in the country store was at first of the humblest nature, as that of boys in country stores is likely to be. His genius even in such narrow boundaries soon asserted itself and he was rapidly advanced.

Meanwhile his Scotch thrift had led him to amass from his limited income a small working capital. When oil was struck in this region young Archbold invested his savings in the oil fields and made money from the first. His capital and his influence grew rapidly. The grocery store was abandoned.

When the Rockefellers came to absorb the small dealers throughout Pennsylvania Mr. Archbold's interests were large enough to attract their attention, while his record recommended him as a man worth having among their forces. Mr. Archbold's rise within the great Trust has been phenomenal. To-day his great wealth and influence in many lines of activity and his many benefactions to charity and education have made his name familiar the world over.

Vreeland a Grocer's Boy.

Mr. Herbert Harold Vreeland, president of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, a congeries of companies that he was largely instrumental in uniting and converting to the most modern system of electric traction, is fond of telling how he rose from the ranks. He was the son of a preacher—poor, of course—in the Mohawk Valley, and the education he was to get from schools was practically over at thirteen, when he started driving a grocer's wagon. His first railroad job was loading gravel on construction trains of the Lake Shore Railroad. Switch tender and tie inspector were subsequent employments; then at eighteen he entered the service of the Long Island Railroad and passed through every grade of the transportation department to freight and passenger conductor.

The New York and Northern Railroad offered him better chances of advancement, if not more wages, and he went with that company as conductor. Before he resigned to connect himself with the street railway system of the metropolis Mr. Vreeland had advanced to be general manager of the New York and Northern. This was in 1893, and about that time Mr. Vreeland met Mr. William C. Whitney.

The association of these men was profitable to both, but, as Mr. Vreeland says, particularly to himself, for no one could know Mr. Whitney and remain provincial. Broadest, most far-reaching plans were his province, and he could impress them on people very forcibly. In the younger railroad man he found welcome attributes—the power of strong common sense and an unswerving will. That he was far from being a satellite of anybody, however, was quickly and easily proved by Mr. Vreeland. Because he came up through every grade he knows what he is doing when he makes rules for discipline and system. Slack handed people, inefficient employes and a wide range of uncertain characters cannot fool a man who has been "through it all" before them.

Steinmetz's Beginning.

In the electrical world to-day there is no more vital force, no inventive genius more universally admired than Charles P. Steinmetz. As the head and universal genius of the General Electric Company, with more than eighteen thousand trained men working out his ideas, his influence can scarcely be estimated. Other men have longer lists of patents to their credit, but no one has his finger in so many electrical pies. His rise from the lowest ranks of electrical workers has been phenomenal.

Born in Breslau, Germany, in 1866, Steinmetz emigrated early to America. On landing in New York he crossed the Brooklyn Bridge, sought a cheap lodging house and then started out without friends or money to find work. After days of search Steinmetz entered the General Electric Company. His first position was little above that of a common laborer. Four years later he was the head of the experimental laboratory, with a salary he was permitted to name himself.

A few years later, when the present company was incorporated, with all its enormous interests, the directors announced that they considered Steinmetz their most valuable asset. In addition to his bewildering round of duties Steinmetz finds time to lecture in Union College, as well as to write a number of books which are considered authoritative in the world of electricity.

Shoeless Hudson Maxim.

Very significant facts which point to a boyhood of pathetic struggle are those which Hudson Maxim gives about his early career. He was nine years of age before he could read or write and he was fifteen before he had a pair of shoes on his feet. When it is remembered that these early days were passed in Maine, where the winter climate is rigorous, one has a modern instance of the survival of the fittest. Scarcely fifteen years after the acquirement of the first pair of shoes the young man was offering samples of smokeless powder to his government.

The first money he earned was by teaching a school the bad boys of which had whipped their previous teachers. When Maxim applied for the post the trustees passed his claim to knowledge in the three R's, but asked him:—

"Can you wrestle?"

When the answer was in the affirmative they engaged him, and their choice turned out happily. There were not any boys big enough or bad enough to throw out of a job a youth who needed the wages so badly as Maxim did. He started in to teach himself along with the other scholars, for he says:—

"I had ideas in my head, and in order to give birth to them I felt deeply the necessity of education and discipline."

From Maine to Massachusetts and from the school desk to the printer's form. At Pittsfield, in 1883, he was printing and publishing subscription books. All this time, though, he felt like a round peg in a square hole; he had a bent toward the mechanical services, and he read, experimented and attended lectures, so that in two or three years he had patented several inventions along the lines of ordnance and explosives. He was the first maker of smokeless powder in this country and the first [illegible] ment for trial.

Eight years ago he sold to the United States the formula of Maximite, which was the first high explosive to be fired through heavy armor plate. Stabillite, a smokeless powder, and Motonite, a new self-combustive material, followed. The boy who wouldn't be thrown out of a job grew into the man who adds to his other capacities the genius of versatility. He has been able to retain pre-eminence among changing conditions.

"Bill" Corey, of Homestead.

From the great army of men enlisted in the steel industries about Pittsburg a surprising number have risen from the ranks to positions of great wealth and influence. Twenty-five years ago there was nothing to distinguish William E. Corey—"Bill" Corey, as he was known—from thousands of other workers in the Homestead plant. He received $1 a day for his services and he was obliged to work very hard for it. He was the son of a hard working coal dealer and was obliged to shift for himself very early in his career.

From the first, however, he had ambitions above his work, and for several years found time and energy to attend night school. Here he studied chemistry and laid the foundations for his rapid advancement. His talents were soon recognized and he was promoted to be a foreman. He had the reputation of getting more out of his men than any other foreman in the works. Later his work attracted the attention of Andrew Carnegie and he was rapidly advanced. His position to-day at the head of the Steel Trust is one of the most responsible and exacting as well as lucrative in the entire industrial world.

Schwab's $1 a Day.

A dollar a day was also the first wage received by Charles M. Schwab from a steel company. It was for driving stakes, and he was then a strong youth of nineteen. He had earned money before then working for neighboring farmers at his home in Lovette, in the Alleghany Mountains, and driving a coach which carried the mails to and from Cresson, Pa.

His earlier days then were those of a hardy, intelligent country boy. In his family surroundings there was plainness without poverty. He went to school—good schools, he has said—and at sixteen he was graduated from St. Francis' College. From these schools young Schwab attained quite as much as could have been expected, but no more. There were books to be read, and he read them; but his tastes were not those of a student of books. In him there was an element of dash, vigor and enterprise which was at variance with scholarly ways.

In close alliance with the impetuosity of his temperament was another strong characteristic which quickly showed itself. This was the disposition to study and the power to rapidly master the means of developing a large manufacturing industry. Already he saw what the steel future was likely to be, and he intended somehow to ally himself with it. The best means of doing this, he decided, was to become a civil engineer.

To Captain Jones, one of the superintendents in the Edgar Thomson Steel Works of the Carnegie company, he confided his ambition. The result was the dollar a day referred to. It was a most modest beginning, but in a year he was Captain Jones' chief assistant, in seven years he was chief of the engineer's department, and under his direction the famous plant at Homestead was built. In 1892 he was superintendent of the Homestead works—a mighty stride to have been made in a little more than ten years.

While he was making it—and, in fact, dating from almost the first day of his menial employment with the steel company—the strongest point of his character began to manifest itself. This was his marvellous capacity for winning the confidence of the men who came in contact with him. His way of meeting people was hearty and inspiring. His aims were open and he usually succeeded in getting others to hope for success for him. Meantime he never swerved from his ambition; he had determined to perfect himself as a producer of steel, and his ambition grew as he was compelled to measure himself with other men.

Everybody knows how the country boy succeeded—how he became president of the Carnegie company in 1897 and the first president of the merged corporations, the United States Steel Corporation, in 1901. He is now president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and worth it is probable he does not know himself how many millions, as he is as active in philanthropy as in business.

Blacksmith Preacher.

The blacksmith's forge has graduated more than one man known to fame, but it is scarcely the schooling one would expect to develop a clergyman of the highest intellectual attainments. Dr. Robert Collyer, a name to be reckoned with in any history of the intellectual life of the country, worked for years as a blacksmith.

Many persons of wealth have worked at the forge for amusement or exercise, and there is the famous precedent of several kings of France; but with young Collyer a living had to be earned and his physical strength determined his work.

His parents, natives of Yorkshire, England, had sent him to school, but he was obliged to leave when he was only eight years old. After that he found time to attend night school for two winters, but here his formal academic education ceased. The young blacksmith came to America in 1850, when he became a local preacher in the Methodist Church. Something of the energy and directness of his early occupation crept into his style and method and he soon attracted attention. After several years spent in Philadelphia the young preacher went to Chicago, later to return at the height of his popularity to settle permanently in New York.

From Printer to College President.

Among college presidents or professors the self-made man, in the literal meaning of the phrase, is necessarily very rare. It will come as a surprise to New Yorkers to hear that President John Houston Finley, of the College of the City of New York, may be included in this classification. The long training necessitating college, university and post-graduate courses forms a wellnigh hopeless barrier for the poor or even moderately prosperous boy. Finley was born on a remote farm near Ridge Coff, Ill., about fifty years ago.

He was brought up on the farm, only enjoying such limited educational advantages as the local public school allowed. On entering the high school he managed to support himself with great effort, working in his spare hours at anything which promised an immediate return. Knox College, at Galesburg, was his goal, but at that time seemed unattainable. His principal income during this period was his wages as a printer. He kept at his task, however, and in the last year of the college course he became the principal of his old high school. From Knox College he proceeded to Johns Hopkins University, and seven years later, in 1892, he was called to the presidency of Knox College. Later he left Knox to take the chair of politics which had been created for him, at Princeton. His selection for the presidency of the College of the City of New York quickly followed.

Wonder at Ryan's Career.

Fortune is the middle name of Thomas F. Ryan, and it has served him well. Orphaned at the age of five, brought up by a grandmother, with little chance for schooling, he left his meagre inheritance, an unproductive farm on the eastern slope of the Blue Mountains, in Virginia, and wellnigh penniless sought employment in Baltimore. From door to door he went, rebuffed everywhere, but still persistent, until Mr. John S. Barry, a dry goods commissioner, heard the boy's story and gave him work. Modest beginnings were these indeed; so modest that they may be called none at all.

The business training gained under Mr. Barry and the knowledge attaching to it were invaluable to young Ryan. He assimilated it quickly, all the more that his employer, recognizing his clerk's capacity, delighted in guiding his development. He did not urge him to remain in Baltimore when, foreseeing a larger opportunity in New York city, Mr. Ryan removed there in 1870.

Four years later saw him a member of the Stock Exchange, and the older members were blind indeed who did not see in him a vigorous newcomer. The operations on 'Change offered few features with which he was not familiar. Such others as turned up from time to time he mastered without an effort, for all their details came to him as if he had been through similar crises before.

In his first year on 'Change Mr. Ryan showed no characteristic more marked than this of perpetual readiness, almost impossible to be surprised, and it had a foundation in the iron firmness, the unswerving courage, with which he was prepared to grapple and overcome the perils and emergencies of the street.

For ten years he continued in the brokerage business, until a meeting between him and Mr. W. C. Whitney widened his field. This was in 1886, when both gentlemen were engaged in consolidating the various street railways of New York city. From this association came Mr. Whitney's celebrated dictum, which may serve as a biography of T. F. Ryan:—

"He's the most adroit, the surest and most noiseless man I've ever known."

Very few New Yorkers outside of those who pay particular attention to corporation interests and securities know anything about Mr. Ryan. Society knows him not at all; quietly—"noiselessly," to adopt Mr. Whitney's word—he has built himself a gigantic fortune in the metropolis, and there he lives freer from social cares than when he is visiting Oak Ridge, the place he built on the site of his birthplace in Virginia. That is what he likes—to be let alone. It was a characteristic in his early modest days in Baltimore, and his habits have not changed.

Loree's Birth and Rise.

Following a recent rumor of the retirement of E. H. Harriman from the active control of his great railroad interests the wiseacres of Wall street generally agreed that his mantle would fall upon the shoulders of Leonor F. Loree. The two men are close friends and have been intimately associated in many great undertakings. Outside of the world of finance and railroads Mr. Loree is not well known. His position as president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad and his influence in trusts and corporations too numerous to mention here make him, however, one of the most powerful figures in the street.

Mr. Loree's first work in the railroad business was as chainman in a civil engineer corps, when he struggled over the mountains of Pennsylvania. He was advanced, however, until he became foreman of a gang.

When the news of the Johnstown flood was flashed to the railroad authorities Loree, by a lucky chance, was but a few miles from the scene. He was put in charge of the work of establishing communication with the stricken valley. Bridges had to be built, new roadbeds formed and track laid, with the relief trains waiting impatiently behind him and the world counting the hours. Loree has ever since been known as "the man who made good at Johnstown."

In an incredibly short time trains were running into the city. It is said that throughout this period he spent every hour of daylight on the work, every hour of the night in planning the work, while on Sunday he attended to his correspondence. Still comparatively a young man—he is but fifty-four years old—Mr. Loree is destined to be one of the most inconspicuous railroad men of his time.

Many of the guests of the Hoffman House will recall, some twenty years back, a bright, obliging hall boy named Regan. He had already served a brief apprenticeship in his chosen profession in a small hotel down on Long Island, and if he brought to his work limited experience he had an unbounded ambition. He did not long remain a hall boy, but was advanced to a position in the then famous barroom of the hotel. He rose rapidly from one position to another in this department until he was placed in full charge. To-day James B. Regan attributes his great success in hotel management at the Knickerbocker and elsewhere to the fact that he served in every position in a hotel from the bottom up. He is to-day but forty-seven years of age, all of which have been spent in and about New York.

MORAL INSTRUCTION IN ENGLISH SCHOOLS

A Movement Begun in America Twelve Years Ago by Professor Felix Adler.

London, May 17.—Moral instruction in schools is a comparatively new wrinkle in the English system of education. Recently, moreover, the moral training of children has become a subject of deep interest to parents as well as educators. From the strong support the Moral Instruction League is receiving in London it is safe to assume that this movement which began twelve years ago in America with Professor Felix Adler will be identified as an English educational project.

"Everywhere people are asking themselves whether the moral aim in education might not be somewhat more definitely and consciously present in school work." Harold Johnson, secretary of the Moral Instruction League, said.

"Of course, it is agreed that the best moral influence in education is the personality of the teacher, and next to that, in some types of schools, at least, the corporate life of the school. Those who realize the motive power of ideas and ideals are alive to the fact that these indirect influences for good may be enormously aided, reinforced, and rationalized by suitable instruction. I don't mean merely incidental instruction, such as may arise out of the incidents of school life, but instruction based on a definite scheme in the mind of the teacher. A belief in the superior value of the yeacher's personal influence is not incompatible with the use of fresh instruction.

"In what may be called the minor moralities of life, habits of courtesy and the like, the use of direct systematic lessons is of distinct advantage.

"Many people seem to have an idea that the teaching will be badly done; that the lessons will be uninteresting, abstract, theoretical, or that they will encourage morbid introspection or hypocrisy. It ought to be enough to say that such objections are based on a false estimate of the character of our teachers."

Mr. Johnson has discovered that of the 327 local education authorities in England and Wales, over 100 have taken definite action in providing for moral instruction in their schools. The action taken varies from the provision of systematic and graded moral instruction on the basis of a syllabus, to mere exhortation on the part of the local education authority, urging teachers to give their most careful attention to moral instruction, without furnishing specific directions concerning it.

About 60 of the local education authorities have provision in their schools for more or less systematic moral instruction; of these about 40 have a time set apart for moral instruction and about 50 have a detailed syllabus in connection with it.

From a donor in the United States who wishes to remain anonymous, the league recently received a handsome sum that will go far to insure a more favorable financial report for this year.

Mr. Jos. Fitzpatrick, of Norwood, was in town on Sunday last.

Mrs. J. Cowan, of Madoc, is visiting in town.

Mr. Thos. Falkner, who was operated on for appendicitis recently, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home.

Mr. Frank Brinton is very seriously ill.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's church, held their weekly meeting at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Black on Wednesday, when a report of last week's general conference in Toronto was presented by the Havelock delegates.

Miss Grace Foster, of Norwood, was in town on Sunday.

Mrs. F. Coon visited friends in Peterborough last week.

Mr. Joseph Knox was in Peterborough last Friday.

Mrs. Jas. Fowler and children are visiting friends in Peterborough.

Miss Jennie Barlow was in Peterborough on Saturday last.

Mr. Ross McPherson, of the Bank of Toronto staff, Barrie, spent Sunday in town.

Mrs. Graham, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Jas. Campbell, has returned to her home in Toronto.

Mrs. Rogers and children, of Norwood, spent Sunday in Town.

Mrs. Kneirwasser, who has been visiting Havelock friends, returned to Ottawa on Monday.

Miss A. Reazin, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. T. Andrews, for the past few months, has returned to her home in Creemore.

Mr. Jno. Richards has completed his new barn on his lot on Ottawa street.

The girls of the senior room of the public school have organized a basket-ball team.

Mr. Jno. Seeney, of town, has been appointed agent for this district for the Chase Bros. Nursery Co.

Mr. Jas. White has moved into the house vacated by Mrs. Jas. Griffith.

The C.P.R. have men engaged in painting the station, freight sheds and fences, which is making a great improvement in the general appearance.

Mr. Jake Reid has purchased the residence of Mr. S. Delong, on Ontario street, and will move in next week.

The Girls' Guild of St. John's church held a meeting at the residence of Mrs. (Dr.) Holdcroft on Tuesday last.

Mr. Andrew Methison had men engaged last week in loading several cars of wood and lumber for shipment.

Mrs. S. Delong and children will leave next week for Seattle, Wash., to join Mr. Delong, who went out last September, and who has secured a good position on the railroad there.

Mr. J. V. A. Coon's horse, while standing at the rear of the store on Saturday morning, became frightened and made a record dash across two lots, but its flight was stopped by the C.P.R. fence into which the horse dashed with considerable speed, throwing itself back in the ditch with the delivery rig on top of it. The horse was soon extracted from the heap, and found to be very little injured, although the harness showed the effects of the struggle.

Dr. Holdcroft, of town, was very unfortunate last week in losing his horse, which was a very valuable animal.

The collector started out this week collecting the village dog taxes.

Mr. H. T. Andrews is having the interior of the store vacated by Mr. J. W. Bryans repainted.

Mr. Jack Parcels of town, while working at Tiffin Station, on Wednesday, had his left wrist very badly sprained and it will be some time before he will be able to use the injured member. He was engaged in loading wood in a car when he tripped and fell, dropping several feet and alighting on his wrist.

The churches of town were very appropriately draped on Sunday in honor of our dead King, and the local clergy spoke briefly on his life.

Public service in honor of the late King will be held in the town hall on Friday morning at ten o'clock. The hall is being draped for the occasion.

Large congregations greeted Rev. A. E. Camp at both services in the Presbyterian church on Sunday last. Mr. Camp, now situated at Sault Ste. Marie, was a former pastor of the local church and the large number who attended the services shows the high esteem in which he is held by the people of Havelock and the surrounding district.

Mrs. Geo. Fountain passed away at Midland, Ont., on Wednesday, May 10th, at the age of 33 years. She was well known in Havelock and Belmont and besides a husband and six children she leaves to mourn her loss her mother, Mrs. Caleb Bannon, of Belmont, and three brothers and three sisters, namely: Thos., Caleb and Wm. Bannon, and Mrs. Jas. McCutcheon, of Belmont; Mrs. Wm. Hogg and Mrs. Jas. Sexsmith, of town. The funeral will take place on Wednesday.

LIVE NOTES FROM NORWOOD

Norwood, May 17.—On Friday morning the people of Norwood and vicinity will do honor to the memory of our late King Edward VII., when at 10.30 an undenominational service will be held in the town hall. All the clergy of the village will be present and Rev. Father Conway and Rev. Mr. Pickford will deliver addresses. The local members of Parliament are expected to be present and deliver addresses. The Norwood band will be in attendance and furnish suitable music.

Many of the merchants of Norwood who suffered loss in the recent fire have opened out in business again.

Mr. J. L. Squire has had the store adjoining the Agricultural school put in shape and is now open for business.

Mr. B. W. Leverett has procured one of Mr. J. Finlay's stores on Peterborough street, opposite the Methodist church and will be open for business in a day or two.

Mr. W. H. Girven has opened up in the store adjoining Mr. Liverett's and has a full stock of watches and jewellery.

Mr. D. Sedgewick has purchased the property where the King's hotel stood, together with the livery stables occupied by Mr. John Weir. It is rumored that Mr. Sedgwick intends building two stores and an implement shop.

Mr. D. N. King is preparing to go to the west where he intends to embark in business.

Mr. H. G. Buck has started a gang of men on the ruins of the Reynolds' block to pile up the unbroken bricks so that they will be available for use in building. It is not definitely stated whether the Reynolds property will be rebuilt or not, but at the present the prospect is doubtful.

Mr. Thomas Waller is offering his fine residence for sale at a bargain as he intends leaving Norwood.

Miss Maude Beavis, of Lakefield, is attending the convention here in the Presbyterian church and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing.

Miss K. Carey, of Hastings, is spending a few days with Mrs. Jas. Ryan.

Mr. Leonard Patrick spent a few days at his home in Lakefield last week.

Mrs. T. Devitt, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Patterson, for the past few weeks, left last week to spend a few weeks with relatives in Cadmus, Ont.

The ladies of the Baptist church purpose holding a "Sandal Social" at the home of Mr. John Rossbeck on Friday evening, May 20th. The Norwood band will render appropriate music. The admission fee will be two cents for every inch your foot is long.

Mrs. J. Davidson, of Drayton, and Miss Blanche Fotheringham, of Peterborough, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Lawlor last week.

The sacred concert in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening of last week was a most successful event. Master Wilfrid Morison, the famous Canadian boy soprano, delighted the audience and fully sustained his reputation. His selections were difficult but given with perfect ease and his voice is marvellous for one so young. Much credit is also due to Miss Bessie Lillie, who played his accompaniments excellently.

Services in commemoration of the twenty-first anniversary of the Epworth League will be held on Sunday and Monday, May 22nd and May 23rd in the Methodist church. Rev. S. C. Moore B. A., B.D., of Trenton, is expected to preach on Sunday and on the following Monday evening will deliver an address.

The first session of the convention of the Presbyterian church here opened this afternoon with a good attendance. Miss Campbell, missionary from India, gave a very interesting and instructive address about her work in India, amongst the Indian children.

SCHOOL TEACHER FILES CLAIM

For First Half Section of Land Taken Within 2 1-2 Miles of Kindersley

Saskatoon, Sask., May 17.—That grit and determination in a measure which few men possess are necessary to camp on the cold and uninviting doorsteps of a public building every hour for twelve days is something which no one will deny, but that is the feat accomplished by Miss Williams, a pretty young school teacher of this town. Her reward came to-day, when she filed the first claim for a section of land within two and one-half miles of the town of Kindersley, which to-day is valued at $10,000.

Miss Williams, who is a teacher in the Alexandra school here and is well known and respected throughout the town, took up her position on the doorstep of the land office building on Thursday, May 5th, and had been on the step every hour until this morning, when her plucky wait was rewarded by the filing of her claim and the hearty plaudits of her friends as she left the building.

Mr. Frank Walsh had the misfortune to lose a valuable bull last week. It got out of pasture and strayed on to the Grand Trunk track and was struck by a freight train.

The death occurred Saturday afternoon of Miss Mary Wood, of Villiers. The deceased, who was a well known and highly respected lady, was a daughter of the late James Wood, and has been a lifelong resident of this township. She was in her forty-eighth year and is survived by four brothers, James, Robert, George and Peter. The funeral was held Tuesday from the late residence of the deceased, and was largely attended. Rev. D. D. McDonald, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and of whose congregation the deceased had been a member, conducted the funeral services. Interment took place in Keene cemetery.

The death occurred Tuesday, May 10th, of Thomas Gall, one of the oldest residents of the village. The deceased had been in ill health for some months, and the end was not unexpected. He was a native of Scotland, but came to Canada at an early age and lived for some time near Roseneath, removing thence to New York State, where he resided till about fifteen years ago, when he returned to this country and took up his residence in Keene. Besides his widow he is survived by three sons, Henry and Neil, of New York State, and George, at home, and one daughter, Mary, at home. The funeral was held Thursday from the family residence and interment took place in Keene cemetery. Rev. Mr. Johnston, pastor of the Methodist church, conducted the services.

To The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, U. S. A.

Gentlemen:—Your medicine, Peruna, having been recommended to me by one of my friends in this city, I want to let you know the splendid results it has produced for me. As you will understand, a professional life, such as mine, is a heavy strain upon even the strongest constitution, and, in addition, my health was threatened by symptoms of catarrh. (See above.)

Yours very gratefully, Virginia Fabregas de Cardona.

The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co.,
Columbus, Ohio, U. S. A.

Gentlemen: Having used your justly celebrated remedy, la Peruna, for some time, I have the pleasure of informing you that I consider it the best tonic I have ever used.

It is a wonderful fortifier of the nerves after exhaustion, and it increases the vitality of the whole body, and in my own case has produced the most complete and permanent restoration. It is also pleasant to the taste.

I do not hesitate, therefore, to recommend this remedy to all women as the best and most pleasant tonic that they can possibly take.

Yours very truly,
Senorita Pilar Monterde.

Julia Marlowe Endorses Pe-ru-na.

"I am glad to write my endorsement of the great remedy, Peruna, as a nerve tonic. I do so most heartily."

Julia Marlowe.

Peruna relieves catarrh, not only by its tonic effect upon the whole system, but by eradicating the poison of catarrh. It gives better appetite, better digestion, better sleep.

Peruna is manufactured by The Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio.

LAWYER WAS SHOWN OUT

The Toronto News says:—

"Sheriff, remove that man," was the startling command of Chief Justice Meredith in the Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall this morning.

The man referred to was Barrister J. B. Mackenzie, who, regardless of warning, became argumentative and contradictory to his Lordship.

An officer advanced and the erring one was forced to betake himself from the court room.

The incident is said to be the first of its kind at Osgoode Hall.

During the 24 hours from Saturday to Sunday, 110 vessels, up and down, passed the marine reporting station in the Detroit river.

Two men and two women believed to be white slavers from Montreal, were arrested in Winnipeg, while while looking for foreign-born domestics.

ONE HUNDRED ARE KILLED BY EXPLOSION IN CUBA

Box Containing Three Thousand Pounds of Dynamite Dropped in the City of Pinar Del Rio, Demolishing a Massive Building — Mangled Remains of Inmates Hurled for a Mile.

Havana, May 19.—Two almost simultaneous explosions of dynamite, supposed to consist of 3,000 pounds, completely demolished the Rural Guard barracks in the City of Pinar Del Rio yesterday. Fully a hundred persons were killed and nearly as many were wounded.

The explosions occurred at 5 o'clock, a few seconds before the men would have quit work, and it is generally believed that the first resulted from the accidental fall of a box of dynamite which was being lifted on a wagon.

According to reports received here the mangled remains of victims were found in the streets of the city a mile away from the scene of the explosion.

Several relief trains started in the afternoon from Havana to the scene of the catastrophe, which is 108 miles distant.

The barracks was a massive building of Spanish construction and occupied an eminence in the outskirts of the city to the north.

In consequence of the alarm over race disturbances, the Government ordered all deposits of dynamite in the vicinity, in the possession of contractors for road construction and other public works, to be removed to the barracks for safekeeping. The work of removing the dynamite from the barracks for shipment to the Government magazines in Havana was begun yesterday by employes of the public works department, assisted by rural guards. They were loading cases on wagons, when an explosion occurred, instantly followed by another. The whole massive barracks building was destroyed and the whole northern section of the city was deluged with a torrent of fragments of masonry.

FIRST KING GEORGE STAMPS

London, May 19.—King George has approved the design of the first postage stamps of his reign, they being a half-cent stamp for Quebec and a five-cent stamp for Newfoundland.

Premier and Lady Morris of Newfoundland were granted the privilege of a visit to the throne room prior to the removal of King Edward's body to Westminster Hall. They took with them an exquisite wreath of cala lilies and English violets inscribed: "In grateful remembrance from Newfoundland, his oldest colony."

United States Will Mediate.

Washington, May 19.—Official assurances from Chili promising to lend influence to the mediation of the United States, Argentine and Brazil have been received by the State Department, which now feels that the mode of mediation suggested to both Ecuador and Peru provides an honorable method of avoiding a needless and destructive war.

TOM LONGBOAT GATHERED IN

Toronto, May 19.—There was an impending riot in Simcoe street at eight o'clock last night when Policeman Forbes gathered in Tom Longboat, the famous, for being drunk and disorderly.

Had it not been for the timely assistance of Tom Flanagan, proprietor of the Grand Central Hotel, near which place the arrest was made, much trouble might easily have resulted.

As it was, when the identity of Forbes' prisoner became known, a large crowd gathered to sympathize with the one-time idolized Indian runner and were only prevented by the exhortations and muscular prowess of Tom Flanagan, trainer and counsellor of the red man.

Longboat was taken to the Court street station in the patrol wagon, yelling like the noisiest of his forefathers on the warpath.

FEDERAL MINISTERS IN QUEBEC

Quebec, May 19.—Premier Laurier and four of his Ministers, Messrs. Brodeur, Graham, Lemieux and Pugsley, were in the gallery of the Legislative Assembly Tuesday night. The occasion was unique in Canadian history, as it was the first time so many Federal Cabinet Ministers had graced at one time provincial sessions.

C. M. Hays of the Grand Trunk was expected here yesterday, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and colleagues left Quebec last night, following a conference with the railway magnate.

ROBBED THE COLLECTION BOX

Halifax, May 19.—Recently the collection box in the Methodist Church at Milltown, N.S., had been repeatedly robbed. It was determined to catch the robber, and there was rigged up an automatic alarm on the box connected with Pastor Cartwright's house.

On Monday morning at 3 o'clock, the clergyman was awakened by an alarm, and hurrying to the church, he found the man emptying the box.

It is understood he will plead sleepwalking as an excuse for his offence.

Fifteen Years For Looting Bank.

Boston, May 19.—Geo. W. Coleman, after admitting yesterday that he looted the National City Bank of Cambridge of $309,000, was sentenced to 15 years in the county jail at Greenfield, Mass., by Judge Hale in the United States District Court yesterday.

Nearly Foundered.

Windsor, May 19.—The tug Follie, commanded by Capt. McCormick of Pelee Island, bound from Monroe, Mich., to Pelee Island, in Lake Erie, Tuesday afternoon, nearly foundered in the severe gale.

Woollen Mills Burned.

Georgetown, May 19.—The Sykes Woollen Mills here were destroyed by fire at 10.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The total loss is estimated at about $30,000, largely covered by insurance.

TWO STEAMERS IN COLLISION

North Sydney, N.S., May 19.—The Reid Newfoundland Co.'s steamer Invermore returned to port at three o'clock yesterday morning with her stern twisted out of shape and gaping hole in her bow, as a result of a collision with the French steam trawler Beluga of Lloyd's Cove, an hour previously, while the Government steamer Saidee lies in the bottom of the harbor near Dominion, a result of being rushed by the big trawler, which after the collision was turned shorewards.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Steel Strike Off.

South Bethlehem, Pa., May 19.—The strike of the Bethlehem Steel [illegible] progress since Feb. 4, was officially declared off yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee of the strikers in this city. The conditions, which former Congressman J. Davis Brodhead, representing the men, secured last week from President Charles M. Schwab, were unanimously adopted by the men.

Calgary, May 19.—The City Council Tuesday night signified its intention of submitting a bylaw for $150,000 to the Calgary ratepayers for the Calgary University.

MURPHY WAS ACQUITTED

Shawville Murderer is Freed by the Jury.

Bryson, Que., May 19.—Michael Murphy, who a few weeks ago at the village of Shawville shot and killed Henry Howes and William Dale, members of a party of young men who were harassing the Murphy home, was yesterday afternoon found not guilty by the jury at the Bryson assizes. The jury went out at 11.30 o'clock, after being charged by Judge Weir, who spoke against the prisoner, characterizing his conduct as brutal in the extreme. They brought in their verdict at 2.15 p.m.

Addressing the jury, when the foreman announced "Not guilty," Judge Weir said that in bringing in the verdict they did every one of them should feel ashamed. Murphy was, he said, not only a brute but a vagabond, and the stigma of shame would attach to him all through life.

The prisoner seemed indifferent, and when discharged seemed unable to realize that he was again a free man, having to be several times told to leave by the constable in charge. Mrs. Murphy's trial on the charge of inciting the deed, comes up later.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND SAW THE REMAINS

London, May 19.—Thousands of people, marching in double file on either sides of the catafalque on which rests the coffin of Edward VII., passed through Westminster Hall yesterday, and when the doors closed at ten o'clock last night there were seemingly miles of people still in line.

Throughout the afternoon Victoria Station was the scene of a constant stream of foreign representatives arriving for the funeral.

The following Canadian officers will walk in the procession: Col. Burland, Montreal; Major Thatcher, Ottawa; Major Saunders, Edmonton; Major Campbell Stewart, Montreal.

Canada will be represented at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, on Friday, by Lord Strathcona. Hon. Messrs. Aylesworth, Fisher, Marcil, and Sir Chas. Fitzpatrick, besides the Mayors of Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg.

LEADER BORDEN WAS VERY ILL

Ottawa, May 19.— R. L. Borden has been more seriously ill than was thought. The following statement has been given out by his physician: "Mr. Borden is recovering from a severe illness which suddenly attacked him on the 10th inst. He is now thoroughly convalescent and expects to be able to leave his room some time next week."

King's Plate May 24.

Toronto, May 19.—The opening day of the Woodbine meeting has been postponed until Tuesday, May 24—Victoria Day—when the King's Plate will be run. The meeting will continue until Tuesday, May 31.

One Year For Bigamy.

Cobourg, May 19.—On a charge of bigamy, William E. Herrington of Bowmanville was yesterday sentenced by Judge Benson to one year in the Central Prison. Herrington has three wives.

Raised Rate on Call Loans.

Montreal, May 19.—The Dominion Bank has followed the Traders' Bank in raising its rate on call loans from 5 to 5 1-2 per cent. in this money market.

EARTH WENT THROUGH COMET'S TAIL LAST NIGHT

Not a Hair on Any One's Head Was Singed—The Danger is Now Passed for Another Seventy-five Years — A Quebec Member Wanted to Die at Home.

Toronto, May 19.—Well, old mother earth has gone through the comet's filmy appendage, and everybody's safe for another 75 years.

And what really did happen? So far as Toronto is concerned, an unusally bright aurora appeared in the northern sky.

"At about 10.40 p.m.," said Prof. Blake, astronomer for the Dominion Meteorological Department, "the aurora was most brilliant, and contained all the colors of the rainbow. There were many streamers to it, and it had the appearance of curtains and scrollwork. For nearly an hour it was quite pronounced with streamers.

"There is no doubt the peculiar greenish tinge and the glow was caused by the earth passing through the comet's tail. There were meteor flashes also to be seen last night."

People down town were not able to see the aurora owing to the electric lights and the high buildings.

Not until an hour after sunset on Saturday evening will the comet be seen at its best. Then the evening sky will be a thing of wondrous beauty, for the comet, with its brilliant tail, should be seen clearly, and the glow and reflection from its passage through the heavens will serve to light the whole sky.

Wanted to Die at Home.

Quebec, May 19.—Halley's Comet did no damage here last night, although there was apprehension among a few. The presence of so many brilliant political stars no doubt discouraged the heavenly visitor.

Hon. M. F. Cormier of Plessissville, a member of the Legislative Council, refused to remain in the Chateau Frontenac and left on an early train for home, with the statement that if he was to die he wanted to die at home.

A group of people assembled on the [illegible] Terrace between 4 and 5 o'clock Tuesday morning and watched for the comet between prayers uttered for protection. A Bible reading was also held in the neighborhood at the same hour.

Indians Alarmed.

Winnipeg, May 19.—There is intense interest through western Canada concerning the comet. The only sections of the country which has displayed any alarm are the several reservations. For weeks the Indians have been discussing the subject, and displaying a great deal of fear. This has been allayed by their religious advisers.

Paraded With Candles.

San Juan, Porto Rico, May 19.—Fearing disastrous consequences from the comet, hundreds of Porto Ricans Tuesday night paraded the San Juan and other towns in Porto Rico, carrying candles and chanting prayers. Many of them also spent considerable time in the confessionals.

A large number of workmen failed to report yesterday at the tobacco factories and plantations and the pineapple shipments have been curtailed because the laborers have refused to work.

Took Down the Rods.

Nenah, Wis., May 19.—Fearful that the rods might attract dangerous substances that might accompany the comet yesterday, many farmers in this vicinity removed the lightning rods from their homes and barns.

Feared a Tidal Wave.

Duluth, Minn., May 19.—A temporary, general exodus took place yesterday from the Minnesota Point, a long and narrow strip of land containing the homes of several thousand people, located between the finger of Lake Superior and St. Louis Bay, reaching between Duluth and Superior, Wis.

The more timid declared that the point, situated at the apex of Lake Superior, and not more than a dozen feet above lake level, would easily be submerged should the comet, forming a vacuum on its flight, drag a tidal wave up the lake and sweep on into St. Louis bay. Therefore the timid ones came uptown yesterday and awaited developments.

Refused to Work.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 19.—A large number of miners employed by the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., near Avoca, refused to go to work yesterday, fearing that Halley's comet might strike the earth.

Caught It In Bottles.

New York, May 19.—Thousands swarmed and clustered on the high places last night to peer into the west for the incandescent tail of the receding comet. Some prayed and all watched. Nobody carried salt, but a few carried bottles into which to seal up the atmosphere for future analysis.

Spots on the Sun.

San Jose, Cal., May 19.—Prof. J. S. Rickard of Santa Clara College Meteorological Observatory informed the Associated Press that yesterday he observed two very large spots on the sun, both intensely black.

Portland, Ore., May 19.—Observers who examined the sun through powerful telescopes yesterday, report two spots on the sun.

Three Years For Perjury.

Woodstock, May 19.—Eli Parmer, the young Blandford farmer, who pleaded guilty before Magistrate Ball last week of having committed perjury at the recent high court sittings, came up in the Police Court yesterday morning and was sentenced to three years at hard labor.

This Man Saw Thirty.

St. Louis, May 19.—Solar eruptions were observed yesterday afternoon by Father Martin S. Brennon, professor of astronomy at the Kendrick Seminary. He saw thirty distinct spots on the sun. One of them he estimated at 150,000 miles in diameter.

Crops Well Advanced.

Cobourg, May 19.—A stalk of rye, completely headed with a heavy row of kernels, was picked from a field which, on the whole, is equally far matured, on the farm of Harrison Phillips, at Orland, East Northumberland.

The western branch of the Fenella Rural Telephone Co. of Haldimand Township, is being constructed, with fifteen subscribers, and more to follow. It is expected that the line will be completed this week.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The C.P.R. has let a $5,000,000 irrigation contract to James McDonnell & Co. of Vancouver.

Premier Rutherford testified in the Alberta & Great Waterways investigation at Edmonton yesterday.

Reports from Port Arthur say the recent rains have quenched the forest fires in the north country.

Harry Temple, a G.T.R. clerk at Detroit, who was arrested on a charge of embezzlement, admitted taking money from his employers, and stated that much of it had been lost in poolrooms.

Yesterday N. Pearson, an hotelkeeper of Buckhorn, 18 miles north of Peterboro, was fined for removing a still constructed for illicit purposes from L. Spry's tin shop in Peterboro to camp at Buckhorn.

L. O. L. MEETING

ELECTING A COADJUTOR

Quebec, May 19.—Yesterday's meeting of the Quebec Synod is exciting the liveliest interest in Anglican Church circles. It has been called for the purpose of electing a coadjutor to the Lord Bishop of Quebec, who is on the point of taking a long vacation in England for the benefit of his health. The bishop has contributed very liberally towards the salary of his future assistant, which it is proposed to make $4,000 a year.

The new bishop will be called Bishop of Sherbrooke and will have the right of succession to the See of Quebec. It is expected if a Quebec man is elected that the choice will be between Dean Williams and Archdeacon Balfour.

ROOSEVELT'S [illegible] HOMECOMING

New York, May 19.—"Simple and dignified" is to be Theodore Roosevelt's welcome in New York on June 18. At least that is the desire of the reception committee. Contrary to general expectations there will be no great land parade. The rough riders are the chosen few who will line up with Mr. [illegible]velt's carriage.

Aside from them there will be only a quad of mounted police, a band and the reception committee in carriages.

These changes were made necessary because of the enormous number of requests. The naval part of the program will be carried out as arranged.

MILLIONAIRE KILLED IN 'FRISCO

San Francisco, May 19.—Stepping from the elevator in his hotel while the cage was in motion, Joseph Griffin, a millionaire, of St. Thomas, Ont., was crushed to death yesterday. Mr. Griffin was 70 years of age. He was a brother of J. Y. Griffin of the Meat Packing Co. of that name of Vancouver, B.C.

St. Thomas, May 19—Joseph Griffin, who was killed in an elevator accident at San Francisco yesterday, has been a resident of this town for over 30 years. With his son Frank, he was engaged in the coal, wood and cement business, and had amassed a considerable fortune.

In addition to his son, he is survived by his widow and one daughter.

CARLETON PLACE FIRE DAMAGE

Yesterday's Conflagration Caused Loss of $150,000—Started in a Butcher Shop.

Carleton Place, Ont., May 19.—Fire broke out shortly after midnight in Cameron Bros.' butcher shop, Bridge street, and developed into a conflagration, destroying several business places, handsome residences and Zion Presbyterian Church, recently renovated at a cost of $20,000. The total loss may reach $150,000. The Masonic Hall, with Salvation Army barracks, the armories, with the outfit of the local company of the 42nd Regiment, that was in readiness for memorial day services, and the large frame skating rink are also gone, while flying embers destroyed the outbuildings of Herbert Murphy, farmer, a mile distant.

Losses and insurance are given as follows: S. McEwen, two houses, loss $8,000, insurance $3,425; Mrs. Gillies, loss $15,000, covered by insurance; Peter McDonald, loss $3,000; no insurance; Zion Presbyterian Church, loss about $45,000, insurance $16,000; Curling rink, loss $6,000, insurance $1,000; H. Sigleton, loss $10,000, insurance $3,000; Edward Wilkie, loss $6,000, insurance $2,000; Zion Presbyterian manse, loss $4,000, insurance $1,000; Mrs. Wilkie, loss $2,500, some insurance; Mrs. Steele, loss $2,100, insurance $1,000; John Gordon, loss $1,500, insurance $1,000; John MacLeod, loss $1,000, no insurance; S. Dunfield, loss $1,000, no insurance; F. Gallagher, loss $1,000, insurance not known; John McFarlane, loss $1,000; Masonic Order, loss $2,500, insurance $1,700; Miss Cameron, lost all her furniture, insurance $1,000; John McDonald, loss $7,000; insurance $3,000.

Carleton Place is 28 miles from Ottawa. It has a population of 4,500.

HIGH WINDS PLAY HAVOC

Ottawa, May 19.—If high winds, which have been tearing around Parliament Hill for the past few days, do not drop, the Parliament Buildings will present anything but a properly mourning aspect on the occasion of the funeral of King Edward on Friday. Putting on of emblems of mourning was all but completed on Tuesday morning when the wind commenced its frolic with the draperies, tearing them from the slight framework to which they were attached. Yesterday the gale blowing on the hill was so strong that scores of yards of flimsy material was soon either flying high in the air or twisted in tangled knots around the woodwork. The workmen were in despair, more particularly as it was extremely dangerous to work on high ladders in the gale. At sundown the elements had decidedly the best of the argument. The draperies on the less exposed east and west blocks have not been displaced by the wind.

PEARS FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Ottawa, May 19.—J. A. Ruddick, dairy and cold storage commissioner, received yesterday from London a case of South African pears in perfect condition. The pears were grown by the Rhodes' Fruit Farms, Ltd., Cape Colony, and were procured for Mr. Ruddick at Covent Garden on April 30, and forwarded to him in cold storage.

Mr. Ruddick believes that there are great possibilities in the shipment of Canadians pears to Great Britain. It would seem that if South African pears can be successfully shipped from that country to Canada via London, the Canadian fruit, even though it may be more delicate, should, with proper care, be carried less than half the distance without deterioration.

GUARDSMAN SHOOTS HIMSELF

London, May 19.—Captain Claude Champion de Crespigny of the Second Life Guards, a member of the Hurlingham Club polo team, that recently visited the United States, committed suicide by shooting yesterday. The captain was found, revolver in hand, seated at the roadside near King's Cliffe, in Northamptonshire, where he had been the guest of Lord Brassey.

The suicide is a son of Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny, and was 37 years old. He served with the British army in South Africa in 1899-1900 and with the West African frontier force in 1903. He was twice wounded and was twice recommended by his commanding officer for the Victoria Cross because of deeds of conspicuous gallantry.

NO BOMBARDMENT OF BLUEFIELDS

Washington, May 19.—Commander Gilmer, of the U. S. gunboat Paducah, has served notice on Gen. Irias, who is in command of the Venus, that he will not permit a bombardment of the city of Bluefields, Nicaragua, and he has also notified Gen. Estrada and Gen. Madriz that he will not permit any armed conflict within the city.

These notices were sent after Gen. Irias had given notice of his intention to bombard the city should Gen. Estrada not surrender in the meantime. Gen. Estrada, it is learned, has refused to comply with the demands for surrender.

COAL RESULTS

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it's good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact, and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

MR. PUGSLEY TO-NIGHT

Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works in the Laurier Government, is announced to speak at a banquet of the Ontario Club in Toronto this evening. The Ontario Club should have also invited Mr. Oswald S. Crocket, member of Parliament for York, N. B., to be present and tell what he knows about Mr. Pugsley's political career. Mr. Crocket could graphically describe Mr. Pugsley's railway deals as a member of the New Brunswick Government, his dredging contracts since he became a member of the Laurier Government, his sawdust wharf purchase, his relations with Mr. McAvity, of St. John, who got thirty thousand dollars for his influence with the Dominion Department of Public Works, and finally his arrangements with the Imperial Realty Company of Ottawa by which he paid an amazingly high rental for a building in Ottawa and had it lighted at nearly three times the price paid by business men in Ottawa.

The Ontario Club will not commend itself to right-thinking men in the Liberal party by doing honor to Mr. Pugsley.

BETTER STAY ON THE FARM

Very few farmers of Ontario realize how well off they are compared with city people. In estimating the income they derive from their farms they usually allow nothing for house rent and nothing for the food produced on their own farms which they consume. If they would keep an account book, putting down in it all the vegetables, fruit, poultry, eggs, milk, and other farm products they consume, charging retail city prices for them, they would get some idea of what it costs to live in the city. Many farmers sell beautiful farms and fine houses to move to Ontario cities or to the Northwest.

A correspondent of the Weekly Sun says:

"All over this province there are beautiful farm residences which, if situated in cities, would be valued higher than they now are with the hundred acres of fertile land upon which they are situated thrown in. This state of things cannot last for all time. There must come, sooner or later, an equalizing of values. Taking values as they exist, the farming class, I believe, is the wealthiest class. I think it is safe to say that 90 per cent of farmers are solvent; that 50 per cent. of these are worth upwards of $5,000; that 25 per cent. are worth upwards of $10,000, and probably 10 per cent. upwards of $25,000. I am speaking now of older Ontario. If it could be known, the amount of money on deposit in the banks by farmers, the general public, and farmers themselves, would be startled. If farmers all decided to withdraw their deposits there would be a panic. If this be true what would farmers be worth at city valuations?"

LABOR UNION AGAINST LABOR UNION

Mr. McCullough, former vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America, in a speech at Springhill, said his organization had spent over a million dollars in Nova Scotia fighting the coal companies. He did not give an estimate of the millions of dollars the Nova Scotia miners lost in wages, as the result of deserting the Provincial Workingmen's Association and joining this American organization, which failed in its fight with the coal companies, after spending over a million dollars. As a matter of fact the strike was not so much a fight with the coal companies as a fight against the long established Canadian labor organization known as the Provincial Workingmen's Association. The miners as members of the Provincial Workingmen's Association, had entered into an agreement with the coal companies. The United Mine Workers of America induced a large number of the Nova Scotia miners to leave the Provincial Workingmen's Association and then tried to make the Dominion Coal Company break its agreement with the Canadian labor organization.

The men who were fooled out of many months' wages by trusting to the big American labor organization will not derive much satisfaction from the fact that over one million dollars was spent in carrying on a useless fight for the purpose of destroying a Canadian labor organization.

HE SOBS IN THE JAIL

"McLachlan's sobs could be heard all over the jail," is the report that comes from Whitby regarding the parting of the murderer from his little daughter Monta. He had no pity for his poor wife and two children whom he deliberately murdered, but he seems to have some affection for this child, whom he spared when he murdered his other children. It may be an entirely selfish affection; he may have sobbed in cowardly pity for himself; but it is quite possible that he was really stirred by some feeling of pity for his little daughter. The most abandoned criminals generally have some good in their nature, and there may be a remnant of good in McLachlan, although his crime was one of the most revolting on record. No doubt there was a time in McLachlan's life when he would have been horrified at the suggestion that he would ever commit such a crime. He moved toward it gradually. When a married man begins to pay special attention to any other woman than his wife, or when a man married or unmarried devotes himself to another man's wife, he is moving in the same direction that McLachlan moved. He may not go so far, but there is no telling where he may end. One wrong leads to another. It is doubtful if any man or woman ever went to the devil at one jump. Men and women step gradually down the road that leads to destruction. Many a man and woman who are now loitering along the same road that McLachlan took will read of his crime with a feeling of repulsion. If they would look at themselves in the same way their own conduct would seem equally vile. The sobs of the cowardly wretch in Whitby jail should sound in the hearts of men and women who have started in the same direction, but have not yet gone too far to turn back.

SORE FEET AND CHAFED PLACES

"Zam-Buk" is best for chafed places, sore feet, or inflamed patches, caused by friction. For babies' sensitive skins it is especially adapted, because it is of purely herbal composition. Don't apply to the delicate skin of your children, either for cuts, sores or skin diseases, the crude salves made up from rancid animal oils and fats, with mineral coloring and scented matter to hide their unpleasant appearance and odor! Remember that whatever gets into the pores, gets into the blood. Stick to nature, and pure natural products. Zam-Buk is nature's own healer, and is, therefore, not only superior in purity, but also in strength. Cures where other things fail. Use it also, for piles, festering sores, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns, and every-day injuries. Every home needs it!

BUSINESS BOYS' CLASS BANQUET AT THE Y.M.C.A.

The first annual closing banquet of the Y.M.C.A. business boys' Bible class, was held last evening in the boys' parlor at the Y.M.C.A. The members of the class turned out in full force and made the banquet a grand success. The parlor was prettily decorated for the occasion with streamers loaned by J. J. Turner and Sons.

Dr. Middleton, the chairman of the boys' work, presided, and speeches were made by J. J. Thompson, Mr. J. A. Johnston, and D. W. Sharpe, the boys' secretary. Mr. Johnston spoke on the value of service in everyday life and gave the boys many helpful suggestions.

Mr. B. W. Sharpe proposed a toast to Mr. Sandford Hall, the leader of the class, who made a brief, modest reply, thanking the boys for the noble way they had rallied around him and supported the class. The evening closed with the singing of the national anthem.

PRESSURE OF LIGHT.

Reason Why the Tail of Comet Points Away From Sun.

Because the tail of a comet increases in splendor as the sun is approached and because it invariably points away from the sun, no matter where the comet may be in its orbit, it follows that some solar force more powerful than gravitation must drive matter from the head to form the tail. It is only recently that a satisfactory explanation has been found for this anomaly. An undreamed of force has been discovered to which we may attribute some of the vagaries of a comet's tail. That force is nothing less than the pressure of light.

It is rather startling to learn at this late day that the sunbeams which play upon green grass and blue water are actually pressing the earth. Yet that pressure has been so accurately measured that we know now that the earth sustains a light load of no less than 150,000 tons. Why is it that we do not see objects pushed into space by the solar effulgence? Simply because light pressure acts not so much on masses as on surfaces. The less the mass and the greater the surface the more pronounced will be the effect of light pressure.

Divide a ball of lead weighing one pound into 1,000 little balls. The total weight remains the same, but the surface has been increased. Divide each little ball again into 1,000 smaller balls. The resulting 1,000,000 balls still weigh one pound, but the surface has been enormously augmented. Carry this subdivision so far that leaden particles are obtained measuring one twenty-thousandth of an inch in diameter. Each one of these particles, if placed into interstellar space, will remain stationary because its weight (gravitation) will exactly counterbalance the light pressure of the sun. If subdivision be carried beyond that critical diameter light pressure will wrench each particle from the grip of solar gravitation and hurl it into space.—Circle Magazine.

The Beet as Food.

The beet beats all. It is one of the most valuable of cultivated plants. The sugar beet is a main source of sugar and alcohol. The large forage beets supply an excellent food for cattle, and the red garden varieties provide savory table vegetables. The usefulness of this valuable food has been increased by the production of an edible flour from sugar beets. The desiccation of sliced sugar beets is practiced in Germany on an extensive scale, but the product is employed exclusively as fodder for cattle. In Belgium a meal is made from dried beets. It is entirely free from the distinctive flavor of the beet and is suitable for cakes, puddings and pastry. As it contains about 65 per cent of sugar, it can often be substituted with advantage for sugar in somewhat larger quantities. The processes of desiccation and grinding not only cost less than the extraction of sugar, but preserve all the sugar of the beet, part of which is rejected in the form of molasses in the process of sugar making.—Chicago Tribune.

French Artisans as Soldiers.

Avoidance of military duty need not necessarily be a symptom of physical cowardice. It is frequently an essential condition of industrial self preservation. William Jones, a member of the Society of Friends, who was in France at the time of the Franco-German war, relates a typical instance. He was accosted by an artilleryman in the Loire district. "Look at my hands, monsieur," exclaimed the man. "Well," remarked Mr. Jones, "they are hard and black enough, if that is what you mean." "Precisely," was his reply. "I am a watchmaker and was a highly paid workman. "But now, after handling those big guns and heavy shells, I have lost my delicacy of touch and can never go back to my proper business. In short, I am a ruined man. There are more than 10,000 men in the army of the west alone," he added, "taken from the light trades of Paris whose case is much the same as mine."—London Chronicle.

Ant Empires.

In a recent book about ants Rev. H. C. McCook gives some surprising facts about the mound making ants of the Alleghenies. He has measured some mounds more than thirty feet in circumference, although rarely more than three feet in height. But around these there are many new mounds in course of construction only a few inches in height. They are found in groups, one of which, near Hollidaysburg, Pa., contains 1,700 mounds within a space of fifty acres. Their total population is enormous, and each group of mounds appears to constitute a community—an insect kingdom or empire. In regard to their numbers Dr. Forel is quoted as saying that these ant kingdoms have in all probability from 200,000,000 to 400,000,000 inhabitants, "all forming a single community and living together in active and friendly intercourse."

Mussels Are Wild Animals.

The county council of Lancashire, England, has found it necessary to appeal to the board of agriculture and fisheries to grant powers to prohibit the taking of mussels for human consumption from beds known to be dangerously contaminated. When the council approached the owners of the foreshore they were met by the objection, which had been upheld, that mussels were wild animals and there was no property in them until they were captured. One hundred million mussels are annually consumed in Lancashire.

Slashed Priest With Razor.

New York, May 19.—Rev. Father Angelo Bellizzi, curate of the Italian Catholic Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, in Williamsburg, was murderously attacked in Williamsburg street yesterday by an unidentified Italian, who slashed his head and face with a razor. The curate, weak from loss of blood, was removed to his home and Coroner Glinnen was summoned to take his ante-mortem. The assailant escaped. The attack is believed to have been a sequel to a christening in the parish in which Father Bellizzi officiated Tuesday night.

Death Sentence Commuted.

Washington, May 19.—Yielding to the strong sentiment in Kansas against capital punishment in that state, where a law has been passed against it, President Taft yesterday commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence upon Private Charles O'Neal of the U. S. army, who was to have been executed on the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth on May 28. O'Neal killed his sweetheart, Minnie Sharbeno, in a fit of jealous rage, and was sentenced to die by court-martial.

Will Use the Tunnel.

Montreal, May 19.—The C.P.R. has decided to use the Michigan Central tunnel under the Detroit River to get its trains from Windsor to Detroit. This will release the two large car ferries that at present take the Canadian Pacific trains from the Canadian to the American side. They will be used to transport the C.P.R. trains across the Bay of Fundy, between St. John and Digby.

Struck by Car.

Windsor, May 19.—Mrs. Tousignent of Tecumseh was struck by the W. E. & L. S. Railway car Laurier Tuesday afternoon in this city while the big suburban car was swinging around a sharp corner. The rig in which the woman was seated was overturned and the woman pitched headlong to the pavement. She will recover.

Edward Quinn, serving a term at Kingston for attempting to rob a bank messenger, was deported.

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat — no smell — no smoke.

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick — it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat — no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it — consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

HIS COURTSHIP

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

COPYRIGHT, 1907, By McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

The rest of the room—a bedchamber furnished in handsome old mahogany—was not in any way noteworthy save that there was something in its general aspect which seemed to give evidence of a higher grade of people than the Morningstars. There was nothing sufficiently grewsome about it, at least in the matter of its appointments, to suggest either a murder or a ghost. True, he felt an atmosphere of uncanniness about the place hard to account for except on the theory that his imagination, filled with the account of the deed of horror these walls had witnessed, colored the room with all the somberness of the tale.

He walked across the floor and, placing his lamp on the top of a low shelf, plunged into an examination of the bookshelves.

There were the novels of Scott, Dumas, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot and Charlotte Bronte, the tales of Poe, Macaulay's "England," Gibbon's "Rome," Carlyle's "French Revolution," the plays of Shakespeare, many of the modern English and American poets, the works of Spenser, Milton and Pope, the "Canterbury Tales" and Johnson's "Lives of the British Poets."

Taking down a volume at random, he had a vague instinctive surprise at finding no dust on it. The fact had no definite significance at the moment, but later, in the light of other developments, he recalled the circumstance.

He had soon made a mental inventory of the lower shelves. The books were in good condition, though they showed signs of having been handled considerably.

"The parents of Eunice were at least not illiterate," he concluded.

He now turned his attention to the topmost row of books, which was out of his reach. It consisted of a set of Balzac. He mounted a chair and, taking down a volume, was a little surprised to find that it was a French edition. The book was thick with dust, and its removal from the shelf had sent a little cloud of dust into his eyes. He had a passing wonder in the fact that the top shelf alone was dusty.

"Perhaps the ghost can't read French, but enjoys the English classics."

He turned the pages of the Balzac. It, too, however, showed signs of having been read, for it bore several marked passages.

Suddenly as he turned a leaf his eye fell upon, not a printed page, but a sheet of letter paper, yellow with age, closely covered with a feminine handwriting. He turned toward his lamp and read:

A CONFESSION.

I, Beatrice Daniels, make the following confession in the face of imminent death, being unable longer to live and bear the burden of my crime. My husband threatens to murder me if I confess our crime, and I myself would choose death at my own hands rather than languish in a prison, which is the fate my confession would bring upon me if I lived to face it. Therefore when this paper is found and read I shall be dead, either having taken my own life or having been murdered.

The child, Eunice—

Kinross started as at this instant his ear was suddenly caught by a faint sound in the corridor without—the sound, he thought, of an approaching light step. In a moment he had blown out his light and stepped down from his chair, folding and thrusting the paper into his pocket as he did so. One quick glance about him, and he slipped behind the high headboard of the old fashioned bed. There he waited motionless for the appearing of the spirit or whatever it was that was coming, for the sound of approaching steps on the bare wooden floor of the hall was now quite unmistakable. It was not mice either. Of that he was sure as with tense expectation he waited and listened. So there was actually some foundation for this story of the ghost? Nonsense! Old Morningstar was coming to warn him away from the room perhaps. No; the step was too light for this. Who or what would he see? Would it come into this room? If it did not he would examine the hall.

He heard the latch of the door move and the door open and close very softly. The room was in absolute darkness, so of course he could see nothing. The light step came across the room to the front of the bed, and then suddenly a match was struck (he had a hasty doubt as to whether ghosts ever found it necessary to use matches), and a faint light spread through the room.

A silence followed. There was no further movement or sound of any sort. He waited for what seemed to him a long time. At last he stooped and peeped through a crack in the headboard. His eyes were caught by the light of a candle burning on the wide top of the footboard. And seated Turk fashion on the bed, her cheeks planted on her palms, her elbows on an open volume on her lap, was a feminine figure clad in a blue calico wrapper, with two thick braids of beautiful fair hair hanging over her shoulders. Eunice! For a moment he was bewildered. Questions and suppositions fairly jumped over each other in his brain. Whether she had learned of his coming to this room and had followed him thither, why she was not fearful of the place, whether she was walking in her sleep, whether she was Eunice or the specter of Eunice's mother—

But gradually as with strained muscles he continued to stoop and gaze at her his confusion cleared to some definite impressions. She was sitting there reading as composedly and quietly as though she were not more at home anywhere in the house than here in this room. She did not appear like one who had come for the first time into a haunted bedchamber. And there was an indefinable something in her way of turning the page of a book which suggested in some subtle way that she was used to handling books and accustomed to reading much.

There was something in the girl's aspect, in her unconsciousness of an observer, in her relaxed and girlish form, in the childlike innocence and sweetness of her face, that thrilled

Seated Turk fashion on the bed.

Kinross with a sudden sense of a unique loveliness. His nerves tingled as he realized his isolation here tonight with this exquisite young creature.

He carefully raised himself from his stooping position and leaned against the wall. How was he to reveal himself without too greatly startling her? The shock or fright of suddenly beholding a man in the room when she supposed herself alone—at the hour of midnight, too—might actually injure her. Yet he must not any longer leave her unaware of his presence.

The problem solved itself by his accidentally touching the headboard at this moment with his elbow. Instantly he thought to reassure her by quietly speaking her name without abruptness.

"Eunice, it is only I. Don't be alarmed."

He stepped out into sight as he spoke. She had sprung to her feet and stood panting with alarm, her eyes wide and startled, her cheeks white.

He spoke again in a matter of fact way, calculated to disarm her fear. "I'm very sorry I've frightened you. I came here to meet the ghost. Are you it?" he smiled.

She sank limply against the bed. "I thought," she breathed, "that you were it."

At the sound of her own voice she seemed to recover herself. Her face was bright with color now, and her eyes were brilliant. He saw almost with amusement that she found no cause for alarm or displeasure at his presence.

He drew an old dusty chair to the bedside and sat down before her, folding his arms.

She leaned comfortably against the foot of the bed. Evidently she saw no objection to a midnight chat with him. She seemed to him in her innocent acceptance of the situation as ignorant of evil as an angel.

There seemed so much that he wanted to ask her that he hardly knew where to begin. But with a trifle less than her usual timidity before him she took the initiative.

"You were in this room when I came in, weren't you?" she asked, her eyes wide with wonder.

"Yes—in quest of the ghost."

"But the room was dark."

He pointed to his lamp on the bookshelf. "I blew it out when I heard you coming, thinking I was going to encounter the specter."

"You didn't know, did you, that you would—would find me here tonight?"

Again that note of wistfulness with which he was beginning to grow familiar.

"No more expected it than I expected to meet the czar of Russia."

She appeared so disappointed to hear it that he hastened to add, "It's the most delightful surprise I ever had in my life."

She beamed upon him frankly. "You are pleased?" Evidently she wanted him to repeat it.

"To say I am 'pleased' would be false. I am overjoyed."

"Why?"

He was much entertained at her venturing to put him through a catechism.

"How can you ask when for four days you have made it impossible for me to have three minutes' talk with you?"

"You have wanted to talk with me?"

Her eyes were not mournful now, but luminous with happiness.

"Haven't you wanted to talk to me?" he inquired.

"Oh!" she breathed as though her feelings were too deep for utterance.

Being a mere man, he found himself quite unable to interpret her.

"Much good it does me to want to talk to you," he said ruefully, "when I have to search you out in a haunted room at midnight in order to do it. Why do you make it so difficult?"

"I have not meant to make it difficult. Oh, no, indeed. But you know I am kept very closely at work."

"I know. But why haven't you come out to me in the evenings—to the spring house or to the terrace by the gate?"

"I think," she said, her color deepening and her eyes falling, "it wouldn't have been—maidenly."

"Well, then, at least you might be about somewhere where I could come to you."

"Abe keeps a jealous watch upon me," she said without looking up.

"Abe? Abe be hanged!"

"And then," she added, her head sinking a little lower, "I would not wish to obtrude myself when all your mind must be occupied with—with the girl you said you loved."

"What?" he asked, puzzled. "Oh, you refer to the stately Georgiana?" He laughed. "Georgiana also be—blessed, I should say. I tell you, Eunice, the one and only thing I have desired since I last talked with you has been to go on with that talk."

"Let us go on with it now," she said, a deep contentment radiating from her at his words.

"All right." He relaxed and leaned back more comfortably in his own chair, resting his forehead on his fingers and looking as complacently satisfied as she did.

"But first," she said timidly, "I would ask a promise of you."

"Yes, Eunice."

"Will you not betray to Mr. or Mrs. Morningstar that you saw me here?"

"Why don't you wish them to know?" he asked, feeling his complacency disturbed by her apparent cowardice.

"They would be very angry."

"Why need you care for that?"

"But they would stop my coming in the future. I have kept them from knowing these many years."

"These many years? You have been in the habit of coming to this room?"

"Every night for many years."

"Aha!" he exclaimed. "Then you are the ghost! The flickering light seen at the windows by passersby is your candle!"

"Yes."

"What did you come for?"

"To read."

He sat upright in his chair. "For many years you have been reading the books in this room?"

"Yes."

He stared at her for an instant spellbound with astonishment. Then he sank back in his chair, fitting together the tips of his fingers, a habit of his when trying to think things out.

"I see," he said slowly. "I see."

He asked her a question abruptly.

"Why would the Morningstars stop it if they knew?"

"They would think it made me less strong to work for them—staying up at night. You will not tell them?" she repeated anxiously.

"Of course I shall not tell—that goes without saying, child. But," he asked curiously, "were you never afraid to come here—knowing the place was haunted?"

"I had great fear. But my longing to read the books was even greater."

"Your refusal to tell me the other evening how you 'came by' the 'few books' you had read—you were afraid I might betray you?"

"Always the great dread has been upon me of having this only pleasant thing in my life taken away from me. It has made me cautious. But I would trust you now," she said with a restrained eagerness, "with any secret I had—I would trust you to—to the uttermost!"

"Thank you, Eunice," he answered gravely, an odd feeling of pleasure stirring in his heart.

He drew himself up and leaned toward the bookcase, examining in the light of his new knowledge their titles.

"So then it has been your secret reading that has made of you such an anomaly in the midst of these Morningstars. Living among them, but never of them, your real life has been spent in the world of fiction and history and poetry. Yes," he nodded, "I begin to see daylight now."

As a psychologist he felt an almost exciting interest in her as a case to be studied, with her peculiar mental equipment of a really extensive knowledge of literature, combined with an absolute ignorance of actual life, and the affectional and emotional side of her nature left utterly dormant.

"Will you tell me," she timidly urged, "whether you have been told the story of this room? I know there is a story connected with it, but it has always been kept from me."

Although Kinross held it to be an old fogy notion that a girl should be guarded from all knowledge of evil, yet he had an instinctive aversion to pouring into the ears of this childlike maiden the story of the crime which Mrs. Morningstar had related to him.

On second thoughts, however, why should he hesitate when she had nerves steady enough to meet a ghost and a will so firm that in all these years she had kept the secret of her surreptitious reading, unconsciously educating herself thereby possibly far beyond what many a girl gained from a systematic schooling? Surely the girl had "race" back of her, with her courage to face a ghost, her love of books so strong as to overcome obstacles that would have daunted any ordinary character and her native refinement of thought and instinct which he felt in her presence so keenly.

But he bethought him of another reason why he did not wish to repeat to her at once Mrs. Morningstar's tale. There was the paper he had thrust into his pocket at the sound of her step in the hall bearing that "confession." Until he had read that he would rather tell her nothing.

"Will you wait," he begged her, "and let me think it over first before I tell you what I know? Believe me," he added as he saw her look of disappointment, "that I hold your welfare sacred and that in asking you to wait I do what seems to me to be for your good."

He was surprised at the glow which irradiated her countenance at his words. She was so unused to being considered, he reflected, that a mere tone of kindness called forth all the latent brightness of her soul. Little did he dream how his words sang in her ears, "I hold your welfare sacred," and that the music of the spheres could not have seemed to her more wonderful in spite of the fact that since that night on the terrace her heart had been heavy with the knowledge that he loved Georgiana.

"I will wait," she said, an unwonted thrill in her voice that held him with its spell, "until you are ready to tell me."

A disturbing possibility had suddenly occurred to him. Surely if that "confession" amounted to anything Eunice would herself have found it out. He had supposed that he had come upon a discovery, and he felt a pang of disappointment as he realized the probability of his having been mistaken.

"Those books on the top shelf, those Balzacs," he suddenly said, "they were the only books I found dusty. Ah, of course," he added, "you don't read French; that's it!"

Then, perhaps, after all, she had never seen this paper in his breast pocket—extraordinary, indeed, if during all these years the secret of her history should have thus been within her reach and yet escaped her. A desire came to him to take it out and read it with her, but he thought better of it.

"You know nothing really of yourself—your name, your origin, your life before you were left here with the Morningstars?"

A pensive droop to her lips as she shook her head was her answer. After a moment she looked up at him, her eyes almost solemn as she spoke. "You say it is for my good that you withhold for the time what you know of this room. It is, then, as I have often suspected, bound up in some way with my life?"

He hesitated an instant. "Let us not speak of it just yet, Eunice."

"Very well," she acquiesced gently.

"I have so often wished," she added, "that, if inanimate things can really take on impressions from the lives of the people that use them and afterward give out those impressions, this place would speak to me of its history!"

It was not to be wondered at that her ideas were thus fantastic, he thought. The effect of her desultory reading upon one who lived a life as isolated from the world as a nun's and whose mind was left undisciplined by any other mental exercise was so curious as to be almost phenomenal.

"But do you know how soon you can tell me?" she asked.

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. Today I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION

Perenially Popular "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Will be of an Exceptionally High Standard This Year

Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will appear at the Grand on Tuesday, May 24th, as a special holiday attraction. No play ever written is better known in all parts of the United States to all classes of people than "Uncle Tom's Cabin," not even the plays of immortal Shakespeare, for the play of slavery has been given in every village and hamlet in this broad country. It has been played steadily and constantly for the last half century, and it has been estimated that it is being played somewhere in this land of ours on every day in the year. Even in the south it is seen. It has developed a distinctive class of players who are called "Uncle Tommers" in derision by other actors and actresses because they spend their entire time playing the characters of "Uncle Tom," But this refers to the cheaper representations of this old play. It has been given as handsome and expensive mountings as have ever been seen in any play, and as played by the Al. W. Martin company, the play leaves nothing to be desired, either in scenery or on players. A large company of negroes from the South are with the company and will be seen in plantation pastimes and festivities exactly as indulged in by the slaves of the anti-bellum times. All the old-time glees, refrains and dances will be sung with the rich plaintive voices of the southern negro-buckwing dancing, cake-walk and a "Voodoo Scene" showing the remarkable transition of the slave from the pathetic and pious to all absorbing worth will be shown. Every scene used in the six acts of the drama is carried complete by Mr. Martin. Every dramatic role both black and white being assumed by white artists of well known reputation. The role of "Uncle Tom" is in the hands of Frank Lee, the well-known minstrel star, while Sally Lee assumes the role of Topsy, the child that never was born. The company is a large one. Matinee and night. Plan opens Saturday.

HOLIDAY TRIPS, PETERBORO' TO STONEY LAKE

The Otonabee Navigation Co Ltd., will run the steamer "Manita" to Stoney Lake Ports Wednesday 18th, leaving Wolfe St. Wharf at 8 a.m., returning same evening; also the 20th at 8.00 a.m., running through to Lindsay. Passengers can return on the steamer "Water Lily" Saturday evening, which leaves Peterboro Saturday, 8.00 a.m. for Stoney Lake Points.

THE ALARMISTS FELL SHORT

In Their Predictions of the Destruction to be Wrought by Comet

The local astronomers were on the inside in the matter of comet information. They had no pessimistic forecasts to offer concerning the destruction of the earth and we're still here. Some newspapers and magazines used feature stories on the possible depredations of the far-famed member of the heavenly orbit and while they were very eagerly read, had the effect of intensely alarming the easily disturbed.

James Benson, a C.N.R. employee, was found dead in bed in a Port Hope hotel.

10 11-16 HIGH PRICE AT THE CHEESE BOARD MEETING

Twenty-five factories boarded 1,516 boxes of cheese at the first sale of the season at the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning, and the lot was cleared off at the unusually high opening price of 10 11-16c.

The president, Mr. W. C. Switzer, occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance of both buyers and salesmen. Messrs. Cook, Morton, and Gillespie divided the entire boarding between them. Prior to the sale some discussion took place on the advisability of a uniform brand for this district, and this step was decided upon.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene	75
Warminster	65
Shearer	60
Central Smith	110
Selwyn	75
Villiers	102
Warsaw	70
Westwood	80
Oakdale	56
Daisy D.	30
Lakefield	30
Pine Grove	70
King Edward	25
Maple Leaf	35
Ormonde	90
Young's Point	45
Lang	60
Indian River	35
North Dummer	30
East Emily	28
Trewern	100
Norwood	80
Fleetwood	40
Shamrock	55
Killarney	70

Mr. Cook secured first selection and at 10 11-16 purchased Shearer, Villiers, Warsaw, Westwood, Oakdale, Daisy D., Ormonde, Norwood, Killarney.

Mr. Morton, at the same figure, obtained Central Smith, Selwyn, Lakefield, Pine Grove, Maple Leaf, Young's Point, Lang, East Emily, Trewern, Fleetwood and Shamrock.

Mr. Gillespie at 10 11-16c. bought the remaining factories—Keene, Warminster, King Edward, Indian River and North Dummer.

Don't forget the Salvation Army Excursion May 24th, 1910, per Twin Screw Steamer Otonabee. First excursion of the season. Band in attendance.

HOW HALLEY'S COMET APPEARED IN 1835.

From now on look for the comet in the western sky every evening after sunset. With atmospheric conditions clear, it should be visible to the naked eye, and the spectacle may be a brilliant one.

Halley's comet attracted even more attention in 1835, the date of its last return, than it did in 1910. The Turin Academy of Science made its movements and disturbances since 1759 the subject of a prize, which was eventually won by Baron Damoiseau, after most arduous mathematical labors. Similar prizes were awarded by the Paris Academy to Pontecoulant and by the Royal Astronomical Society to Rosenberger.

The predictions of the comet's appearance made by these famous mathematicians were verified on August 6th, 1835, by the detection at Rome of a minute blur almost in the exact place where mathematics had proved that the comet might be expected. About the middle of September that little speck began to throw out a tail, and the head gleamed to the naked eye like a ruddy star, brighter than Aldebaran or Antares. The tail behaved in a most singular manner. The matter ejected from the comet's head assumed the form of a partly opened fan, which, contrary to all cometary laws, pointed toward the sun, instead of away from it, only to be swept back when a certain point had been reached. To one astronomer the comet seemed like a blazing rocket, and the fan of light, which seemed to supply the tail, swung to and fro very slowly in a period of nearly five days, like a huge pendulum of light.

Strange, indeed, was the transformation which the comet suffered. From a hazy speck it changed to a true comet, and from a comet into a star. Next it seemed like a sphere, and then like a parabola. The last man who saw it was Herschel. On May 5th, 1836, it very slowly dwindled away, just as if it were a gas flame gradually turned off.

As a general rule the tails of comets are longest when they are nearest the sun, but Halley's comet proved an exception. Just before it swung around the sun on November 16th its tail dropped off as it were, and disappeared. A new tail was not formed for more than two months. The comet changed with marvellous rapidity. On one night it seemed like a dim star without a measurable diameter. Yet two nights later it was not only measurable in diameter but brilliant. In a week its mass increased forty fold.

Altogether, the physical appearance of Halley's comet in 1835 and 1836 seems to have been most remarkable, so remarkable indeed that were the writings in which it is described not the utterances of the most distinguished astronomers of the day, we might be well inclined to doubt their veracity. For all that, the comet was disappointing from a popular standpoint. It was neither big nor dazzling. Only the professional astronomer derived any pleasure from its curious variations in magnitude and brilliancy.

To-morrow Halley's comet will be 14,300,000 miles away, nearer to us than any heavenly body ever comes, except the little planetoid, Eros, which on rare occasions approaches within 13,500,000 miles. On October 11th, 1835, Halley's comet came within 17,500,000 miles, so that, considering mere distance from the earth alone, the present apparition bears a certain resemblance to that of 1835. In 1835 the comet was farther north and more favorably placed for observation. We are somewhat better off in 1910, however, because the comet's closest approach occurs after its passage around the sun. After perihelion passage, as the swinging around the sun is called, a comet is apt to present a finer appearance than before.

The appearance of the comet in 1835 is no criterion for its splendor or its dimness in 1910. The past history of Halley's comet indicates that it is sometimes startlingly brilliant, sometimes disappointingly dim, for which reason no safe forecast of the nature of its light at the end of May, 1910 can be made.

Title for to-morrow's article: "The Vagaries of a Comet's Tail."

TWO CHARGES PROVEN HEAVY PENALTIES IMPOSED

A One Hundred Dollar Fine and Sentence of One Month in Jail, the Judgment of Magistrate Dumble on Nat. Pearson and Richard Bell.

Nathaniel Pearson, convicted of having "removed a still," fined $100 and sentenced to one month in jail.

Richard Bell pleaded guilty to having had a still in his possession, fined $100 and sentenced to one month in jail.

The above was the result of yesterday's session of the police court. In each case Magistrate Dumble imposed the minimum penalty, and the alternative was six months in jail.

The hearing of the evidence in the charge against Pearson occupied nearly five hours and considerable contradictory evidence was given. Bell, who is an old man, convicted himself when he stated that he took the still from the camp, where it was operated unsuccessfully, and brought it to Peterborough.

The law sets forth that a license must be procured to allow a person to manufacture a still, and that such still must not be removed without a permit.

The still was made by Lewis Spry at his premises on Stewart street, in May, 1909, although he did not know at the time, according to his statements, that it was an apparatus to be used for making whiskey. He made it according to verbal directions, and it was removed from his shop to Buckhorn by Nat. Pearson. According to the evidence, the suggestion that whiskey be manufactured was made in Richard Bell's room at Pearson's hotel. Later Francis Freeborn visited Peterborough and gave an order to Lewis Spry for the manufacture of the two copper articles. After they had been taken to Pearson's hotel they were removed to an old camp, where unsuccessful efforts were put forth to make the liquor. Bell then took part of the still back to Spry and it was found there by High County Constable Cochrane. Pearson and Bell were arrested and the date of the hearing was set for yesterday. The evidence given at the morning session was reported in yesterday's issue, and the afternoon's evidence and the subsequent judgment of his Worship to-day.

Two other charges, one against Pearson and one against Bell, were dropped at the consent of Mr. D. O'Connell who represented the Department of Justice.

THE AFTERNOON'S EVIDENCE.

George T. Evans, an inland revenue officer, attached to the Toronto office, said he had served for about thirty years. His duties were various, but principally he was engaged on surveys. He knew what a whiskey still was. Exhibit one was a complete still, suitable for the manufacture of spirits. Exhibit two could be used for either a receiver or a fermenting tub. He had supervised the using of the same kind of still. To all exterior appearances the exhibits had been used. The smaller one appeared to have been used for distilling.

THE DEFENCE.

Nat. Pearson said he lived at Buckhorn in the township of Harvey. He kept a boarding house, and livery. About a year ago last November Bell came to his house to board and remained for about eight months. One night in March he was called to his room. Bell, Freeborn and Haines were there. Freeborn said: "I am going to make some money." I asked in what way. Either Bell or Freeborn said they were going to make whiskey. I advised them to have nothing to do with it and left the room. That was the last conversation I had with them about the subject. Freeborn was one of my passengers when I made the trip to Peterborough. He said nothing about a still, but mentioned something about some parcels. I charged Freeborn $1.50 for the trip. Later in the day Freeborn and I drove about the city and finally stopped at a tinsmith's shop. Witness identified Mr. Spry as the man who was there. There was some dispute between Spry and Freeborn and they came out to the rig. I owed Freeborn about $27 for work done, and he asked me for some money. He had not previously told me anything about the still. I gave Spry $6.00, and he asked me if I would see that he was paid the remainder of the money, and I assented. I gave my address to Spry. I put the can, which had a covering of canvas, in the rig and drove home and backed the rig into the shed. The following day when I went to the shed the "can" was gone. This is the first occasion since that date that I have seen the "can." I did not take it out to the camp, but my team might have been used in taking it there. I often said I would like to taste home-made whiskey, but I had not made any arrangement about making whiskey with anyone.

In regard to the note which had been taken from Mr. McWilliams' office, witness said that he called at Freeborn's house while passing, and told Mrs. Freeborn that he would endorse it. He did not see whether Freeborn or his wife signed the note. He secured it about one week later. He supposed the amount was for the goods secured at Spry's. No money was owing Freeborn when the note was endorsed. The camp when the "can" was found was not on his property, and he did not know that it was being used until lately.

A PREVIOUS APPEARANCE.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said he had lived at Buckhorn for about ten years. Harvey was local option. He remembered having appeared before Magistrate Dumble, charged with violating the liquor law.

Mr. O'Connell queried the witness for some length as to his business transactions with Freeborn and in regard to the note, which had been signed by Freeborn and himself. Witness said that his actions in connection with the note was only as a result of his "good nature."

His daughter did not write the letter, as inferred by Freeborn. She was away on a visit, but he did not know where.

Richard Bell, said he lived at Buckhorn and worked with a farmer. He corroborated the statements made by the last witness in regard to the conversation in his (Bell's) room. There was nothing said about a still and he did not converse with Pearson on the subject again. Witness did not see the "can" when it was brought to Buckhorn. He did see it when it was being taken away. Pearson's team and waggon were used. Pearson was not there. Goodfellow and Freeborn were walking at the horses heads. He next saw the "can" at the camp, having gone there with Freeborn and his son. Freeborn said the apparatus wouldn't work, and when tried at this time it would not work. The material used was already at the camp. Witness said he brought the large can to Peterborough and took it to Spry.

AN OLD HAND.

To Mr. O'Connell.—Mr. O'Connell and witness grew reminiscent in whiskey deals, amidst much laughter from the court. Witness acknowledged that he had been in the "whiskey business" in the past but was very much against being dubbed the inventor of a still that wouldn't work, such as the one in court.

Witness said that Freeborn, Haines and himself had talked about making whiskey in the room, but it had not gone any further. He did not tell Freeborn to go to Spry and get a still made. He could not remember ever having given Spry instructions to make anything for him before. He knew that the apparatus was a whiskey still, when he took it back to Spry. Witness said he might have asked Spry to make an alteration to the top.

Asked if a conviction had ever been made against him, witness answered in the negaive.

THOUGHT IT A GOOD THING.

Francis Freeborn recalled in reply to Mr. O'Connell, said that it was Mr. Bell who asked Pearson to the room. Bell made the suggestion and Pearson thought it was a good thing. It was decided that all should go into the business. Bell was to make the whiskey and also give instructions as to how to make the still. Pearson knew that the apparatus was a still. It was Pearson, Goodfellow and himself, who drove out to the camp from Pearson's house.

Lewis Spry recalled said that there was no canvas put on the articles, but he couldn't say that a bag was put over the top.

To Magistrate Dumble—I had no sketch from which to make the apparatus.

TWENTY-FIVE GALLONS.

George T. Evans recalled, said that he should judge the capacity of the still to be twenty-five gallons.

It has been found necessary in order to protect the greens and fair greens of the Peterborough Golf Club Grounds, to forbid further trespassing on the premises. Hereafter the public, with the exception of members, are warned against trespassing under penalty of prosecution. 3d

SPECIAL SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S

The lesson, I Corinthians 15, 20.
Solo, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," Handel, Miss Helen Davies.
Hymn 592, "On the Resurrection Morning."
Nunc Dimittis.
Prayers and intercessions.
Benediction.
The Dead March in Saul, Handel.
Recessional hymn 412 "Brief Life is Here Our Portion."
Funeral march, Beethoven.

SERVICE WILL BE HELD AT 9.30

The memorial service at All Saints' in honor of the memory of the late King will be held to-morrow morning at 9.30 o'clock and not at 10, as announced in error in the Review. The service is being held on the Bishop's instructions.

It is not intended to interfere with the services at the Armouries.

NEWCOMBE PIANO CO. AGENCY
W. H. Ruse will be located at No. 4, Market Arcade on and after Saturday, 21st., with a select stock of Newcombe Co Pianos.

SERVICE AT ST. LUKE'S AT 9.30

The memorial service to be held at St. Luke's church on Friday in response to the wish of His Majesty King George, as far as the Church of England is concerned, will be held at 9.30 instead of 10 o'clock, so as not to interfere with the union service, the hour of which has been put at 10.30 instead of 11 o'clock.

ATTENTION! IMPORTANT
As Friday the 20th inst. has been proclaimed a general holiday, our store will be closed all day. Our customers are therefore requested to send in their fish orders early on Thursday. W. J. OKE, 376 George St. Phone 18.

THERE WAS FAINT AURORAL DISPLAY

Although the comet was not as easily visible last night as it would have been had there been a clear sky, there was a slight auroral display in the north between 9 and 11 o'clock.

Arthur Arbour, of Montreal, was drowned off St. Helen's Island.
